Group Photo of the Delegates Who Attended the Provincial Retail Merchants' Association Convention at Kingston—Taken in Front of the City Hall.

The Questions Discussed at R.M.A. Convention

Legislative Victories and Offsets Reviewed—Some Stormy Passages When Change in System of Organization Work Was Proposed — Several Papers Read and Merchants' Troubles Ventilated—Ontario Bread Act Under Fire—Convention Goes to Guelph in 1911.

Staff Correspondence.

Kingston, Ont., June 30.—Many problems affecting the retail trade of Ontario, and particularly legislative questions, were discussed here last week, June 21 and 22, at the annual convention of the provincial branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada.

Business men were present from various parts of the province including large and small centres. The attendance was more than 70—the largest in the history of the association according to those who have been at them all.

The dominant feature of the proceedings was the strenuous debating participated in throughout which held held the attention of practically everybody until the ringing down of the final curtain. Men spoke their minds freely and no little love taps were by any means passed around. So much was this the case that President B. W. Ziemann, Preston, considered it his duty on several occasions to pour oil on the troubled waters and smooth down the ruffles. This strenuosity reached its maximum during the discussion on a proposed change in the constitution regarding the system of organization and collection of fees.

Nevertheless it had the effect of holding attention until the end—everybody wanted to see what was to happen next.

The first day was devoted to preliminaries such as addresses of welcome, appointment of committees to deal with reports, receipt of resolutions, etc., and the discussion on the resolutions. The reading of papers on various retail subjects constituted the particular business of the second day.

Apart from the convention proceedings the entertainments provided for by the Kingston branch of the R. M. A. could not be excelled—they were interesting, entertaining and educative. The results bore ample testimony to their efforts which were aptly expressed by George Mills (Kingston), when he said: "This is a convention of retail merchants but on behalf of the Kingston branch, I wish to say to each delegate present that

"Whether in groceries or dry goods
RETAILERS we be,
We're altogether WHOLESALE
In our welcome to thee."

TUESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION

Visitors Warmly Welcomed.

In the afternoon the keys of the Limestone City were handed over to the delegates.

Mayor Dan Couper, who by the way is a Kingston retail grocer, welcomed the visitors. In a brief address he threw open the gates to the R.M.A. and hoped that it would continue to do things to strengthen the hands of the retailers. It was up to retailers to get together, work together for the good of all and not to envy one another.

"Gentlemen, the keys of this city are yours; go ahead and have a good time," he concluded.

C. A. MacPherson, president of the Board of Trade, added welcome words and pointed out the functions of the body he represented. The work of the Kingston section of the R.M.A. was somewhat similar to that of the Board of Trade—both were concerned with the advancement of the business interests of the city. The advantages of Kingston from a residential, educational, shipping, wholesale and manufacturing centre were also enumerated.

Geo. Mills, furrier, in furthering the welcome referred to the unanimity of all in respect to the future of Canada. Kingston was an historic spot that on its past had sent out men of brains, men of character of whom the whole country has been proud. He welcomed the visitors too as business men and hoped that they would leave the convention better able to cope with the questions affecting the retail trade of the country.

E. T. Steacy, drygoods merchant, and president of the Kingston branch of the R.M.A., deplored the condition that existed whereby retailers who were not members of the association accepted the benefits received without contributing financially to its support.

"We want to try to be the first men in our respective localities and if we only go after things together we can get them," he declared.

A Believer in Advertising.

President B. W. Ziemann (Preston), accepted the welcome. He was interested in the many advantages enumerated regarding Kingston and hinted that the city should "advertise its wares" a little more so that other people in the western parts of the province would appreciate them. "Advertise" was his advice.

"Education and commerce must go hand in hand if we are to be a great nation, and for these reasons Kingston hopes to do much for the nation," said W. F. Nickle, K.C., M.P.P., Kingston, in the course of an address extolling the advantages of his city.

Rev. A. L. Geen, druggist (Belleville), a past president of the association, claimed that the work of the R.M.A. of Canada was not to enhance prices but for the general weal of the retail business—to stamp out the wrong tendencies; to stamp out all these prize packages—the giving of something for nothing. "I believe," he declared, "that the giving of prize packages is teaching the people to steal. We are here for the general good will of all and to put business on a better basis."

He referred to a recent meeting of booksellers and stationers in Toronto where an address was given by a man who told how to get the confidence of the people, how to right wrongs, etc., and he believed that this should be the chief object of all association work.

Some delegate here passed a jocular remark about a general conception that

MAYOR DANIEL COUPER,

Kingston Grocer Who Looked After the Pleasure of the Visitors and who Took Part in the Discussions.

merchants are cheating the public and the connection between a clergyman and a merchant.

"No merchant should do a thing that a clergyman considers it wrong to do," he maintained.

"We should not envy one another but we should help one another along. There are too many petty jealousies in the business which should be eliminated."

Mayor A. M. Patterson (Brockville), drygoods merchant, second vice-president sprang a joke which was taken in good part by the Kingston retailers. On nearing the Limestone City, while coming in on the train the conductor, as conductors do, called out the name of the city—Kingston, Kingston, 'the windy city.' When the laugh subsided he talked business.

"This is a business man's convention composed of men who are doing things. We ought to be the foremost men in business to-day and we are too if we only get together and show those outside what we can do." The association was not doing the work it ought to do, but he was delighted to see such a large number present—better in his estimation than ever before. If some present were not members they were wrongly reaping the benefits derived from the work of the others.

J. A. Beaudry, Montreal, Dominion Treasurer, was the next speaker. Among other things he said:—"To uplift the moral standard in business is what we are trying to do and as a body of men we have done more than any other.

"We have gone to parliament often and we have always found the members of parliament among the best men in the country even if they did not always agree with our views.

"We have been trying to do too much with too little," he said in connection with the financial condition of the association. He believed that from this convention the members should do everything to place the association in a good financial basis.

"Unless the retail trade came together and formed a strong association so as to defend their rights the retail trade will suffer. The natural channel of distribution is from manufacturer to wholesaler, to retailer. Conditions make it more economical to place goods through this channel. He hoped that the association would never ask anything unfair to the general public and welfare of the country and that the work accomplished would be beneficial to all merchants.

Ald. R. C. Chown (Belleville), hardware merchant, first vice-president of the Retail Hardware Merchants' Association of Ontario, brought greetings from his association to the R.M.A.

It was a recognized fact that the retailers of Canada had not made such rapid progress as manufacturers, wholesalers, and farmers.

"The trend of the conditions is that profits are gradually going down and the expenses going up and the future of this association should be to work to cut down expense and increase profits."

Mr. Chown referred in general terms to benefits derived already from the hardware association which now included one-third of the hardware merchants of Ontario. He suggested that the R.M.A. appoint a committee to confer with the hardware association, for there were many things in general that could be looked after jointly.

The President's Address.

The opening address was then given by President B. W. Ziemann (Preston), merchant tailor, who briefly gave an 'account of his stewardship.' There were many things that ought to be done yet it was hardly known where to begin.

One thing accomplished was a meeting with Col. MacLean and the editors of the MacLean Trade Newspapers—the Canadian Grocer, Hardware and Metal, Dry Goods Review, Bookseller and Stationer, etc. The aims and objects of the association were discussed at some length and much good will be accomplished all through Canada by the publication of association news in these papers.

"The question of closer relationship between the Hardware Association and the R.M.A. has been discussed. It was recognized that in many respects the aims of both were identical. The matter was talked over between the two execltives and sub-committees have been appointed to look further into the question."

For the coming president and executive he asked the same support as had been given him.

Sec. E. M. Trowern then read several communications from members not able to be present. Among these were Adam Ballantyne, grocer (Hamilton), J. G. Quackenbush, grocer (Smith's Falls), Wm. H. Demaine, general merchant, (Ashworth), and others.

Criticizes Collection Laws.

Mr. Quackenbush in his letter pointed to what he considered to be an injustice to merchants in connection with the collection of accounts. His letter was as follows:

W. A. Mitchell, sec., Kingston R.M.A. —"In reference to your invitation to come to the convention, I am very sorry I cannot attend. It is at a very inconvenient time—it is payday here. I consider that it is very necessary to do something in the way of influencing the government to amend our laws to give the retailer a chance to live.

C. W. KELLY, Guelph,

Elected President for the Coming Year.

"Take the collection laws, they are designed, one would think, to make the working public dishonest. One can hardly collect an account from a man who is working by the week. A garnishee is no use as the law now stands. If you sue a man it costs as much as an average account to make him pay; then if the man 'skips' out it costs more.

"Now credit is very necessary in business both in wholesale and retail. But it is very treacherous business as you do not know when you will get caught. In all justice the man who is given goods and never pays for them is just as guilty as the man who takes them when no one is looking.

"I think the "Pure Food Laws" are a little hard on us. We cannot tell what we are buying in many cases, still we are liable to a fine if impure food is found on our premises.

"I hope you will present my views to the committee so my voice will have some weight, even if I am not with you. I hope that good will come of the convention.

"J. G. QUACKENBUSH."

Wants Prices Uniform.

The letter from the Ashworth merchant read in part:—"To the Retail Merchants Association: The writer is engaged in a small country general store business at Ashworth and has had about ten years' experience in the retail business, and, if it is not out of place, I am taking the liberty of writing to you to express some of my views.

"In the first place every one has the same right to live and to live honestly. The price to all should be uniform; the chief object should not be to accumulate money but to put it to the best use that is in our power for the good of all.

"Customers should all be treated with the same courtesy—the poor man's money is just as good as that of the rich. This should apply to all retailers great or small in dealing with the wholesale houses. No company, however large its capital, should be allowed to buy or sell goods cheaper than another when bought in car lots.

"No company, concern, or individual should be allowed to sell or send goods in a retail way into another man's country. Everyone doing business should be permanently established—no peddlers allowed. Goods so sold impoverishes that part of the country where sent to the extent of the retailer's profit besides depriving him of being able to make his honest payments when due.

"All goods should be retailed at a fair margin and prices fixed by professional arbitrators. Any merchant who undersells or cuts prices on any article to draw trade should have a fine imposed not less than $25 for the first offence and doubled thereafter.

"Goods that are of inferior quality should be labelled and marked No. 1, 2, etc., all frauds of underweighing and cheating should be punishable both to the merchant and customer. Posters should be put up in every shop to this effect.

"All adulterated foods should be kept out of the shop; goods so sent should be sent back to the manufacturer with costs.

"Stores should all be inspected to see that they are kept in a sanitary condition.

"When we are through dealing we should be able to look everyone in the face without thinking that we have robbed them of one cent.

"WM. H. DEMAINE."

Would Not Sell to Peddlers.

A general merchant forwarded to the convention the following letter which had been written to him by an Ottawa manufacturer. Its reading brought forth applause:

"This afternoon we had two Syrians come into our sample room whom we supposed had a place in the east end of the city. They bought about $115 worth for which they were prepared to pay cash. They asked us however to ship these goods to your village and on inquiry found they were simply peddlers when we refused to ship the goods or take their money. It is needless to say they were somewhat surprised and indignant when their cash would not buy our goods, but we have no inclination to interfere with our customers' trade and promptly turned the order down."

The following communication was prepared by Jno. Gilbert, grocer, (Kingston), but owing to pressure of business time did not permit him reading it:

"Years ago the individual merchant was obliged to make a personal fight against innovations injurious to his welfare, but alas he only met failure at every step. Later on little associations of different branches of trade were formed for mutual benefit and protection and good results followed. Dead beats were cornered, peddlers' ranks broken into, less price cutting, early closing by-laws enacted, and a general good-will and feeling towards each other resulted. But the novelty wore out. Meetings were badly attended, and gradually the associations became a thing of the past. But the good seed sown began to germinate and soon a strong feeling began to grow for a general association taking in all branches of legitimate trade with headquarters at Toronto and named: "The Dominion Retail Merchants' Association." They were fortunate in securing a secretary who has worked night and day to make the association a success and whose sword is ever drawn in defence of the retail trade and ever ready to plunge it into the enemy. Our president was well chosen. He carries weight and in a few words, he is just the man we want, a Wellington to fight under, a king to do his duty.

"All trades have their individual grievances, and all members should be interested, not only in what affects their own interests but in a general sense. One of our worst evils is the peddler nuisance. Peddlers travel from door to door selling their wares generally without license. They pay little or no taxes, they wear out our roads, they enjoy privileges which retailers pay dear for, and they seem to be pets of our city councils. Not one peddler's license was taken out in our city last year.

"Disease is often spread and carried from one house to another by these pirates of trade, and when fevers and smallpox break out, our noble St. Lawrence and Lake Ontario are blamed, and our children have to suffer and carry mutilated, tatooed arms for life. The peddler's by-law badly needs amending. All merchants carrying on a peddling business should be classed as peddlers and pay the license fee, for at present peddlers start small stores simply to avoid paying the usual tax. City officials are very lax, and will not force the peddlers to pay up no matter what by-laws are passed by city councils, and this is just what our association should attend to. It is simply time wasted getting by-laws passed unless men are appointed who will see that they are enforced regardless of creed or politics. Our police department is an almost useless institution. The individual policeman is not to blame, its the way the concern is managed.

"Another iniquity our Government presses upon us is the fee charged on weights and measures. It is simply a farce, and still another is the fining of retailers for goods put up by manufacturers as pure and which turn out to be adulterated. Why should the retailer be punished when he is innocent, and the manufacturer who is guilty go free? What encouragement does our Government give the retailer to fight the adulterated food conditions? None. They say, 'send us down five cents worth of pepper and we will soak you eight or ten dollars for analysis; our analysist can tell at a glance how many peas are in an ounce of pepper, we need the money to pay all these high salaried gentlemen,'—hence our big fines.—Instead of the three men lately fined $10 each for adulterated pepper, which they bought as pure, two of them had to put up $24 and the third $39. Now they have to resort to measures to prove their innocence and make claims on the manufacturer who put up the stuff. The retailer gets all the abuse and injury to his name and business owing to the silly way the Government has of doing things."

The Secretary's Report.

The following report was read by secretary E. M. Trowern:

"Eleven years have passed away since we first held our Ontario Provincial Convention. Whatever hopes we had at that time very few of us anticipated that we would have had such a long and continuous journey to take before reaching the point that we have arrived at to-day. But the difficulties that we have overcome may possibly be the means of strengthening our purpose and give us a new determination now that we have arrived only at the point, where had we been when we started, I sincerely believe that very few retail merchants would be outside of our organization to-day.

"As you are all aware when the question of organization is presented to the average retail merchant, his mind naturally dwells on his own trade troubles. He will ask you at once, what is the purpose for which you are organized? and, what benefit will I receive out of it? There are two natural questions. Had we told him that our purpose was to discontinue handling any line of goods that were placed by the manufacturers into the hands of price cutters, and that we were going to endeavor to secure a fair living profit on all goods that we handle, and we were going to have a sytematic plan of notifying every member of our association weekly or monthly not to handle certain goods of certain manufacturers who had no interest in the retail trade beyond the desire to sell to any or all of them no matter whether they were trade pirates or not; had we told them these things eleven years ago, and had we been in a position to deliver the promise, I venture to say that instead of having scores at our conventions, we would have them by thousands. Had we been prophets and told them on the other hand that we would have to wait for eleven long years before we were rescued out of bondage and before we received a special Act of Parliament in the form of a Dominion Charter, together with the Combines and Investigation Act, to enable us to do what we can do to-day, I am afraid that the record of this convention would never have been told.

"Thanks, however, to the faithfulness and persistence of the few who have stood loyally by the executive officers who have been entrusted with the guidance of the ship, to-day we have arrived in port and we are preparing with a new cargo to sail off in the direction of the harbor that every retail merchant has been longing to reach since we gathered in our first convention. The past therefore must not be lightly regarded, and the future of our association is what we make it.

"Needless to tell you that, having in view the immense importance of securing our Dominion Charter, and seeing it within sight, I have been bending every effort this year in the direction of assisting our Dominion Board to secure it. This, together with the guarding of our interests against the introduction of Co-operative Legislation into Canada, which I am pleased to say we prevented, has taken up considerable of my time, otherwise I would have a more extensive report to make to you of the progress of our organization work throughout the Province. Since our last convention, however, a number of resolutions that were passed at that meeting have received my attention.

"In reference to the resolution in regard to the publication of school books by the T. Eaton Co., I waited upon the Minister of Education several times and pointed out to him the objections raised by the merchants, and I am of the opinion that our resolution had the effect of calling public attention to the matter, and so much so that when the school book tender was advertised in Manitoba, we were requested to send up two representatives and visit the merchants and explain to them the conditions under which the school books tender of the Province of Ontario was granted. The representatives of our association went up and the result was that the tender was awarded to legitimate publishers and not to departmental stores.

"The resolution, known as No. 5 of last year, in which we requested the Government that when they form commissions of enquiry that they place upon the same only those persons who are familiar with the subject about to be investigated. This resolution was forwarded to the Government, and following our advice they requested a special committee from the milk dealers' section to submit to them a recommendation for the improvement of the milk supply which they did, and which is fully embodied and set out in the printed report of the Government Milk Commission. The resolution also passed at the last convention regarding legislation for Embalmers has received our careful attention and we have had a great number of interviews with the Government on the subject, and we have now a bill prepared which I think will receive the commendation of every embalmer in Ontario, and become law during the next session.

"Regarding the resolution in reference to the attitude of some trade papers toward our method of organization, the committee that was appointed to wait upon one publisher did so and upon a recent interview by the president and secretary of this board, we were assured the hearty co-operation of the same.

To Confer With Wholesalers.

"The resolution that recommended the closer co-operation between the wholesale and the retail trade has had fruitful results inasmuch as a joint committee has been arranged between the wholesale grocers and the retail grocers section of our association, and as soon as the summer vacation is over, active work will take place.

"As provincial secretary and as representing the retail trade, I have had the honor of receiving a number of invitations from wholesale associations to address their meetings during the year, all of which points toward a better understanding between the wholesaler and the retailer, which must result in great good to both.

"Various conferences have been held with the master bakers concerning the amendment to the act respecting the sale and manufacture of bread. The act last amended was opposed by our association as we consider that it is not in the best interests of the baker, the retailer, or the consumer.

"As will be shown by the financial report, no new branches have been formed during the year. The financial results from those visited was small, owing to the membership fee being too small for practical purposes. At the last meeting of the Dominion Board, the fee, as you are all aware, was increased so as not to be lower than $5 per annum. Since the increase in the membership fee we have had no organizers in the field, as the provincial officers thought that it would be better to arrange for district organizers and, pending the securing of our charter when these organizers can do better work, we allowed the matter to remain over, but it will now be pressed forward vigorously.

B. W. ZIEMANN, Preston,

Past-President, Who Presided at the Convention.

"In the past, as you are aware, I have occupied a three-fold position—that of secretary for the Dominion, the Province and the Toronto branch. Finding that I had too much to attend to, I resigned the position of secretary of the Toronto Board on March 29, at the regular annual meeting, and this now gives me an opportunity of devoting my entire time to Provincial and Dominion work, and from the indications during the past two months, it will be seen that there is now every indication that very much more good work will be done for the Province in the future.

I shall not refer here to the necessity of organizing in a proper manner as that subject is fully dealt with by me in a paper to be read later, but I trust that what has been done, considering how it had to be done, will be fully appreciated by the members and that they will let whatever effort they may put forth to critize the past be put into new life and energy for laying plans and suggestions for the future and above all things what is most desired is good-fellowship and good-will. I am pleased to say that in our provincial board the very best harmony prevails among its officers and members, and not one discordant note has yet been sounded, altogether owing to the fact that those engaged in our work, fully realize the ability, the zeal and the desires of each, and all having the same aims and objects in view, and with this harmony and forbearance and with the continued zeal of the past, I sincerely trust that since we have now arrived at the gateway, next year will find us in the temple occupying the places that we have won by much patience, much perseverance and much tribulation.

"Before closing I desire to especially mention the great assistance that has been rendered me in my work by our worthy president and treasurer. Our president has proven himself to be a wise counsellor and a true friend, calm in his disposition, clean in his judgment, and strictly honest in his intentions and convictions, and from the manner in which he has conducted the duty alloted to him, it is not surprising that he received the confidence of his towns-people and was elected as their aldermanic candidate. As to our treasurer, M. Moyer, he has proved himself to be one of the great props and stays of the association in the hour of its greatest need, and his services will always be remembered by the members and especially by myself. To all the officers and members, I desire to also thank for the assistance you have given me during the year."

How Report Was Dealt With.

The secretary's report was handed over to a special committee and later in the session the following comments were read by H. Watters, druggist, (Ottawa), the chairman :

"Your special committee appointed to consider report of the secretary begs to recommend that it be received and adopted, and that a hearty vote of thanks be tendered him for his energy and zeal in promoting the interest and welfare of the association.

"We would especially note the valuable powers secured in the act of incorporation by the Dominion Parliament, and also the highly significant and advantageous privileges imparted in the enactment of the Combines and Investigation Act, empowering your association to undertake the objects of price adjustment in a legal manner.

"We are pleased to know that the relations existing between the association and the trade papers continues of the most pleasant character.

"Also that the influence of our association is becoming felt among the better class of citizens and we note with pleasure that the services of our secretary are frequently sought to deal with questions touching on the relationship between the manufacturing, jobbing and retail trade.

"Also that the best harmony prevails among all branches of our association and we would commend this happy situation as evidence of the interest taken in its work.

"We note with pleasure the intention to resume organization work and earnestly hope this may largely increase the membership and funds of the association.

"We beg to express the conviction that the apparently long and uphill efforts that have characterized the development of our association, are amply justified and compensated in the splendid results of these efforts as specified in the secretary's report.

"We feel that we cannot allow the opportunity to escape to emphasize the splendid services brought to the duties of your executive by President Ziemann, Treasurer Moyer and Secretary Trowern, and Dominion Treasurer Beaudry, and we recommend their services to the commendation of your body.

"We would earnestly urge all members of our association to acquaint

A. M. PATTERSON, Brockville,

First Vice-President until the Next Convention.

themselves with the fruitful results of work accomplished and prepare themselves to promote interest in the rank and file of the retail trade by instructing them in this regard."

Report of Treasurer.

When Treasurer M. Moyer was called upon to read his report he was greeted by "cheers for the greatest financier in Canada."

He announced a surplus of $303.16 in the bank, to the credit of the provincial board as well as an additional 45 cents cash on hand. The receipts included $43.94, as balance from last year, $597.29 as members fees, $772 special subscriptions, and a loan of $60 by the treasurer for expenses to Ottawa to "save the charter."

Provincial Legislation.

The reports of committee on the various resolutions were then submitted. "Provincial Legislation" came first, H. Occomore, hardware merchant (Guelph), being the chairman. The first resolution read :

"That it is the opinion of the members of this convention that the Ontario Government should make provision so as to give more care and attention to the Commerial Legislation that is constantly coming before them."

The committee amended it so as to read as follows :

"That it is the opinion of the members of this convention that the Ontario Government should make provision by establishing a bureau for the purpose of gathering information as to methods of trading in other centres, so as to give more care and attention to the Commercial Legislation that is constantly coming before them."

This was adopted as amended.

Bread Act a Puzzle.

The next resolution dealt with by Mr. Occomore's committee was that referring to the recent Ontario Bread Act. There were no bakers present and as the committee was not familiar with the situation they neither approved of or rejected the resolution, which read :

"That the retail merchants and bread manufacturers of the Province of Ontario were unjustly dealt with in the recent enactment of the Provincial Parliament, in that it is apparent that those who have their capital invested in the manufacture of bread, and whose experience would give them the better knowledge of the demands of the bread-purchasing public, were not consulted in the framing of the law. Further from our view-point we feel that time will work the remedy, and that eventually the bread business principle of commercial liberty will be granted to this important industry of the manufacture of bread. Again it is felt by the retail merchants and bread manufacturers that the legislators do not realize the magnitude and importance of the modern bread industry, nor do they seem to appreciate the disturance created by the constant change of the law to this industry. Moreover, we are at a loss to understand why the bread industry is selected for periodical law-making attacks, or why the same law that governs a yard measure or a foot rule, or a pound avoirdupois or its multiple, should not govern the weight and sale of bread so long as that weight is properly shown upon the article sold."

The secretary explained that, according to the new act which comes into effect after July 1, no baker could make a loaf to weigh more or less than 12 oz., 24 oz. or 36 oz. There must be a standard weight.

He maintained that any baker should be allowed to make any sized loaf he wishes if he places the weight on it.

Then commenced a heated discussion with much opposition to the resolution. W. H. Dyde, grocer (Kingston), was against the resolution. "There should be a standard weight," he maintained.

Sec. Trowern—"If we want a 13 oz. loaf we should be able to get it ; we should not be restricted." He claimed that if a Toronto baker wanted to make a 13 oz. loaf to sell in Owen Sound to compete with Owen Sound bread manufacturers who made a smaller loaf, he was not at liberty to do it.

Rev. A. L. Geen, druggist (Belleville)—"That's just what we want to prevent—merchants in Toronto selling outside of Toronto."

C. W. Kelly, musical instruments (Guelph)—"The Ontario government is doing things along the lines that the R. M. A. thinks right."

Geo. Mills, furrier, (Kingston)—"It's a good thing to have a uniform loaf; but I think the government made a serious mistake in not consulting the bread makers." There was a Kingston baker, he said, who spent $60 to $75 to change size of his bread pans.

Several members stated that it was in error to say that the bread manufacturers were not consulted by the Ontario government.

After a lengthy discussion R. H. Toye, a Kingston bread manufacturer, was given a hurry call but as he had not heard the discussion he could not express an opinion. The question was referred back to the committee with Mr. Toye's name added and later in the day it was decided to throw out the resolution.

Female Work in Shops.

The next resolution considered by the same committee was one in respect to the Act referring to hours of work for females in stores, etc. It was:

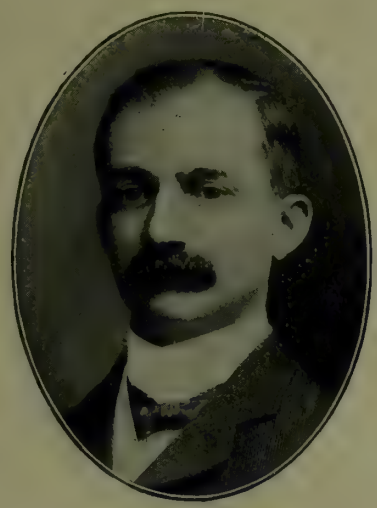
> "That it is the opinion of this convention that "The Ontario Act Respecting Shops and places other than Factories" should be amended so as to specify the number of hours per week that female help can be employed in shops, and not fix the hour as it is at present, making it illegal, for any merchant to employ a woman later than 6 o'clock on any week day and all days other than before public holidays or Saturday nights. We also believe that it is not in the best interests of the community or of the merchants that this Act should be under the supervision of the Department of Labor, but that it should be under the direction of a Department of Commerce, and we further strongly urge that the executive be instructed to endeavor to secure an amendment of this Act during the next Session of the Ontario Legislature."

H. Occomore, the chairman, moved the adoption of the report.

Exception was taken to it by J. A. MacIntosh, grocer (Hamilton). He did not think it was a question for the R. M.A. to consider.

It was claimed by M. Moyer and E. M. Trowern that as the present law stands no merchant can employ a woman to work in his store before 7 a.m. or after 6 p.m. They considered that it was alright to fix the number of working hours in the twenty-four or in a week but not to fix the time. It was impossible, they said, for restaurant proprietors or for merchants who kept restaurants to comply with this law and carry on their business. "Labor people should keep their hands away from commercial legislation," declared Mr. Trowern.

H. W. Newman, electric supplies (Kingston), thought the law as it stands to be a good one with the exception of confectioners, restaurants and hotels.



Geo. E. Gibbard, druggist (Toronto), favored the resolution as did A. D. Westman, hardware merchant (Chatham), and it eventually carried.

Transient Traders' Act.

Mr. Occomore's committee dealt also with the following resolution:

> "That it is the opinion of this convention that every effort should be made by the executive officers to endeavor to have such amendments made to the Pedlars' and Transient Traders' Act as will safeguard the interests of the merchants and prevent peddlers and others from taking away the trade of the cities and towns that properly belongs to the merchants who pay a large share of the taxation and who are a convenience to the buying public. We believe that this subject is of so much importance that every effort should be put forth to secure it at once."

The chairman in submitting the report stated that this was a question that

E. M. TROWERN, Toronto,

Re-elected Secretary, and who Read Two Papers.

was being brought up so often from time to time that something active should be done and his committee recommended a committee of three members of the Toronto branch as a central board with three from outside Toronto to go into the question thoroughly and to bring in a report to the executive at an early date.

H. C. Ellis, grocer (Ottawa), suggested that the committee when named get information from outside places where the laws respecting peddlers are good. There was always some loop hole, in the law—confliction with the market by-laws, etc.—for the peddler to escape. The committee should be prepared to draft a plan so as to get an act to serve all towns and cities in Ontario. It was something for which merchants everywhere had been crying out and the assistance of everybody was required.

President Ziemann (Preston)—"The smaller towns and villages are the chief sufferers and particularly from those sent out by the larger stores."

Organizer J. Impey (Toronto), and the secretary referred to benefits good results re the peddlers' law would bring in getting new members but Mr. Ellis contended this. He looked upon any good results not for the purpose of assisting organization work but because the principle was right. "If we do right we will advance our interests more than anything would," he added.

The committee appointed to take up the matter was Geo. E. Gibbard, druggist, F. J. Holloway and F. C. Higgins, grocers (Toronto), as central board and H. C. Ellis, grocer (Ottawa), Jno. Gilbert, grocer (Kingston), and T. A. Rutherford, drygoods merchant (Galt).

At this juncture Mayor Dan Couper announced that the Street Railway Co. had consented to take the delegates out to the penitentiary the following morning and that the governor had offered to show them the interior. As some countenances looked worried to "Dan" he reassured them by remarking: "He'll get you out again all right."

The following resolution was approved of and carried without discussion:

> "That it is the opinion of this convention that it will be in the best interests of the commerce of Ontario if the Ontario Government would adopt the policy of issuing certificates qualifying those who are engaged in any commercial business, the technical part of which is professional, such as embalmers, opticians, and others of a similar character."

Down on Co-operative Bill.

H. Watters, druggist (Ottawa), chairman of committee on Dominion Legislation, dealt with several resolutions. One was:

> "That this convention places itself again upon record as being strongly opposed to the Co-operative Societies' Bill which was introduced at the last session of the Dominion House, and we desire to tender our hearty thanks to the officers of the Dominion Board for the active efforts they made in having the same defeated."

This was approved of with the additional suggestion that "it is expedient that the time of parliament should not be taken up with unnecessary legislation.

A. M. Patterson, drygoods merchant (Brockville), was opposed to the Co-operative Bill. It was a great move on the part of promoters and if successful would be as bad as the trading stamps or worse.

Favor Secret Commissions Act.

A resolution was submitted in reference to the Secret Commissions Act as follows:

> "That this convention places itself on record as being strongly in favor of the Secret Commission's Act which was passed by the Dominion Government, and we would request the Dominion Board to place a copy of the provisions of the Act in the hands of all the members and request them to call their clerks' and employes' attention to the same."

The committee approved of it and recommended "that steps be taken to enforce the Act by this association."

Other resolutions approved of by H. Watters' committee and endorsed by the convention were:

"That we express our hearty appreciation of the active efforts put forth by the officers of the Dominion Board in securing a Dominion Charter for our Association."

"That this convention assembled desire to tender a very hearty vote of thanks to Honore Gervais, M.P., for the active interest that he took in advocating the just claims of the retail merchants of the Dominion, and endeavoring to secure such legislation as will benefit commerce and the consuming public of Canada, and we request the secretary to forward a copy of this resolution to him."

Want Space Distributed Better.

E. T. Steacy, drygoods merchant (Kingston), was the next committee chairman to report. The following resolution was approved of and endorsed by the convention :

"That it is the opinion of the members of the Provincial Retail Merchants' Association of Canada that the space allotted in the Canadian National Exhibition should be as far as possible distributed to as many competing firms as possible, so as to give a greater variety of exhibits, and not to have the name of one firm overshadow the others who are equally deserving."

Free Gifts Discountenanced.

The next resolution was also approved of and endorsed. It read :

"That we again place ourselves on record as being strongly opposed to all such schemes as free gifts with the purchase of goods, prizes in packages, or any device that will act in the form of a bribe to customers in the purchasing of goods, and we request that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Dominion Board, asking them to place a copy of this resolution in the hands of all manufacturers or dealers who adopt this practice."

Mr. Steacy's committee approved of the following resolution and it was carried unanimously :

"That we desire to place ourselves upon record as being strongly opposed to any system or plan that endeavors to destroy individual effort in Trade and Commerce, and inasmuch as Co-operative Societies are endeavoring to eliminate private traders through a false system of economics that we desire to call public attention to this fact and to point out that they are the enemies of the community inasmuch as their principles are to destroy the individual and to secure a public monopoly for themselves that will be injurious to the best interests of organized society."

Geo. Mills, furrier (Kingston), said that this matter had been brought up at one of their branch meetings and the conclusion was reached that the less said about co-operative stores and departmental stores the better. It was only giving them additional advertising.

Mr. Steacy admitted that such was quite true so far as the general public is concerned and explained that the report would not reach the public.

Secretary Trowern said that the provincial board had sent out pamphlets among many of the general public interested in co-operative societies and that they had accomplished good results. This matter, he added, was to be attended to entirely by the provincial board.

Contract Selling Plan.

The resolution in reference to the above read :

"That we desire to again place ourselves on record as being strongly in favor of the price contract plan for selling staple lines of merchandise, and we urge upon all retail merchants to make a special effort to assist those manufacturers who adopt the plan."

In approving of this Mr. Steacy said that there was only one of the committee who opposed it and "he is an out and out free trader."

"We are masters of the situation if we are true to ourselves," he said in reference to co-operative societies and mail order houses. "If we give the proper service we need not be afraid of them ; if they come in under regular lines we cannot stop them and I'm not afraid of them—but they shouldn't get special favors."

The resolution was endorsed.

TUESDAY NIGHT SESSION

Claim Milk Bottle Combine.

The remainder of the committees reported when the session was resumed on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

R. W. Dockeray, Toronto, seconded by Geo. E. Gibbard, Toronto, moved a resolution that the government be asked to allow the importation of milk-bottles free of duty, until those Canadian glass manufacturing firms, whom they alleged were a combine, had made an adjustment of their prices. Comparison of prices were submitted comparing Canadian and U.S. figures.

A. M. Patterson, drygoods (Brockville), claimed that if the R.M.A. asked the government to do this it would be made 'the laughing stock of the country.'

R. N. Thurtell, druggist (Ingersoll), held the same view.

Mr. Gibbard said that such could scarcely be the case since the government had formed the new Combines Act for this very purpose—to re-adjust the duty if a combine is shown to exist and also to impose a fine so long as the companies continue to do business after the combine is proven to exist.

The convention, however, did not care to take the step of asking the government to cancel the duty on milk-bottles. First, a combine would have to be proven it was claimed. The matter was left in the hands of the executive to be taken up with the glass companies.

J. C. Van Camp, undertaker (Toronto), read the following resolutions which were endorsed :

"That we endorse the legislation as proposed by the Undertakers' Section of our Association for the proper embalming of bodies."

"That we endorse the proposed legislation of the Opticians' Section of our Association which asks the government to issue certificates to all qualified opticians so that the public can be protected against those persons who practice optemetry without proper qualifications."

Some "Stormy Weather" Next.

It was when the question of the system of organization came up that the real heated discussion occurred.

Rev. A. L. Geen, druggist (Belleville), was the chairman of the committee who had in charge these two resolutions :

"That this meeting endorse the action of the Dominion Board in amending the constitution so as to make the minimum fee not less than five dollars ($5) per member per annum, and we recommend the Dominion Board to so amend the constitution that it will be applicable and operative under the Dominion Charter secured at the last session of the Dominion Parliament."

"That we believe that it will be in the best interests of the association to have the organization work of every branch under the direct supervision of the provincial board, and that the constitution be so amended as to make provision for this and to strike out Section 7 of Article 9, and that this be a recommendation to the Dominion Board to that effect."

The second of the two was the butt of the chief remarks of the opposition.

H. C. Ellis, grocer (Ottawa), referring to the proposed amending of the constitution said : "I think it is unwise to change that section for there are some good branches that do collect their own fees. It is not business nor wise to spend $1 in sending out an organizer to collect $2 if it can be done for 10 cents. In Ottawa we pass drafts and they are seldom returned ; if they are we try to again interest those who refuse to pay in our association work."

E. M. Trowern said there were some sections which never collect and if there wasn't an organizer out they didn't get the money.

H. Occomore, hardware merchant (Guelph)—"I beg to differ with the secretary—we have done better work in Guelph without an organizer."

C. W. Kelly (Guelph), made a similar statement in an emphatic manner and the discussion began to wax warm.

Pres. Ziemann's silvery voice tried to still the tide by remarking that the matter should be considered from various standpoints, but without success.

Geo. E. Gilbert suggested that the constitution be changed to read: "That there be an organizer sent out to help the sections which require one."

The secretary then cited the amounts of money that had been secured from some of the branches—"$18 from Ingersoll, $27 from Ottawa and nothing from Guelph," with an emphasis on the the 'nothing.'

Where Money Was Going.

This made Harry Occomore and vice-president Kelly get hot under the collars and fidgety in their seats.

"We want to know what is being done with our money—we have got our membership worked up and we have the money ready now in the bank when we know where it is going," replied the former.

A. M. Patterson, drygoods (Brockville), was in favor of the organizers sent out by the provincial board collecting the fees. "If one of us tried to collect the money he would get the merry-ha-ha; we want our association to be run on a good sound footing—we don't want it run on a cheap basis. Our secretary has been working like a horse down at Ottawa and hasn't been properly remunerated for it."

Again did the president lift his voice to straighten out the kinks. "Let us be bigger men," he said. "Let us be big enough to see the merit in the different propositions and to seek out the best for the whole."

M. Moyer (Toronto)—"Lots of branches never gave us a dollar."

F. J. Hoag, druggist (Kingston)—"The great difference is due to the fact that we have not been a unit in the past; we should adopt a general plan and conform to it."

Geo. E. Gibbard—"Get the organizer and let the branch ask for him if he is wanted."

H. C. Ellis, grocer (Ottawa)—"I think the clause in the constitution should be left as it was. I don't think for a moment that because we can collect our own fees that other branches shouldn't have an organizer if they want one, but there is no sense in spending a dollar when 10 cents will do.

"When men write in wanting to know what their money is for they have a right to know."

Mr. Ellis moved that the report be sent back for further consideration.

Rev. A. L. Geen (Belleville)—"Are we willing to pay the $5 fee imposed by the Dominion Board?"

While personally he was agreeable he had found several members in Belleville who declined and the membership of this branch had been cut down. He did not think they could get the $5.

Some one again suggested that the committee go into the question again.

"If any section wants to collect its own dues let it do so and let the constitution stand as it is," was H. C. Ellis' parting shot.

J. A. MacIntosh, grocer (Hamilton), moved that a committee be appointed to bring in a resolution to-morrow (Wednesday), at 1 o'clock 'to suit all the members.'

The last five words produced much laughter. It was finally referred back to Rev. A. L. Geen's committee.

Shall Know Each Other Better.

Geo. Mills (Kingston), suggested that before the session closed for the night they should all sing, "We shall know each other better when the mists have rolled away" (Cheers).

WEDNESDAY MORNING SESSION.

On resuming business on Wednesday morning the secretary read the report of the committee, to which the resolution re the proposed change in the constitution had been referred back. Rev. A. L. Geen, who was the chairman of this committee, had previously left for Belleville.

The recommendation was that the provincial Board employ organizers to be at the disposal of the various branches, but if any districts wanted to collect their own fees that they be given the privilege.

That would leave Section 7 of Article 9 as it was with the exception of a change in the fee which had been charged by the Dominion Board to $5.

F. J. Hoag, (Kingston), objected to the payment of a $5 fee on the grounds that it would curtail membership. It was pointed that the $5 fee was to be divided as follows: $1.25 to the organizer; $1.50 to the branch, $1.25 to the Provincial Board and $1 to the Dominion Board.

C. W. Kelly, (Guelph), thought the best thing to do was to pass the resolution and see whether the $5 cannot be secured.

J. A. MacIntosh, grocer, (Hamilton), moved that where there are no organizers that the fee charged be $3—75 cents for the local branch and $2.25 to the Provincial Board, $1 of which shall be passed on to the Dominion Board. When there was no organizer the fee was too high, he claimed.

President Ziemann claimed that such a thing would tie up the board in the matter of sending out organizers.

H. C. Ellis, grocer, (Ottawa), said: "The whole question is whether we are going to get value for our money or not. I think we should endorse this resolution and give it a trial for $1 year. We have found the $2 fee inadequate. The great trouble is many merchants don't see where they get the value of their money and when they are educated to this there will not be much trouvle in getting $5. We may not get as many members, as we have had, but we will place the financial standing of the association on a better basis. We should therefore, as Mr. Kelly has poioted out, give the $5 fee a fair trial.

"Surely, as business men, we can spare at least $5 for this association. I think we should adopt this resolution and I'm going back to Ottawa to work hard for the $5."

J. A. MacIntosh, (Hamilton), claimed that there were the 90 p.c. of the men in the trade which they wanted to get in and if the fee were $5 that couldn't be brought about.

The President said that unless the board got the money they couldn't send out organizers to get the other 90 per cent.

The resolution finally carried with some objectors.

A resolution was moved by A. B. Carscallen, general merchant, (Tamworth) and J. A. MacIntosh, grocer, (Hamilton), to the effect that financial statements be prepared regularly as to the exact state of the finances with returns from local branches, etc., and that these be printed and copies sent to the various branches. This was carried.

Retailer and Manufacturer.

Jno. Hewitt, sales agent Canadian Shredded Wheat Co., Toronto, gave an address on the Contract Selling Plan. In reference to this system of placing goods on the market he said:

"Before marketing our product, the company, after mature deliberation, decided that the legitimate channels through which our products should be distributed, were from the manufacturer to the jobber, from jobber to the retailer and from the retailer to the consumer, and, recognizing that for this service rendered by the jobber and retailer, each was entitled to a fair remuneration and such in their judgment, having in mind the uncertainty of the price of the raw material, (wheat) was fixed on what appeared to them, an equitable basis.

"It is apparent to all business men that in the initial or introductory stages of a product like Shredded Wheat, immense expense is entailed in demonstrating and advertising the product to educate the public as to its food value and thus create a demand for the goods. All this expense is borne by the manufacturer.

"Having therefore established a demand for our product, in the profits of which you as distributors share, we formulated a plan to protect both the jobber and retailer and insure them the profit fixed by the company. About eight years ago we introduced the restrictive price or contract plan. Agreements were drafted, printed and both jobbers and retailers were asked to sign the same. It was a new departure and some thought an innovation and bound to be a failure, but I am glad to state that we met with the hearty sumpathy and loyal co-operation of the majority of both wholesalers and retailers.

"We find that though we have accomplished much, there is yet some educational work to be done to get certain retailers to take the profit provided under the contract plan, and here let me say, that in our chain, provided for the smooth running of the machinery, there appears to me to be two links which are weak and need strengthening. I refer to the salesman representing the wholesaler and the retailer or purchaser. The salesman, either through ignorance of the terms of contract under which Shredded Wheat is sold, or knowing these, is disloyal to his employer and offers secret rebates to the purchaser, thus breaking his employer's contract and causing financial loss as provided for in the contract, and what is worse, labeling his employer as a contract breaker. What shall we say of the retailer, who knowing the conditions of sale, aids and abets such dishonest and dishonorable dealing. Where such cases have been reported, we have required an affidavit from the salesman and also from the house he represents.

"I am pleased to note that the wholesalers, recognizing the gravity of this situation, passed a resolution at their recent meeting in Montreal, requiring the preparing and printing of a circular embodying the main points made by E. F. B. Johnston in his lucid explanation of the Secret Commissions Act of 1909, also section 415 of the Criminal Code, at the recent meeting of the Wholesale Guild in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto. This circular is to be placed in the hands of every wholesale grocer in the Dominion, with a request that he furnish a copy to every one of his salesmen and that they be requested to read and familiarize themselves with the provisions of the Act referred to. I feel hopeful that this will have a wholesome and deterrent effect. At any rate, if the salesman after all these measures and precautions have been taken, runs his head into the noose of the law by violations, deserves no sympathy from either the wholesaler or retailer. Gentlemen, you can be and ought to be of great assistance to the jobber and manufacturer in the matter of maintaining contract prices, for if you treat the man who offers you any consideration or bribe to do business with him as he ought to be treated, the occupation of the dishonest salesman will be gone, and his passing away will clear the business atmosphere and insure a brighter, better outlook for the honest, legitimate dealer."

W. H. Dyde, grocer, (Kingston), took exception to the principle of contract prices and claimed that there should be a quantity price for those who were in a position to buy in quantities.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

Local Paper Advertising.

In the absence of Robt. Fair, dry goods merchant, (Peterboro), his paper on "How the local press can be made more valuable to retail merchants, and why they should support its advertising column," was read by H. Watters, (Ottawa). It was:

"In dealing with such an important subject as has been assigned to me let me first say that as a large retailer myself, having been engaged in the dry goods business for over a quarter of a century, I heartily endorse the aims and purposes of the Retail Merchants' Association.

"Its benefits to each individual member are many and it has done and is still doing a great work in the interests of the trade. It has been responsible for the elevating of advertising to a higher standard and such a meeting as this means mutual benefit to all concerned. The merchant in one line of trade meets others in a similar or different line of business and by the exchange of opinions and ideas each is greatly benefited.

"Let me deal first with the initial part of my subject, 'How the local press can be made more valuable to the retail merchant,'—and in doing this let me point out what I think to be some of the greatest present day evils. In my long experience as a dry goods merchant and therefor an advertiser, I have made it a part of my business to compare the local papers with others outside and I find the local newspaper as a general rule "fills up" with a lot of trashy plate matter, which probably not half a dozen readers in one hundred ever look at. It's in one day and the probability is that it will appear at another date for the express purpose of filling up the paper and make it look big. Another method to cover the same ground is the two frequent practice of using large "scare line headings." These also help to take up room.

Against Supplements.

"I am strongly opposed to supplements and special editions. My own experience is that on many occasions customers have come to me asking why I discontinued my advertisement in such and such a paper. The fact of the matter was that the advertisement was sent to the printer, was locked up in one of the forms of the supplement, but wnen my customer received the paper, the supplement was missing or the reader in looking for the local news, knew it would not be found in the supplement and so threw it aside. My advertisement was therefor a waste of money, ability and time.

"I would also discourage the practice of advertising by means of the small hand bill or dodger. It cuts down the space used by the merchant in the paper because he thinks he can get ahead of his competitor by using the dodger. But can he? I am rather inclined to think not. The other fellow around the corner circulates dodgers and the housekeeper, who is the merchant's chief asset, on coming to her door finds a lot of colored bills and while at one time she may look them over, she will in 99 other cases throw them away or burn them. The result is a dead loss to those who sent them.

"Now my theory is this: Let the newspaper man do away with all this plate matter, supplements or special editions and minimize the big headings. Let him be uniform in the publishing of his paper. Instead of having the local news concentrated on one page, let it be pretty well distributed, and so that each page would be read. The reader would then find the news and the advertisements at first sight on any page. A genuine advertisement is an item of news just as much as the fact of John Jones being killed in a railway accident and as many a local item is missed by being placed in an obscure corner of a "fill out" newspaper, so is an advertisement, be it large or small, by being similarly treated. Eliminate all this useless matter; have the paper distinctly local and distribute the news and advertisements on just the size of paper needed and no more and the results to my mind, would be manifold, both to the publisher and advertiser.

Should Publish Prices.

"I think that every merchant should have a fair to a thorough knowledge of advertising. He should be able to see in his own mind pretty much how that advertisement is going to look in type, and be able to act accordingly with a view of having it look attractive and readable. He should not be afraid to publish the prices of his articles although there are exceptions such as the announcement of a new stock or the opening of a season. He should advertise each article under the name by which it is best known to his customer. I would also advocate the use of the index on the newspaper as I consider it of great value. The reader can find at a glance where to find the article he or she is looking for and as my opinion is that a live advertisement is a local item, it should be included in the index.

"Then these things being remedied, the merchant should support the advertising columns of the local press loyally and at all times. He should do away with the hand bill custom, etc., which in many cases does not go to the publisher of a paper in his own town, but instead the small jobber outside is the one to be benefited. He should make his contract with the publisher and it should be rigidly abided by by both parties.

"Then by loyally supporting the publisher the merchant should in turn receive the preference by the local buying public. This I think would be brought about to a greater extent than is now prevalent. The community owes it to the merchant. His line of business can be placed in the hazardous class. Not every merchant makes a success. He has to take many chances, and yet in doing this he contributes half of the total amount of the community's taxes. Again the advertisement is a source of information. It tells the condition of the market and the reader can be assured of its reliability.

"I thank the Association for the honor bestowed on me, and while I feel that the assignment could have been placed in much more capable hands I have given my opinions and trust that the convention of the Association may result in many accomplishments which will benefit all those interested."

Effects of Bargain Counters.

H. Occomore, hardware merchant, and president of the Guelph branch of the R. M. A., read a paper on "The Injurious Effects that the bargain counter advertisements of the Toronto dailies have on the growth of the cities and towns."

"In presenting this short paper to you to-day," he said, "I do so with somewrat of misgiving, as I have to confess that until I received a letter from Mr. Trowern some few days since saying that he had put my name on the programme as the handler of this subject, I had never given it any particular thought. Had I had the choosing I would have given something of a very different nature.

"However, to come to the matter of this paper "The Bargain Counter Advertisements, its injurious effects on the cities and towns." We must first be sure that this is really an evil before we endeavor to point out a specific for it. We must also reckon with the fact that unless we can really find legitimate proof that it has an injurious effect, we will only frustrate the very purpose of this paper (namely how to counteract this evil), but instead will only help to advertise it more extensively.

"That it is injurious to the retail trade of the cities and towns you will all agree with me. I know of nothing that will cause the buying public to sit up and think and act quicker than a bargain sale advertised by a responsible house, and just here let me say that it is only that kind of a house that can successfully run bargain counters, because the public demand real bargains at such times. The greater evil to my mind in this is that it makes the buying public dissatisfied when they have to pay the merchant in their own town a price which will enable him to conduct his business along legitimate lines. In what thoughts I have been able to give this subject, I am forced to admit that in most cases the goods advertised in this way on the bargain counter are fairly good bargains to the buyer, especially when it does not cost him or her much to transport these goods to his or her home town. To my mind the greater evil is the enormous circulation of catalogues from the several departmental stores, both on this side of the line and the other. I do not think that all the bargains which are purchased outside and brought into our towns and cities would amount to very much if divided up among the several local dealers in the locality, but I do think that the catalogue advertisements as we receive them to-day are something that should make us stop and think whether something cannot be done to counteract this evil to every department of the retail trade in every city, town, or village; here, we have quite the reverse of the other, and instead of getting what they expect they are more often quite dissatisfied. But what can they do? they have paid for it, also express or freight charges, and they swallow their disappointment and say, 'Oh, I guess we'll keep it now.'

A Lack of Common Sense.

"Right here, is where I fail to see where the common sense of the ordinary catalogue-house-patron comes in. First, they see something in this catalogue they think is what they need; they send for this, enclosing sufficient funds to cover cost of article and transportation to the nearest express office, and very frequently when it does arrive, it is not what they thought it would be. This same article or perhaps something nearer to what they wanted is all the time to be gotten at the local store, oftimes at the same prices as quoted by the catalogue houses, or if higher, seldom as much as it costs to lay the other down and beside all this the fact of being able to see the article before buying should be one of the strongest levers against catalogue house buying.

"This appears to me to be the hardest blow to the retail trade generally, the grossly misleading descriptions, cuts, and information, as we see them published in these catalogues. As for the bargain counters, I would say let them alone and, if necessary, go thou and do likewise, for we must admit that it is numan nature generally to be looking for bargains. I would like right here to read a clipping from a recent issue of a trade journal as to the Association way of doing things:

THE ASSOCIATION WAY.

" 'The wise and prudent dealer will interpret the 'signs of the times,' and adjust his business to the new conditions. This is being gradually done, some localities making better progress than others. Some must hustle or the real enemy will capture the local trade, which means ruin and defeat. To fight successfully we must first recognize the true enemy, and then plan and carry out a winning campaign.

" 'In a town are two retail firms. There is plenty of trade in the community to support both and it is foolish to believe that either can drive his competitor out of business or sell all the goods that are needed. Yet this is exactly what dealers are trying to do in many of our smaller towns. While this bitter local fight is going on, the real enemy, the catalogue house, is, almost unnoticed and unopposed, stealing a large portion of the most desirable and profitable trade of the community.

" 'No one is to blame but the dealers themselves, and they can never stop foreign encroachment on their trade until some sensible, practical, friendly alliance is arranged for mutual defence and protection. It is a mistake to blame the farmer for buying of catalogue houses. They are sensible men and will buy at home if you show them in the right way that, all things considered, you can serve them equally as well. It is a mistake to fight your neighbor with cut prices and shut your eyes to the catalogue quotations. You always have a chance at orders filled in your own town, but when they go to Toronto or Winnipeg the business is worse than lost.

H. OCCOMORE, Guelph,

President of Guelph R. M. A., Who Gave an Address on Bargain Counters and the Mail Order Question.

" 'The 'Association Way,' as the National Hardware Bulletin says, is to get together; to harmonize and adjust local differences, to rise above petty jealousies and trickery; to work for the general progress and prosperity of all instead of crawling into your business shell and wasting your energy in snarling and snapping at every person who happens to handle the same class of merchandise.

" 'One way to overcome this is to organize the Association into sections.

" 'The reason these houses can put on bargains is owing to the quantity purchased and if the merchants of our cities and towns could only have confidence in each other to combine in the matter of buying certain lines, it would no doubt to a very great extent lessen the evil, as they could then buy just as cheaply as the catalogue houses, and we all know that in the majority of cases, quantity controls the price. This is just as true in selling as in buying. Another way to lessen the evil would be to absolutely refuse to buy from those wholesalers and jobbers who we know cater to the departmental houses' trade.'

Hold Your Own.

"In conclusion, gentlemen, I would say let us as retail merchants of Canada make up our minds that we as a class are necessary to the best interests of trade and that we can and will hold our own even though there be bargain counters and we can rest assured that there will always be lots of people who are willing to live and let live and will appreciate at his true worth the dealer who endeavors to give a square deal."

Increased Cost of Foods.

F. C. Higgins, grocer, (Toronto), prepared a paper on "The cause of the increased cost of food products from the practical standpoint of the merchant." He was unable to be present, and this paper was read by J. Impey, R.M.A. organizer, (Toronto), It was as follows:

"The subject that has been given me to present for your consideration, 'The cause of the increased cost of food products from the practical standpoint of the merchant,' is certainly not of my choosing, and if I fail to make this paper interesting, I can at least make it short, and thereby fulfill one of the claims set out in the official programme.

"Then, again, if I take the same liberty with my text, that the preacher does at times—read it, and straightway forget all about it—I am sure you will forgive me, because it seems to me that while it would be of interest to know the 'Cause of the increased cost of food products,' it is a much more interesting and practical question to us, as merchants, to consider the subject of 'The effect of the increased cost of not only food products, but of all the expenditures, incidental and necessary, for the proper conduct of business.'

"First of all, the increased cost means the investment of more capital. A merchant by an investment of $10,000 could secure as large and varied a stock ten or fifteen years ago as he can to-day with an investment of $12,000 to $15,000. Money is worth 10 per cent. in a business venture, so we see one of the first effects is this added burden on the merchant.

"Second—The increased cost of living has compelled the merchant to pay higher salaries to his employes, ranging from 25 to 50 per cent.

"Third—The heavy burden of increased cost in the delivery of orders. A horse could be fed and shod at an average cost of $2.50 to $3 per week a few years ago, and to-day it costs about $5 to $6—nearly doubling the outlay in this particular.

"Now, what is the effect of all this increase? It means that it is costing the retail merchant at least 5 per cent. more on his turnover, to do business to-day than it did ten or fifteen years ago.

"How can we, as merchants, maintain our position and receive a just reward for our labor? I know of no better way than ORGANIZATION. By this means labor has secured a much larger and more equitable compensation, and it is up to the merchants of this country to say whether the increased cost is to be wholly taken from them, or to be apportioned to each and every one according to the service rendered."

Maintaining Profits.

Mayor Daniel Couper, grocer, (Kingston)—"I think Mr. Higgins has struck the right note; expenses have increased all over and profits are being cut down, and if we can only get together and arrange some method of maintaining fair profits there will be better business men in the future."

Advertise Your Goods.

A. Sweet, general merchant, (Winchester), in reference to mail order houses, stated that he had had trouble with people sending to catalogue houses because they did not know what he kept in his store.

"We should let the people know of all the lines we carry," he said, and cited an instance of his own wife deciding to send away for an article which he himself had in his store.

Co-Operative Societies.

The next paper was read by E. M. Trowern, on, "Why Co-operative Societies are Commercially Unsound."

"There are two viewpoints of considering this subject, one is from the standpoint of the practical business man who understands all the avenues and ramifications of trade and commerce, and their relation to every other trade, calling and profession, and who has in view the ultimate growth and development of the whole nation, and all who are interested in it, so that it may ultimately result in a much greater advance of civilization, which, we believe to be the true standpoint from which practical co-operation should be viewed. And the other viewpoint is from that of persons whose vision is partly shadowed, because they lack the knowledge of active business affairs, and the true principle that underlies trade and commerce.

"To the second class the natural avenues of trade appear to be all disorder and confusion. They cannot trace the development that has been constantly taking place in the methods of trade and commerce and which has resulted in our present condition of civilization. They overlook the fact that as man became free to think and to act for himself, to buy and to sell, and to invent and search out new markets, that civilization has advanced and in proportion as man has advanced so have the nations. They cannot see the relationship between the manufacturer, the wholesaler and the retailer. Most of these theorists are well-meaning persons who have sentiments which they think is an endeavor to embrace and carry out a plan for the development of the practical brotherhood of man. One of their pet theories is, that the profits of the retailer or the middleman, and which is really the wages of the retailers for doing a useful service in all communities—should be taken away from them and given to the consumers who create the profits. Cunning promoters see in this second plan an opportunity of profit for themselves and with the aid of the influence and wealth of these good-meaning, but inexperienced, persons in business, and assisted by the small investments of thousands of working men who know still less about the true relationship of trade to the nation and the value of merchandise, they commence their operations. Their first and most important step is to keep constantly in front of their shareholders the fact that the co-operative store belongs to them, that if they want to succeed they must patronize it, and they must induce all other persons to patronize it. In order to make them think that they are securing an advantage, in addition to giving the shareholders interest on their money, they quote to them and to all purchasers what they term to be the 'regular legitimate dealers' prices,' and which has been proven over and over again to be false and misleading; and from off these fictitious prices they give back again at the end of the year or half-year what they term to be a 'dividend,' and this dividend, which is nothing more or less than a bribe, is the crux upon which the promoters or managers base the whole success of their scheme.

"In order to prove this statement, all that is necessary to do is to turn to the reports and annual statements of these societies that are in operation in England and Scotland, and in nearly every case you will find that when the question is asked by the shareholders if the managers did not think that it would be the best thing to do away with the giving of the dividends or bribes and give the customers the benefit of the supposed lower prices at the time of the purchase, and the answer has always been the same: 'If you do away with the giving of dividends you will destroy the system.' Those uneducated in commerce and who cannot see the trick or scheme in this plan often ask, 'Why is it that they can go on and do business if the statement is true that they charge higher prices than the legitimate dealers?' This is a fair question and requires a fair answer, which can be given by any practical merchant who has studied the problem.

What Their Methods are Said to be.

"Their method is to keep all classes and qualities of goods. On those lines that the public are familiar with they keep the prices down to that of the legitimate dealer, and on those lines that the public are not familiar with they 'load up' the prices, and in this way they are enabled to pay back the dividends which have been taken from their customers under false pretences. Did you ever think how little the average man or woman knows about the quality of merchandise? Did it ever occur to you that to be a successful and safe storekeeper to purchase goods from, the you must know your business? Take cloth, wool, silks, cotton, linen, how many people know anything about their quality until after they have worn them, and they have to purchase them on the strength of the reputation of the dealer? How many customers know whether they are buying pure or adulterated mustard, rice, salt, vinegar, pepper, spices or any other articles of groceries, unless they depend on the knowledge and honesty and reputation of the merchant? It is an easy thing to sell most people second-quality goods, and palm them off as firsts, and because this can be done, and is done, is one of the reasons why co-operative stores are able to pay back what they term dividends, a custom which is immoral, unfair and unjust, and which is the most corrupt system of bribery, as it is clothed in the most sacred and philanthropic covering, that of pretending to help and aid the poor working man. Instead of being their friend, it is their enemy in disguise. When working men buy from them they are overcharged in price, which we have abundance of proof to show, they are not served properly, the goods are not delivered promptly and regularly, and when they are out of work and have no money to pay for their goods they are told they had better go to 'the shopkeepers across the way.'

"We make no apology for denouncing the so-called 'Co-operative Society System' of doing business, and we challenge any person to deny our statements, and if the Dominion Government, no matter which party is in power, want to do the fair thing by the retail merchants of Canada, instead of passing legislation to promote this false scheme, they will, whenever such legislation is proposed, throw it out, and if they decide to pass such legislation they should put a clause in the proposed bill, making it an illegal offence for any co-operative society or any merchant or corporation to offer to give back a dividend, or what we term a bribe. We can promise the Government the hearty support of every honest merchant in Canada to this amendment, and we will go further, and say that if any Government insists on a clause of this character they will hear nothing further about a co-operative society bill, as its promoters would soon forsake it if they were compelled to abolish the bribing features of it. In order that we may not be misunderstood, we wish to state again, that we object to the co-operative society scheme because it is not based on sound business morality, because it does not give the poor working man cheaper goods, because it pretends to be a philanthropic scheme and it is not, and because through its pretensions, it is displacing trade out of its legitimate channels and centralizing it in the hands of a few, thus destroying the value of real estate, reducing the wages of clerks and throwing a great many out of employment, and instead of educating clerks to higher standards and teaching them more about their business, the co-operative system is making them mere machines and operating under false pretences.

"Our association stands for all that is fair and square and for this reason we oppose the co-operative system."

Wholesalers and Retailers.

The following paper by H. C. Beckett, W. H. Gillard & Co., (Hamilton), was read by Geo. Mills, in Mr. Becket's absence:

"It is an honor and a privilege to be requested by you to take part in the deliberations of your convention. Your efforts to educate the trade up to a better business standard cannot fail to result in benefit to not only members of your association, but the grocery trade in general.

"I am asked to suggest to you reasons "Why wholesale and retail merchants should co-operate." Well—a common sense conclusion on general lines would convince any thinking merchant that there would be advantages in wholesalers and retailers co-operating, but with a view to emphasizing and giving the reasons why such co-operation is necessary, I would point out to you the following facts:

"The conditions of trade, we all know, are not satisfactory and associated effort is the only known remedy. As a foundation for better business methods, the three classes of trade, namely, manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers, require to be more in harmony with each other, and education in this direction can only be accomplished by united effort on the part of wholesalers and retailers.

"A careful study of the situation will convince the student that at present, very few manufacturers understand the conditions of the retail trade—the manufacturer does not properly appreciate the value of the retailer as a distributor of his products—and the manufacturer does not know and apparently is not making any great effort to know what it costs the retailer or the wholesaler to do business. With few exceptions the manufacturer has shown indifference as to whether the distributor of his goods succeeds or not—the manufacturers simply regard the retailer as a means to an end.

"Through the co-operation of the retail trade it should be made clear to the manufacturer (by the wholesale and retail trade) that the methods some of them have employed in the past are not only unfair to the great majority of the retail trade, but a serious menace to the welfare of the retail trade.

"I would illustrate this by referring you to the discrimination that some manufacturers have shown to some retailers. It must be clear that if manufacturers are permitted, without protest on the part of ninety-five per cent. of the retail trade, to sell five per cent. of the retail trade on a favored basis, the ninety-five per cent. suffer. It must be clear that on proprietary articles, in the majority of cases the manufacturer has not taken into consideration the retailer's position and planned the sale of his goods on a basis that would show the retailer a sufficient margin. This indifference on the part of the manufacturer is, no doubt, to a large extent, due to some manufacturers following the advice of advertising agents who have recommended manufacturers to cut down the profits of the retailer to the smallest point and spend the difference in advertising, the claim of advertising agents being that goods well advertised must be handled by the retailer whether there is any margin for the retailer or not. I have seen letters from advertising agents to manufacturers in which the advertising agents advised the manufacturer to pay no attention to the margin of the distributor but to advertise extensively and the distributor would be compelled to handle the goods. This is very much in line with an advertisement of the Toronto Globe which recently appeared. The Globe's advertising man makes this remark:

> "The maker of any article who is prepared to let the retailer, big or little, dictate to him will rue his policy sooner or later."

"I would like to ask: Have not the wholesalers and retailers something to say regarding the terms upon which they will handle goods if they agree to handle them? The arrangement cannot be one-sided. Every distributor of goods has a right to dictate the terms upon which he shall handle them, as well as the manufacturer who makes these goods.

"We must consider the viewpoint of the advertising agent to find his reason for such suggestion and argument. It's easy—the advertising agent is looking for large advertising contracts and his effort is to secure part of the profit justly due the retailer.

I would remind you of the fact that if the manufacturer expects his products to take a permanent stand upon the market he must reckon, sooner or later, with two elements of trade, viz., the wholesaler and retailer. When the wholesalers and retailers jointly impress the manufacturer that his interests will be best served by winning the co-operation of both the wholesaler and retailer, the wise manufacturer will secure the co-operation of the wholesaler and retailer and ensure to each a reasonable profit in payment for their share in marketing his, the manufacturer's wares. To bring about this happy state of affairs would be impossible if undertaken by individuals and without the medium of an association such as yours and such as that of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild.

"The retail and wholesale grocery trade is of such importance that it must have some official status—there must be some authority to speak officially on its behalf, and this can only be done by some organization with a recognized entity.

"The general features and requirements of the grocery business must have recognition, and the peculiar views or opposition of a few dealers actuated by selfish or improper motives must not be allowed to prevail.

Believes in Co-operation.

"The needed protection to the retailer and the surest method of bringing about the reforms and cleaner methods so much needed in business can best be brought about by both wholesalers and retailers co-operating.

"It must be clear that if the wholesaler acts as the manufacturer's distributing agent, it then devolves upon the manufacturer the adoption of a selling system that will ensure a square deal for the retailer. Sales by manufacturers direct to the retailers gives the manufacturer an opportunity to discriminate in favor of a few retailers and at the expense of the great majority of retailers. The manufacturer is under no obligation in any way to treat all retailers on a fair basis if the transaction is between himself and the retailers. On the other hand, if the wholesaler acts as the manufacturer's distributing agent, the wholesaler requires the manufacturer to adopt a selling plan that would ensure a fair deal to the retailer, or the wholesaler declines to handle the goods.

"In this manner you will realize co-operation through the two organizations will result in great benefit to the trade. Unfortunately, as in your organization, we have those in the wholesale trade who hold aloof and discourage any organized, united effort. Is such an attitude in the best interests of the trade and should it go unnoticed by the retailers? I venture to say that some wholesale firms have disclaimed allegiance to the Wholesale Grocers' Guild because they thought such an attitude would be popular with the retailer—let the wholesaler know in no uncertain way that such an attitude is not in the best interests of the retail trade. To bring this about takes time and education, if the wholesaler is a strong believer in the power of organization his conviction will carry conviction to and have a great influence with the retailer, and the wholesaler's attitude will assist you greatly in increasing your membership. There is no greater bar to your success and increased membership than the example set by wholesalers who have no use for and take no interest in association work. It, therefore, should be the duty of every wholesaler to set an example by endorsing the principle of association work and thus have an influence with those engaged in the retail business. There is nothing selfish about association work, and nothing dishonorable about being a member of an organization whose effort is to uplift the business in which its members are engaged. To be a member of an association means doing something for the general good of the trade, and in this advanced age a man must indeed be actuated by indifference or selfishness who will not join in the work of reform, but quietly takes advantage of all the benefits that others have secured for him.

"Every wholesaler should be requested by your association to use their best efforts and influence with the retailer to become an active member of your association. Every wholesale house should endorse your efforts for large membership, and the travelers for such wholesale firms should be asked to assist by pointing out to the retailer the advantages and benefits to be derived by associated effort.

"In the short time allotted me, it would be impossible to deal thoroughly with all the reasons why wholesale and retail merchants should co-operate, but the points touched upon I feel confident are worthy of your serious consideration.

Combining for Protection.

"Before closing I would like to point out that it is not now considered a criminal act for those engaged in business to combine for their own reasonable protection. Many of the peculiar views held by those who deal with serious problems in a superficial way, have been exploded, and it has cost a great deal of money and time to convince such people. The requirements of honest principles in business are manifest to most of those engaged in trade and commerce, but it takes patient, persistent effort on your part to make all the trade up to a realization of the necessity and value of organized effort. Some people do not yet realize and appreciate that in our growing commerce we must apply new methods to suit the exigencies of the age in which we live, and that it is only by getting more closely in touch with each other and in each branch of trade that we can best solve the difficulties that confront us. Let the retail and wholesale grocers work together in a spirit of fairness, and results can be accomplished that will satisfy all fair minded men."

Want a Fair Profit.

H. Watters, druggist (Ottawa), told of an instance where he had refused to handle a line of soaps because the manufacturer was not allowing him a fair profit. Manufacturers should not attempt to coerce retailers by advertising his goods to the consumer, to handle them for nothing, he claimed. He urged retailers to establish similar methods and there would be less trouble.

Educating the Farmers.

M. Moyer, provincial treasurer (Toronto), read this paper on the above question.

"It is frequently mentioned that this is an age of conventions, and conventions are an outcome of organization, and organization is a modern necessity for the preservation and improvement of social and industrial conditions. Never before was it so well understood that the great enemy to human progress and reform is the fear and suspicion which exists between men for want of knowing each other. Long and dark has been the night in which ignorance of each other has done its evil work, but gradually the sunshine of truth is beginning to illuminate the erroneous thought and men are reaching out for the good they find in each other and their help for the common good of all.

"While this movement is growing under the enthusiasm of its most devoted supporters, a large majority of merchants are still unconcerned, and how to reach them and secure their moral and financial support seems to be the great difficulty that stands in the way and which should have the most careful consideration at this convention. Merchants, owing to the nature of their business, are perhaps the hardest to reach and in order to wake them up they must be made to feel the effects of wrong business methods very keenly before they will take an active part in any movement to better their conditions.

"That something is seriously wrong is admitted by all, and the evidence of the fact is apparent in every village and town throughout the country. I refer to the fact that these villages and towns are not getting the trade that naturally and rightfully belongs to them. This is the general complaint all over, but the aim of this association is to sympathize with any merchant, and expect the people to support him, unless it is in their interests to do so.

Up to the Merchants.

"The people have a perfect right, in this free country of ours, to buy where they like, and if the merchants fall asleep and will not wake up to meet the needs and requirements of the people, then they must only blame themselves if they do not support them.

"We always claim (and the whole world has never discovered anything better), that the only true system to distribute the products of the world to the people, is through the wholesale houses and the retail stores, and if any institution interferes with this process it cannot be in the interests of the people, and can only be done when something is wrong. If the legitimate and only correct system of trade therefore is suffering, as we all know it is, then it is our duty to find out and correct the error which somewhere exists and which prevents and hinders the best and cheapest system for giving the people the service to which they are entitled.

"Where are we therefore to look for the cause of the trouble? Will we blame the large department stores, in this age of greed when they do what you and I would do if we could, or will we wake up and get out of the old rut and meet the conditions as they exist with the advantages we have of being in line with the only true system of commerce, with right on our side and the only correct machinery at our disposal? Will thousands of merchants, and the entire community behind them, yield to a grasping concern which cannot under any circumstances give complete and satisfactory service to the people and allow them to thwart the natural growth and development of our country?

"It is a serious question, and it is our duty as men to take a strong and firm stand and find whether we do our part as we should. Go where you like and they will all tell you that they are unfair competitors, and unnecessary institutions and yet through incessant advertising the people are unconsciously drifting into the habit of supporting them without considering that they are injuring their own interests. What the merchants want to consider is where to find a remedy for this unsatisfactory condition which is considered a wrong by all the thinking people of the whole country. If it is a wrong and an evil under which the country at large is suffering, it should be an easy matter to find the remedy, and it would be, if the true condition of affairs were understood, but when you need united effort, and a large portion of the merchants who should be particularly interested, do not understand the situation, and who entirely fail to realize what is being done by their fellow merchants, then you meet with the difficulty that stands in our way.

Education is Needed.

"The first step therefore must be on educational lines among the merchants themselves. To do this requires money, and the merchants must supply it, and right here is where the greatest generalship is required. Many plans have been tried but always failed to produce the necessary funds to carry on the work, and yet if the importance of the work were realized and each one would do his duty the cost to each merchant would be so small that no one, unless he is entirely beneath the dignity of a merchant, would refuse to pay it.

"I have not yet seen our recently acquired charter, and therefore do not know what methods we can adopt, but we must adopt methods that are practical and that will bring the desired results. It is no use any longer to pass resolutions and frame laws on paper, and come back from year to year without having made any perceivable progress. We are here this year, I hope, to do things, and before we leave we must have arrived at an aggressive system of thorough organization with the best and most enthusiastic men at the head of it.

"I have been visiting a good many towns recently in connection with my work, and while the majority of merchants feel the pressure of unfair business methods and are practically ignorant of the work of the association, there are always some who are interested and who are ready and willing to take an active part in the work. If therefore the right system can be put into operation, I feel sure that the wrongs in trade conditions of which the whole country is suffering, can be corrected. As I have had some experience in the work of this association, I will, if you allow me, outline several schemes for your consideration.

"In this work, like in almost everything else, the willing ones must bear more than their share, and all we can attempt to do is to get all the assistance we can to lighten their burdens until they all see the value of the work. There are in Ontario in the neighborhood of 2,000 villages, towns and cities, and out of these only about 150 have ever paid anything to the association, and yet derived the benefits as those who paid, and while so many towns paid, it is also a fact that a good many of the merchants in these towns never gave us any support. This on the face of it is not right, and therefore not successful.

The Organization Work.

"The plan of sending organizers from the head office from town to town to collect two dollars was found to be too expensive and not sufficiently educational to create interest and support, and had to be abandoned. In view of all this, I had a plan in my mind for several years, although unsupported by the executive and it is this: I would make an estimate of the money we required for a year and then allot each village and town's share according to its size or population, and if this amount was paid it would entitle every retailer in that village or town to be a member of the association. This amount would have to be raised by the merchants on that town and as the amount would be so small they could easily do it. I may say that through the permission of the executive we made an experiment with a number of villages, and while the results are not very satisfactory they are not altogether discouraging. The difficulty we meet with, in this plan, is that we come in contact with a class of merchants who know very little about the aims and objects of the association, and therefore do not know whether we deserve their support or not, and even if they did respond to our request they would have no means of becoming more familiar with our work. Therefore we would never secure their moral support.

"The most feasible plan as far as I can see at the present time is through local organizers in districts, and on strictly educational lines not only among the merchants but among all classes. We represent an industry about which we have nothing to hide. We are an important factor in the upbuilding and regulating the affairs of our country and we must measure up to the duties and responsibilities of our calling. We are the men as merchants upon whose judgment and strength of character the prosperity of the country largely depends, and therefore we should study not only our own interests but the responsibilities of our important position and our relations to the people whom we serve and who have a right to know something of our stewardship. Our customers are on one side of us and the producers on the other, and we stand in between as the middlemen reaching out our hands in both directions and connecting them all in one fabric of human activities. The farmers have their institutions, the laboring people have their unions, and we as merchants have our association, and the duty falls on our shoulders to reach out both ways and weld the connecting link and secure the united forces to build up our industrial conditions in the best possible interests of all.

A Plan Outlined.

"I would divide the province into counties or districts and make each district responsible for a certain amount of money to be paid to the Provincial Board. Any money they collect over and above that amount would belong to that district to be used as they deem fit for local purposes. There are various ways of collecting this money. One is by employing a local organizer for each district whose duty it would be to collect the fees and look after the work as directed either by the proper officers of the district or by the Provincial Board. As this movement is in the public interests and for the encouragement of better methods, I do not see why we would not be entitled to government aid, as much as the dairy, fruit-growers, bee-keepers, etc., who get an annual grant from the government. Any movement such as this which is intended for the general betterment of the people should have government or municipal support, but as the cost is so trifling, if all do their share, the merchants should stand up boldly and cheerfully pay their way.

"Public meetings should be held either in connection with the farmer's institutes or as general mass meetings in every district, and addressed by men who thoroughly understand trade conditions, and who could convincingly point out in dollars and cents the advantages of building up their own homes and their surroundings. Not only would this have to be pointed out to the buying public, but the merchants must wake up, out of the sleep many have fallen into, and learn to give the people the service they have a right to expect.

"A committee should then be appointed say four merchants and four farmers, or other property holders, from each district who would meet and decide upon the best methods to pursue in order to produce the best results for the people of their district. They would familiarize themselves with trade conditions, the relation of merchants and their customers, the advantages and conveniences of buying at home and how it would effect the value of their property. They would also study how the merchants could in many ways be of greater help to the farming community, good, fair honest merchants would be encouraged, and the croakers who want to make money without giving value and honest service would be weeded out. The work of the various committee meetings and conventions would be reported through the trade papers to the merchants, and from them through the local papers to the people in each district, and in this way the public would learn their own true advantages and the trade would speedily assume its natural condition."

Provincial Organization.

The last address of the convention was read by E. M. Trowern on "The best plan of organizing the provinces so as to keep the members properly posted and get the best results from our work," as follows:

"In comparing any plan that has been attempted in the past in our organization work with what I propose at the present time it must be borne in mind that the objects to be obtained in the one case were of a different character to that now proposed. Our first purpose was to ascertain if the retail merchants of Ontario were interested in an endeavor to build up and create such legal conditions, as would allow us to operate a successful Retail Merchants' Association. Our work was, therefore, largely of an educational character, calling the attention of the merchants to the existing trade abuses and to the unsatisfactory condition that surrounded some of our commercial legislation.

"This has been necessarily expensive and discouraging work, because, while we have been promoting this educational campaign and forming and holding our various branches together, we were quite conscious that we could not do for them what they needed most, and that was to improve their present trade section conditions. Being conscious of this, we had to explain, that unless they were willing to maintain the organization, it would be impossible for us to secure our just rights under the existing law, so as to enable us later on to do for them what we knew they required. Thanks to a large number of public spirited and hopeful merchants, who had faith in the efforts of their executive, we labored on and on and while we were spreading the educational work through the public and the trade press, and through our official organ, and through thousands upon thousands of circulars and public addresses, we were compelled almost every year to fight for our very lives, either in the Provincial Legislatures or in the Dominion Parliament to defeat some unfair legislative measure that would come up either to tax us more heavily, or to take away from us through trading stamps or Co-operative Society Store experiments our capital or our profits.

"These very evils, however, were the means of cementing our forces more closely together and a large number of merchants, who believed in honest and upright trading, rallied to our assistance and upheld our hands. Every victory we secured proved our usefulness and the need for our existence, and brought our association more prominently before the retail merchants on the one hand, and our legislators on the other. Gradually, therefore, step by step, we were blazing our way and spreading our educational work. All through these various struggles we kept constantly in mind that the chief goal that we were aiming at was, to free our hands and thus make us free men and free merchants, and to do that it was necessary that we secure a Dominion Charter so that we could take in our ranks all merchants of all classes from one end of Canada to the other, and to secure by law what we could not otherwise do. In addition to this we knew that we must have some changes in the procedure of the operations of the criminal law regarding combines. Both of these objects, as I have stated in my report, after our long plodding and our weary waiting have been secured, and our long and tedious struggle in keeping our members together, in encouraging the despondent ones, in bracing up the disconsolate ones, and in holding intact the few too buoyant ones, as well as in performing the most gigantic financial feats that perhaps have ever been performed in Association work, viz: proceeding forward and keeping our spirits up when our treasury was depleted and bankrupt by the heavy strains of Legislative expenses on the one hand, and the too small and inadequate fees on the other.

Arrive on the Border.

"Notwithstanding all these difficulties we have arrived on the border of the promised land, and through pluck, perseverance and tact we have succeeded in reaching the threshold and opened the door of the gateway to the temple that has long been our aim and ambition to reach. Having reached there, we now have a new mission to perform and that is to give the retail merchants of every trade section that that they desire mostly and which they have been longing and waiting for, viz: a plan whereby they can have, in addition to their general mercantile and legislative interests, taken care of, their particular trade section interests as well.

"As you all know our association has always publicly stated that single line associations, such as Retail Grocers' Associations, Retail Coal Associations, Retail Hardware Associations or any other single line association, can never accomplish anything of practical value, and what we have stated in this regard is doubly true to-day. Every line of trade must be centralized under one directing head and from this centre, like the fingers on the hand, they must all receive nourishment and strength. It is upon this plan that our organization is founded and through our plan we are able to-day to do for the sections what could never have been accomplished in the past. To-day, under our new conditions, we can meet and agree upon what should be a fair and honest price to maintain on all classes of staple and standard merchandise.

"We can refuse to handle goods that do not give us a fair margin of profit. We can place names of those who do not pay their accounts on a list and circulate them among the members. The plan, therefore, that I would suggest is to divide up the province into districts and place into each district an organizer whose duty would be to look after the work of the association, collect the membership fees, keep in correspondence with the Provincial Board, keep posted on what each section is doing and be a live active force in building up the association.

"This would be placing the association on a proper business basis and unless this is done and if we leave the work to be done by volunteers or busy merchants, we need not look for much progress, but advance only as fast as busy business men who have their own business to look after can advance it, and this would be taking, to my mind, a backward step, over the road that has been traveled upon for years and years.

"Therefore I hope that every member will see that if we want to reach where we are aiming at we must adopt business methods as business men."

What is Claimed for Charter.

Several wanted to know what the charter would accomplish. The secretary stated that since obtaining it the R. M. A. was in a position to place on paper the name of any manufacturer who would not consider the retail trade; that it gave the right to promote commercial and industrial interests of Canada; that it permitted the collection and publication of statistics concerning the interests of the retailer.

"We can go to a manufacturer and say 'if you don't meet us and place your product on a contract basis, give us the same rate as you do large departmental stores and if you don't do this we will refuse to buy your goods.' "

Other privileges given by the charter as stated by Mr. Trowern were: "Arbitration and settlement of trade disputes;" "Furnishing to members statistics re the financial standing of every poor-pay in every town or city"; "Generally all such other lawful and similar objects for promoting the interests of its members, etc."

A grocer here asked in what position a retailer is who buys pepper as 'pure' and finds it to be adulterated. Why was he fined and not the wholesaler or manufacturer?

The secretary said that the reason the retailer was held responsible was because he was the last party who handled the goods. If a manufacturer in the U. S. were to sell in Canada adulterated goods it would be difficult to get at him.

Mayor D. Couper, grocer, (Kingston), "All the retailer has to do in buying such goods is to demand a warranty from the manufacturer that they are pure; if he does this and gets it he is always safe."

The Officers Elected.

Little time was lost in electing the new officers as the members were leaving at 4 o'clock for a trip around the Thousand Islands—per kindness of the Kingston branch. The ballot was:

Past Pres.—B. W. Ziemann, merchant tailor, Preston.

President—C. W. Kelly, musical instruments, Guelph.

1st Vice Pres.—A. M. Patterson, dry goods, Brockville.

2nd Vice Pres.—E. T. Steacy, dry goods, Kingston.

Secretary—E. M. Trowern, Toronto.

Treasurer—M. Moyer, Toronto.

Auditor—R. W. Dockeray, Toronto.

The convention next year will go to Guelph. Hamilton was a contestant, but the Royal City won out.

The Convention in Brief.

"Has anybody here seen Kelly?" sung by Prof. Zick of the classic city.

Everybody saw the interior of the national "pen" without having to stay—thanks to the vigilance of Mayor Dan Couper.

M. (Fielding) Moyer, the greatest financier in Canada, attended the convention.

The entertainments given by the Kingston branch were superb. Among them was a boat trip around the Thousand Islands on Wednesday evening with supper on board.

Harry Watters' (Ottawa) oratorical abilities were prominently set forth on the hurricane deck of the "America," among the Islands—he presented with the aid of Mrs. (Mayor) Couper, on behalf of the Association, E. M. Trowern with a purse of gold, Mrs. Trowern with a hat-pin, M. Moyer with silver mounted brushes in case, B. W. Ziemann with gold cuff links, engraved, as well as tendering several votes of thanks to others without running down.

The Kingston reception committee couldn't do too much for the visitors—everybody was made to feel at home.

The Street Railway Co., at the instigation of the Mayor, took the conventionites out to the summer park where an exhibition of teetering was given by Ziemann and Cobbledick—the latter went all up in the air over the matter.

Mayor Couper's personality also conquered the Barriefield military camp; everything in Kingston seems to move at his beck and call and the whole camp marched through the city for the express benefit of the visitors.

Geo. Mills (Kingston) knows a hymn or two.

Patterson and Craig, two Brockville delegates, said farewell on the wharf at Alexandra Bay; they were in the United States then and they naturally did as the Yankees do—waved their pyjamas to the retreating boat.

Harry Occomore and C. W. Kelly lay awake all Wednesday night thinking out how to receive the guests next year at Guelph.

WHOLE AND GROUND CLOVES.

Why the Former are Sometimes Dearer Than the Latter.

The following letter deals with a subject that should be of interest to every grocer.

Editor Canadian Grocer—I notice in your special Spring and Export number an article by Chas. Adams in which he refers to the fact that ground cloves are sometimes sold at a lower price than whole cloves, and as it costs something to grind the cloves he naturally infers that they must be adulterated. Not being a spice expert, I will not undertake to criticise his remarks but am merely seeking information in the matter. I have been taught by those who think they know, that pure ground cloves can be sold at a lower price than whole cloves because only the perfect cloves are sold whole while the broken ones are used for grinding. Can you or some of your readers set us right in the matter and oblige?

H. L. DAVIES.

St. John, N.B., June 27, 1910.

In reply to this enquiry it may be said that the explanation made by the writer is the correct one. Let it be supposed that the manufacturer does not adulterate and that only pure material is used. When he receives a case of cloves as may be expected it includes whole cloves—those with bud and stem united—and broken cloves. The clove is broken or considered broken when the bud is separated from the stem. The whole clove is preferred because of its appearance. Customers who understand what they are purchasing demand the whole clove on account of its appearance but as far as its strength or quality is concerned the broken clove is said to be as good as the whole one.

As already stated it is mostly a matter of appearance. The broken cloves are used in grinding and the question of adulteration depends upon the manufacturer. The difference in price is readily understood. The cost of screening or selecting the whole cloves must be met, hence the slightly higher price demanded for them. From statements that manufacturers have made it would seem that if in either case there were no adulterations, the difference in quality or strength between ground broken and ground whole cloves would be very slight. But when adulterations or cheap materials are used in the grinding the quality naturally suffers and the ground cloves in such a case would likely be much lower in price than whole unbroken cloves.

Canadian Grocery Store That Has Lived 75 Years

Methods it Has Pursued to Attract High-Class Customers—Service and Quality Goods Given Special Attention—Carefulness in Selling to the Doubtful Pay—Expenses Kept Track of in Special Book—Some Changes From the Olden Days.

Toronto, June 30—There are not many Canadian retail grocery businesses that have reached the age of 75 years. Therefore, those which have are worthy of notice because they suggest scientific methods to others.

A few weeks ago Michie & Co. celebrated their 75th anniversary. They are the only retail grocers in business in Toronto to-day who were in the trade in 1835; in fact, theirs is the oldest-established business in the Queen City.

How did they live so long? Here are a few of the reasons:

They give a service that cannot be surpassed in Toronto.

They handle only goods of quality—goods that they can safely recommend.

They do not lose money in bad debts—ever since they became independent they did not hesitate to tell a doubtful customer, diplomatically, of course, that they wanted cash.

They allow no discounts, because the discounts in former years were too much abused.

Their bookkeeping system keeps them fully informed as to stock purchases, turnover, controllable and uncontrollable expenses, etc.

Deliveries are made systematically at specified times.

They do not cling to old ideas when new and better systems present themselves, and when the new methods are adopted they aim to simplify them as much as possible.

About Their Service.

Much dependence is placed upon serving the public in superior fashion. Particular people, people who are willing to pay any price in reason, want such a service and do not object to pay for it when they know it is assured.

A part of this is a splendid telephone service from six phones; in 1887 the store had but one phone, and that was used solely for ordering from the wholesalers.

The phone, too, is an economy, since in the early days men had to be sent out through the city to take orders, most of which were the regular weekly orders.

Michie & Co. hold the particular housekeeper, because quality in everything is assured. In this way they retain a wealthy clientele, who are willing to pay more than the ordinary price without objections.

Their system in looking after accounts and preventing losses has been changed from years gone by. To such an extent has this been perfected that little is lost through failure of customers to pay their bills.

Terms of Credit Shortened.

C. E. Stone, secretary-treasurer of the company, explained the change.

In the old days accounts were allowed to run for a year or more. When there were less than 10,000 inhabitants in Toronto, Michie & Co. carried almost as much on their books as they do now. But gradually wholesalers have shortened their terms of credit. Michie & Co. did the same, and now terms are net 30 days and no discount.

Refuses the Doubtful Ones.

By a process of education people have become accustomed to these regulations. The firm cannot afford to lose accounts and it is independent enough to refuse to supply any person who is at all doubtful, without the cash.

This is where many retailers err, so anxious are they to get business. They are too easy and lenient.

Michie & Co. send out their accounts once a month, and if confidence is lost in any account, no further credit is allowed.

In referring to discounts, Mr. Stone stated that when people got a credit preference they wanted a cash discount of 5 per cent. if they paid cash within the time limit. This was found pernicious, as it was abused. Customers wanted the discount, no matter when they paid and objected strenuously if they didn't get it. It was afterwards reduced to 3 per cent., and finally eliminated altogether. At present accounts are due when rendered and trouble is eliminated. They are mailed on the last day of every month.

Expenses Figured on Turnover.

Mr. Stone figures all percentages on sales, not on cost.

"Travelers often try to persuade me that if I buy an article for $1 and sell it for $1.20 that my percentage of gross profit is 20 per cent. It is not, if figured correctly; it is 20 per cent. on the cost all right, but only about 17 per cent. on the selling price."

Expenses are watched closely in this store. They are kept tab of every day in a special book totaled weekly, monthly and yearly. At a glance the total store expenses can be determined ten years back.

In figuring expenses, the business is credited with proprietors' salaries, rent (whether rent is paid or not), groceries used by the owners' families, etc.

The Michie store is quick to accept new methods, which will be destined to prove profitable. But when these methods are made use of, attempts are always made to perfect them by simplifying them as much as possible. They are reduced to a science.

WHY HE FAILED.

English Grocer Opened Branch Shops, But Was Unable to Make Them All Pay.

Bad trade, keen competition and losses by opening branch shops were attributed as the causes of his failure by William Patterson, a grocer, of Sunderland, England. His net liabilities amounted to over $1,000.

In his observations upon the case the official receiver stated that the debtor commenced business seven years ago with a borrowed capital of $150, which he repaid within twelve months. He afterwards opened other shops, and at one time had four shops—three in the east end and one in the west end of the town. His methods of business were a curious compound of care and want of care, for while on the one hand he had no banking account and no complete record of his receipts and payments, on the other hand he deducted from his wife's allowance of $7.50 per week an amount sufficient to pay for the groceries taken out of the shop for home consumption, and also $1.10 per week for rent in respect of the rooms occupied by his family. About a year ago he said that one of his then principal creditors asked him for security for his account and in a fit of pique he decided to pay him off, and in this way he had paid a considerable sum of money without receiving any benefit or return in the way of new stock. This had the effect of preferring the creditor, but he, the official receiver, did not at present think that there was an intention to prefer. Latterly he had only two shops. Had he been content with his two east end shops, it is claimed, he would not now be in the Bankruptcy Court. He did not keep a banking account because nearly all the takings of the week-end were paid away to travelers on the Monday. The firm which piqued him by asking for security had received $650 of the $750 he owed them. He now saw how unfairly he had treated his other creditors by paying the firm in question.

T. Kenny & Co., Ltd., Sarnia, Ont., have taken over the wholesale grocery business of T. Kenny & Co.

The Caterers' Association, Winnipeg, Man., intend holding their annual excursion to Winnipeg Beach on July 6.

Armstrong & Gillespie, grocers, Bracebridge, Ont., have dissolved, the former continuing. The latter expects to go west.

The Muskoka strawberry crop will be short this year, owing to the recent dry hot weather in that district.

Grocers Losing Thousands Through Pilfering

While Goods Are en route From Jobber to Their Stores Considerable Petty Larceny Takes Place — One Grocer Estimates His Loss Last Year at $150 Through Pilfering and Breakages —Where Will The Remedy Come From?

Threadbare as the old saying is, that cents make the dollars, it is nevertheless true. The cent multiplied again and again amounts to an appreciable sum.

Similarly those little leakages which are found in every grocery business will, if repeated again and again, make a big hole in the profits to which the proprietor is justly due.

They are insidious these little "dribdrabs" eating into the credit side of the balance sheet as slowly but as persistently as the worm eats its way through an apple. Of course, it is not to be considered that the leakages will always wreck a business. They are admittedly not that dangerous. But they are worthy of consideration inasmuch as they are continuous and from the mere fact that they are small.

If freight shed walls had ears, and if some of these plodding express horses found in every town and city were possessed of the power to talk and if that same ability were passed around to certain inanimate objects, the grocery world would receive an enlightenment upon the question of pilfering of which they have been the victims.

It is simply a mild form of petty larceny, but as each case is repeated time after time the practice is nothing but theft and as such is deserving of the full hand of the law.

Loss of $150 in a Year.

A. T. Lawler, a Whitby, Ont., grocer roughly estimates that he lost $150 last year through pilfering. He is unable to account for this total as it may be understood. No one would knowingly allow practices of this kind to continue. But Mr. Lawler is one of those who is anxious to find a remedy for the evil which falls perhaps heaviest on the grocer.

A grocer in a Canadian city that might be mentioned, states that every time he receives a shipment of bananas there is generally some missing. The amount ranges from one half to an entire dozen with the outside limit in the majority. The grocer did not know how to get at the root of the matter. He could not blame the expressman exactly. He may have been the guilty party and he may not. The proprietor sent his own driver for certain goods to the freight sheds and there at times were evidences that some one had imagined that they were temporary owners of these goods. There have been so many complaints of this kind, that it is believed the persons guilty of these petty depredations represent more than one class.

The proprietor of the average grocery must of necessity trust to the honesty of various persons upon whom, to a certain extent he is dependent for the transacting of his business. It might be mentioned for instance that caution could possibly begin at home. But that is another problem. This article calls attention to one of the leaks.

The grocer who can say that he has not experienced any losses or any depreciation in the amount of his goods ordered is either fortunate or careless. He is an exception and need not worry over the problem. He cannot refute the statement of an expressman who declared that he used to keep himself supplied with fruits, biscuits, nuts, candies, etc.

The Whole Trade Suffers.

One grocer has expressed belief that the Canadian retail trade loses $10,000 a year through the channels referred to. The question is to stop up these leakages. It is one of these cases in which evidence of a prima facie character can be surmised, but to get at the actual culprits is a different matter.

Several retailers have expressed their anxiety to see this pilfering practice stopped. But how is it to be done? That is the question.

One believes that if the grocers were well organized that they could stop it by engaging detectives in various parts of the country. A few arrests and theft convictions well published in the daily papers would have a wonderful effect he claims, and would tend to eliminate the evil.

There is no doubt that grocers are losing much through thefts of this character as well as through carelessness of the employes of railway and express companies.

Broken eggs and crockery are frequent as well as crushed fruit through rough handling; broken spice packages, pickle bottles, etc. All this carries with it a loss to the grocer and if a means could be found to stop the pilfering at least, there would be same satisfaction.

CAREFUL ABOUT GIVING CREDIT.

West Toronto, June 30.—At the beginning of the present year J. S. Adamson, grocer at 1914 Dundas St., decided to cut loose from the credit system of doing business and to begin afresh, as it were, but this time practically eliminating credit in an endeavor to establish a cash system. To-day he is pleased with the step he took and states that he would not go back to the old rut which caused so much trouble to get in his money.

Mr. Adamson prepared an announcement, a copy of which was sent to each of his customers. Part of the circular was as follows:

> "During the year we have been greatly handicapped in having to pay strictly cash for nearly all our goods, and we have decided, commencing January 1st, to do a strictly cash business. This new policy ought not to work as a hardship to our customers, but will prove a benefit to them, as we will be able to sell at even more reasonable prices than ever."

As will readily be believed, this was not determined upon without some hesitancy. It was fully believed that some customers would be lost and it may be said that it was hoped that a few particular persons would devote their attentions to some one else, if any one would accommodate them. The firm had no idea just what would be the extent of the loss of customers. It was this uncertainty that created the uneasiness, but the Rubicon was crossed on January 1st for better or for worse.

In the beginning there were quite a few who dropped out for a time, but it was noticeable that the majority came back. Mr. Adamson stated that he had no particular method. Having decided to try the cash system he simply tried it and now states that he would not go back to the other method. Of course, it is not to be understood that he is not allowing credit to some persons. He felt when he took the step that there would be a few to whom he would give credit, but the number is so small that it is hardly worth mentioning.

What about outstanding accounts? Well, there is a fairly good 1900 crop still on file and it is still a source of worry to at least some extent, but in contrast to that, there is nothing from the present year's business that will cause a second thought. The old "standbys," those who were responsible for the change are nearly all cash customers now and hopes, in Mr. Adamson's mind, are bright for an ultimate suitable reckoning.

The situation of the grocer whose books are going to seed is really a humorous one. Those who owe the larger sums of money in most cases are possessed of the most nerve and conduct themselves as if they had some ownership in the business. Instead of being commanders of the situation, it would seem that the grocers are the commanded. When the grocer finds his patience about exhausted, and his efforts to secure settlement are fruitless, he begins to think about stamping out the credit business.

Mr. Adamson, in his case, stated that he was heartily tired of the credit game to everybody, and regrets now that he did not make the decision long ago to give credit to only those who are positively safe.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Departmental Store Cut Price of Sugar and Retailers Saved Money by Buying Heavily—Interesting Item from the Pacific Coast—Merchant Serves Cold Water to Customers—Season for Gem Jars—A Method of Displaying Cakes.

Cunning Retailers Made Money.

Vancouver, B.C., June 29.—There was recently a change in the grocery price list of the departmental store of David Spencer, Limited. To introduce the newly opened grocery section, money was spent indirectly by cutting prices one of the principal examples being granulated sugar. This was jobbed at $5.90, and according to the terms of sale it must be secured through a jobber, who gets a five per cent. commission. Spencer sold it at $5, losing possibly 90 cents a sack, and even if he got the jobber's commission it was offered at a price much lower than the retailer could buy for.

The result was that nearly all the small retailers took advantage of the offer and using a buyer not connected with their stores stocked up with this sugar through Spencer's. It meant a saving of 90c a sack to them, which is out of all proportion to the profit that they have hitherto enjoyed on this article. So great was the number of orders that they could not be filled until a day or two after received.

Now, however, sugar has been taken out of the published price list, though flour and some other standards are offered at prices lower than wholesale.

Serves Customers Cold Water.

Victoria, B.C., June 29.—A local merchant during the warm weather keeps a jar of cold water in a conspicuous place in his store for the benefit of his customers. It is much appreciated by a the large number that pass through his store, and on a show card are the words: "Cold Water—Help Yourself." The water is kept fresh and cold, the glass tumbler clean and everything about it is inviting. It is only a simple little idea but it helps.

What Ambition Did for Him.

New Westminster, B.C., June 29.—Ambition and industry are great assets to a person who wants to enter the grocery business for himself.

C. A. Welsh of this place came out here about 20 years ago from Ontario. Starting first as an assistant for Barrett & Gunn, he was ultimately appointed manager of the Jubilee Grocery Co. Being thrifty and ambitious, Mr. Welsh decided to go on his "own hook." He opened his first store in 1896. His business began to grow and it has kept on growing until to-day his average monthly turnover is well into five figures. Not very long ago he opened a new store at Sapperton, which is in charge of his brother Howard Welsh. Mr. Welsh has 14 employes and keeps three delivery wagons busy. One of his assistants, Mr. Eagle, has been with him ever since he started business 13 years ago.

The success of this grocer, however, was not the success of uninterrupted growth; for only two years after starting in business he was one of the many tradesmen whose business was burned out in the memorable fire at New Westminster. Everything he had was lost in that fire, and he had to start again with a debt of $10,000 to clear up. This was a disaster that would have disheartened the majority of men. Not so this old Ontario boy. There was work to do; money and credit to arrange for, a new store to build, and it was done. To-day Mr. Welsh can talk about it and smile.

"It was after all an experience that perhaps did a whole lot of good."

Displaying Fancy Cakes.

Chatham, Ont., June 30.—The difficulty experienced in selling fancy cakes from a large number of boxes piled one above another has been experienced by hosts of grocers. Of course, the difficulty does not prevent sales being ultimately made, but much time is usually expended alike by clerk and customer in making a selection, nor is the process always satisfactory to the customer who does not like, through inability to look over the whole assortment, to have something he didn't intend buying shoved off on him.

H. Malcolmson, grocer, meets the difficulty by means of an ingenious device which does not take up an extra inch of floor space. Mr. Malcolmson's store is departmentized, fancy cakes and confectionery being the main lines in one department. A large square has been cut in the top of the counter, and into this a big piece of plate glass has been fitted. Beneath the plate glass is a shallow compartment, and in this is displayed a comprehensive assortment of fancy cakes, probably five or six dozen varieties being shown, one of each kind. Cakes which sell at 20c are grouped in one corner, 30c cakes in another, 25c cakes in another part, etc.

Thus the intending purchaser has a wide selection of cakes before him and can make his choice without the least inconvenience. The device, which has been in use for some time, is a great time-saver and a notable help in facilitating sales.

Special Cheese Advertisement.

Peterboro, Ont., June 29.—E. F. Mason & Co. carried an ad. recently in a daily paper emphasizing only one line—cheese. It was conspicuous of itself and should have helped business. The word cheese appeared in large type with the following after it in small type: "A tasty, appetizing, wholesome, and most nourishing article of diet for the warm weather." It then gave a list of the leading stocks including Roquefort, Stilton, Limburger, Old Canadian, etc., giving the price of each. The ad. was especially appropriate at this time when cheese readily finds a place on the table when cold meals are offered. Ideas are what count in the grocery business as in every line and originality is a desirable quality.

The Season for Gem Jars.

Toronto, June 29.—W. J. Sawyer & Son, grocers, Yonge St., realized that with the strawberry season reaching its zenith there would be a demand for preserving jars. It was not an exceptional idea, but it manifested that this firm is up to the minute in its methods in this respect. The window displays gem jars for preserving in a simple but effective way. The window's merit, however, does not rest upon the display itself, but upon the fact that the goods had just come into their season.

MINIMUM CARLOAD WEIGHT.

This is Being Raised by Railways—Wholesalers of New Brunswick Will Oppose It.

St. John, N.B., June 29.—The wholesale merchants in this city, in common with those throughout the province, and, in fact, all over the Dominion, are much interested in the proposition of the railways to increase the minimum carload weight on groceries and other shipments to various portions of the Dominion. The merchants claim that it is even now hard on many of them to take enough goods at one time to make a carload of 24,000 pounds, while it would be proportionately harder for them to file orders for a 30,000-pound carload. When the matter comes before the Railway Commission, it is likely to be vigorously opposed by the Grocers' Guild and Hardware Association.

Speaking of the matter, G. E. Barbour, of Geo. E. Barbour & Sons, wholesale grocers, said: "The minimum car weight of fifth-class goods in the Maritime Provinces is 24,000 pounds. The new movement proposes advancing this to 30,000. This is merely a move to secure a greater earning from traffic, and nothing more nor less than a method employed by the railways of advancing rates. The new rating would force a large per centage of business now handled in fifth-class cars, to be shipped in less than carload lots. Owing to the inability of buyers to use quantities of over 24,000 pounds, the gains to the railway on traffic diverted to take the L.C.L. rates would be almost 25 per cent. on traffic affected. The wholesale trade of Canada," concluded Mr. Barbour, "will be represented before the Commission when the matter finally comes up, and will oppose the proposed change, which not only the shipper, but the general dealer and consumer throughout the whole of Canada."

DROUGHT AFFECTING CROPS.

During the past few weeks the hot dry weather has been detrimental to the crops and unless rain falls soon there will be shortages in certain lines which will mean that some future canned goods will be expensive.

Tomatoes and peas are particularly affected. The drought in the Niagara district has had a depressing effect on the tomato plants. Their growth has not been at all what it should be since the hot dry weather set in; the same may be said of peas.

If this condition continues for any length of time we will see canned peas and tomatoes pretty high this year and particularly the former as there is little or none being held over.

LEMONS UP TO $5.

Lemons have passed the five dollar mark as the result of the extremely heavy demand felt during the past ten days.

Continued cool weather afforded no incentive to even ordinary summer activity in the lemon market but when the heat wave announced itself there was immediate action. It is not so long ago that quotations hovered around the $3.50 mark. Two weeks ago The Grocer pointed out that prices were bound to advance in the face of a heavy demand and a short Sicilian crop. On several occasions reports were given calling attention to the shortage of the crop.

The Grocer at that time expressed the opinion that it would not be long until fancy lemons would bring $5. That was in the issue of June 17th.

This is referred to in order to call attention to readers that the information upon which the markets in this paper are written comes from sources which are invariably authentic. It is a simple matter to calculate the saving that purchases of lemons even a week ago would have made.

CHECK THE FRIEGHT BILLS.

In a great many stores money is being lost every day by the dealer's neglect of freight bills and all matters pertaining to the proper transportation of merchandise; for this reason freight matters should receive the most careful attention. There is good money to be made for the time spent in figuring over freight bills and making out claims for over-charges. It is an easy matter to obtain from the local railway agent and your jobbers the correct freight rates on each class of goods you handle, and this information will enable you to speedily check over the rates charged on your freight bill to see that some railway clerk has not given the shipment too high a rate. You will see the necessity for doing this, when you learn that a railway clerk who makes an error that costs the company, always has to stand the loss himself. It is only natural then, when there is any doubt on the part of the clerk as to exactly what classification your goods should come under, that you pay the higher rate.

Those dealers who use system in shipping will hardly credit the fact that some retailers return their goods without advising the jobber or manufacturer that the goods are being returned. Many wholesale houses are forced to enter these in an "unknown book" until weeks afterward the matter crops up in settling the account. It is only right that the retail dealer should advise the firm to whom the shipment is returned as soon as the goods start for the depot. Do not allow yourself or your draymen to receipt for goods that have not been received. Check the number of packages received against the express receipt or freight bill carefully. If packages are in a damaged condition when received, have your local freight agent endorse "received in bad order" on the freight bill. Then have him come to your store and check the goods over with you after the cases are open. Make a bill against the railroad company for the lost or damaged goods. If unable to get redress from the railroad company, ask your wholesaler to help you.

All railroads have what they call a minimum charge, which is the lowest amount they will charge, no matter how small the shipment. Bear this in mind and it will save you many dollars in a year; when sending in a special order for some small thing, glance around your store and take a look through your order book and you will invariably find that there is something else that you will soon need that can be ordered with that shipment.

SHIPPING ORDERS PROMPTLY.

"I had an evidence the other day of the value of doing things promptly," said a young traveler, "which I am not likely to forget. I called upon a customer who had hitherto been disinclined to favor me with business and I got a small order from him. I at once sent it off to the house, not waiting until the evening, and the merchant got the goods next day. When I called in afterwards the merchant was so pleased at the prompt shipment that I got a much bigger order, and I am now well in with him. I consider this prompt sending off of orders most essential to a traveler's success, and he should spare no pains or trouble to mail his orders by the quickest way."

There is a world of truth in this. A merchant does not order goods for prompt shipment unless he wants them, and badly too. Every day is important to him, and if he sees that the traveler and the house are co-operating together to give him speedy dispatch, he is going to give that traveler all the orders he can. It is to his interest to do so. Especially as in the present time dealers are not running on over-heavy stocks, preferring to buy more from hand-to-mouth than used to be the case.

Very few travelers, unless there are special reason otherwise, fail to send off their orders every night, but many do not take advantage of the quickest connection. Often the traveler, if he makes inquiries, can find that by catching the mail at a certain time during the day he can get his order into the house much quicker than if he waited until the evening. A man must be very hard pressed who cannot get off an order or two while doing his calls.

By taking trouble and making inquiries as to mailing service, and the best places to make connections, much saving of time is made, and the House is given a reputation for quick dispatch that is a great asset to its representative. To a really progressive and wideawake merchant this prompt delivery is more important than the question of cut prices, and a traveler can often offset the plea that his price is higher than that of a competitive house by pointing to its reputation for prompt shipment.

Convention Omitted to Discuss Business Methods

Too Much Time Spent on Legislation and Organization—Some Subjects Touched on Which Would Have Made Profitable Discussion—A Question Box Needed.

What should be the chief aim of a merchants' organization?

At the annual convention of the Ontario Provincial Board, Retail Merchants' Association, in Kingston last week, the time was spent particularly in discussing resolutions on, and in referring to, Ontario and Dominion legislation.

While undoubtedly fair legislation is an important factor to retail merchants, and while a reasonable amount of time spent in discussing it, is usually time profitably spent, yet there is another feature to retail organization which is equally as important, if not more so, and which at the Kingston convention was somewhat side-tracked.

We refer to methods of doing business in the retail store—methods for stopping the leaks and lessening the chances of failure; methods for competing with mail order houses and co-operative stores; for changing a credit business to cash and playing safely a credit business; for keeping books properly; collecting debts; buying methods; retail advertising; dressing windows; maintaining profits; handling certain customers; approaching and dealing with new customers; salesmanship, and the hundred and one other things, which, if a merchant mastered, he would care little or nothing about legislation. He would be too secure in his own business.

It is quite clear, for instance, that the only method of combating the mail order houses is progressive methods of merchants in the small centres and on the cross-roads of the country.

This has been proven time and again; merchants who give the service, the quality, the assortment and the price, have no fear of these stores, which, in the eyes of the law, are legitimate concerns.

There were two or three papers read at the convention, which, if there had been time to discuss them, would have proven profitable. One was a paper on "How the local press can be made more valuable to retail merchants, and why they should support its advertising columns"; another was, "The injurious effect that bargain counter advertisements of the Toronto dailies have on the growth of cities and towns," and still another on "The cause of the increased cost of food products from the practical standpoint of the merchants."

Yet, other than to pass votes of thanks to the writers of them, they were passed unnoticed or with little or no comment.

If a merchant knows how to advertise successfully, how to display his goods properly, and how to retain his customers, he does not need to worry much about catalogue or co-operative stores. In short, if he understands the retail business from stem to stern there is every chance of him being successful.

Organizations among the retail trade, we claim, are primarily for the purpose of exchanging ideas on methods. This tends to the production of better business men.

During the discussion on co-operative societies, E. T. Steacy, a Kingston dry goods merchant, stated that personally he was not afraid of them. He implied that he had confidence enough in his own business acumen to compete successfully against such competition. Why? Because he is a good merchant. Nevertheless, he said, he did not care to see favors shown to a few. This, taken altogether, implied that while he favored fair legislation to merchants, he put greater confidence in his ability as a business merchant, to withstand such competition. His methods would have been quite interesting.

The same note was struck by A. Sweet, a general merchant, in Winchester, Ont. He told of parties in his district sending to the mail order houses for goods which he kept in his store, simply because they didn't know he kept them.

This would have been the subject for a valuable discussion — how to best acquaint the general public on the assortment of goods carried in a general store.

There were merchants present who had questions to ask regarding business methods, but they didn't get an opportunity. One wanted to know how he could change his business to strictly cash and still be able to secure produce from farmers, pay them cash for it and make a profit in selling it to wholesale produce merchants. This, again, would have brought out a discussion valuable to everybody.

Merchants frequently fail because they are poor buyers. There were many successful merchants at the convention who possibly have buying down to a science. They could have enlightened the others.

Value of maintaining prices and profits was touched upon by H. Watters, an Ottawa merchant, but little discussion followed.

If merchants in every village, town or city had maintained prices and profits there would be little use for any contract price plan. But, as often occurs, if a manufacturer were to give a retailer a chance to make two or three per cent. extra profit, he would give it all away to the consumer. He would do this in order to get the trade on one particular article away for a few days from his competitor across the street, and eventually make a lower established price for that article in his district.

These are things that the Retail Merchants' Association should discuss minutely, as well as matters pertaining to legislation and internal organization.

Next year at Guelph there should be a question box, in which all difficulties of members should be placed. Then members will attend, feeling that they are going to be directly benefited on some point over which they have had trouble. If the R. M. A. can show that merchants who become members are going to be directly benefited in regard to the using of better business methods, it should be rewarded by a substantial increase in membership.

THE CAUSES OF FAILURE.

Here is another instance of why negligence in bookkeeping methods combined with other shortcomings will place a merchant on the road to failure.

A retail grocer in London, Eng., recently became insolvent with liabilities of $40,000 and a deficiency after meeting preferential claims of $25,000.

In reply to the official receiver the debtor made the admissions that he had never made out any balance sheet, as he thought it was not necessary. He also stopped keeping proper books, and it was not until the trustee went through his affairs that he became aware of his position, as he had been working hard in other ways to increase his business. He was satisfied now, however, he had been insolvent for a considerable time. He believed he had traded profitably up to four years ago, when competition with company shops and co-operative stores became very keen and seriously affected the small shopkeepers who bought from him as a wholesale trader. The tramways also affected his retail business, and he admitted that negligent bookkeeping also had something to do with his failure. Over $15,000 had gone in bad debts.

Merchants should be extremely careful about such matters. They are the causes of many failures in Canada. Strict attention to accounting, a watchful eye on the dead-beat as well as on the methods of mail-order houses will do a great deal to curb the tendency to failure.

Skylight in the Ceiling Brings Light to the Rear

Device a Picton Grocer Uses to Supply the Necessary Natural Brightness During the Day—A Lover of Silent Salesmen of Which He Has Many—Handles Crockery and Chinaware as well as Groceries—Uses Modern Store Fixtures.

Picton, Ont., June 30.—A neat looking grocery and crockery store combined is that of H. S. Wilcocks, as the accompanying cut indicates.

He opened a grocery store here in 1882 and 4 years later added a fancy china, glassware and crockery department. He found that the one strengthened the other.

In 1909 he remodelled his entire premises. He had new floors laid, new shelving, new silent salesmen, new wall cases, counters, etc., all in natural oak. These afford opportunity of displaying high class china goods and crockery of which he carries a stock. His grocery department has received equal attention. His counters, shelving, silent salesmen and modern receptacles for various articles all bespeak special efforts to cater to the public taste of to-day for neatness, attractiveness and quality.

Instituted Cash Business.

Contemporaneous with his remodelling, he decided to establish a strictly cash business and since November 1st, 1909, has adhered to that principle with results which he claims have been gratifying. Mr. Wilcocks bears a reputation of being a live business man and the accompanying reproduction gives a good idea of his store.

Among his fixtures are to be seen a coffee grinder, computing scale and cash register. He devotes one show case to cigars and tobaccos, another to confectionery and a couple to displaying some of his high class chinaware.

Near the rear of his store will be observed a skylight in the ceiling which provides light to that section.

MOVE TO DISSOLVE ASSOCIATION.

Southern Wholesale Grocers to Appear in Court on the First Monday in August.

A bill was filed in the Federal Court at Birmingham, Ala., on June 15, by the United States to dissolve the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, and to enjoin its further operations on the ground that it is a trust in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. It is charged that the association has coerced and prevented manufacturers from selling direct to the consumer, retailer or wholesale grocer in the Southern States, unless the grocer was listed in the association's "Green Book." It is also charged that manufacturers have been coerced and urged to fix selling prices and to refuse to sell to any wholesale grocer who does not maintain the prices so fixed and listed; also that manufacturers have been induced to bill their goods at an enhanced price and to turn over a percentage to the president of the association, who rebated the same to the jobbers maintaining such limited selling price. A wholesale firm to be listed in the "Green Book" had to be endorsed by a majority of the other firms in the locality, and unless such firm was enlisted it was unable to secure direct buying privileges from those manufacturers who obeyed certain "rules of practice" adopted by the association.

FINED FOR STUFFING CHEESE.

L. Lalonde and F. Robinson, Papineauville, Que., pleaded guilty last week to a charge of "stuffing" 21 cheese with inferior or worthless curd. The charge was laid by Inspector Macpherson, of the Dairy Commissioner's staff. The defendants were each fined twenty-five dollars and costs and there will be a large loss on the cheese in addition. This is the second case which has come up under the law of 1907-08.

Montreal, June 30, 1910.

Business is picking up here in nearly all lines. This is rather unusual at this time of year, but undoubtedly the weeks of rainy weather had the effect of holding back the natural course of trade, which is now becoming apparent.

A brisk business is being done by a local concern packing hampers for week ends and picnic parties. Others are gradually working into the business.

The evaporated apple trade has received an unexpected call during the past few days.

Last Sunday the picnic of the Grocers' clerks was held. It was a pronounced success, nearly three hundred taking advantage of it.

Sugar.—There is a gradual strengthening of the raw markets which has had a good effect on the refined prices. Also present hot weather has produced a marked increase in demand. Outside buying is slightly improved, and taken all through, the situation is a strong one. No changes are looked for in the immediate future.

Syrups and Molasses.—The trade in syrups at present is somewhat slow. Prices, however, remain steady.

In molasses there is a decided improvement in the jobbing trade. The volume seems to be increasing daily, and the orders call for larger quantities. Importers have not as yet felt the effect of this, but the expectation is pretty well founded that it will be only a short time before they do. Prices are firm.

Dried Fruits.—Reports from Greece have it that bad weather has been the order of the day, and as a result prices seem to be on the iup grade. As yet no change has taken place in the local situation, but it is expected before long. Prunes are having a very good sale at present, at firm prices. Valencia raisins are also showing up well.

Evaporated Apples.—There has been a marked improvement in the demand for this commodity during the past week. As far as can be determined this seems to be coming principally from the eastern townships. At any rate prices are still firm at former quotations, with a somewhat higher trend.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—Stocks of peas held locally are much reduced at present, and buyers are having troubles in filling their requirements. The tomato boom is holding out well. Other lines of vegetables are in good demand and supplies are none too good. Altogether, it looks like higher prices in some lines.

In fish, canned sardines and humpbacks are improving, and the former are scarce.

Lobsters and high-grade salmon are in good demand.

Tongues present the feature in canned meats. They are very scarce.

TORONTO.—Stocks are pretty well cleaned, according to general reports. Some jobbers stated that factories had practically exhausted their stocks in the lines which have received heaviest demand. Generally speaking, the stock of peas, corn, tomatoes, etc., is light. The outside demand is helping to further reduce the spot stock, tomatoes recently receiving a good call. The attention of those interested in canned goods is now directed toward the new crops, and the new pack. There is an old saying from a popular song, "Blame the weather man," and at the present time this individual has been passing around the wet goods in all too stinted a supply. Copious showers will do a world of good right now when the new crop is reaching a critical stage. Tomatoes are beginning to show signs of the drought, according to one man who had recently been over the ground. Peas are not doing well, even without rain, but some state that already the crop has suffered to a certain extent.

As regards strawberries, there is somewhat of a difficulty experienced in a scarcity of labor. This is pretty well substantiated, and as a result, jobbers are not expecting lower prices. In fact, it is believed that the opening prices will be high. The canned goods situation is rather unsettled, but considerable of the doubt would be allayed if a generous supply of rain was immediately received. Prices are changed but little. Corn is quoted slightly higher by some.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—
Sugar—Active and firm.
Currants—Strong.
Olives—Firm.
Canned Goods—Stocks light.

Toronto, June 30,1910.

Sugar is really the most conspicuous item in this week's markets. An impetus to the sugar trade has been received from the new fruit crop which is abundant, at least as far as strawberries are concerned. As a result the chief conjecture is in regard to another advance. Sugar is firm in all the markets. Since June 17th raw sugar advanced in London 9d. There is but little raw sugar in New York and conditions seem to have combined to give additional strength to the market. The demand is active and strength is a feature. Under these conditions it may be understood that an advance is being looked for if not at once, at least in the not too distant future. It remains to be seen what the outcome will be, but sugar is valuable property and will retain its value for the next two months unless unforeseen conditions arise.

General trade is good. In every line leading jobbers report that they have had a good share of business and there are many who expect when the returns for the spring months are totalled that they will reach larger figures than last year.

With the exception of sugar there is no particular feature. Trade in dried fruits is good and futures are strong. Light cereals are selling rapidly just now and orders are piling in.

The weather has been the subject of more or less concern of late, in so much as it affects the crops and general conditions. Continued drought in the west is proving detrimental to the crops and the wheat market has undergone a sharp advance. It is hoped by the trade that there will be no serious results as everyone is looking forward to large returns from the west this year. The same weather conditions are said to be affecting canners. Peas and tomatoes are referred to particularly but as yet nothing serious has occurred. Heavy rains will mean a mint of money to the country.

Sugar—A stronger tone has been given the sugar market during the past week and there is a possibility that in the not distant future another increase may be made in the list of prices. Local trading is active and the market has strengthened up considerably. At the present time buying is heavy as is also delivery. From all reports the fruit crop is likely to be heavy. Strawberries have been exceptionally plentiful and to a large degree have occasioned the firmness that sugar has received. Opinion as to higher prices was not unanimous among jobbers and manufacturers. That a decline was out of the question was generally held. Others remarked that if sugar went further up the scale it would not be for some time and others again said that under the conditions they felt an increase was quite likely. At any rate sugar is good property. The demand will continue through July and August and will be felt even later. A jobber remarked, "It is few grocers you find who are willing to speculate on sugar, but the minute an advance is registered they want you to forward shipments at the old price. Of course, that is contrary to the agreement, but everybody does it."

Dried Fruits—The demand for dried fruits continues fair. There is no new feature in this regard. As to future stocks raisins and currants retain their firmness. The Valencia raisin crop according to a letter from Spain is less than that of last year. Higher prices than those of last year are expected at the opening and those now offered are from three to five shillings higher or about ¾ of a cent per lb. Currants remain strong.

Winnipeg, June 30, 1910.

The exceptional hot weather continues and trade in all grocery lines is much affected by it. There has not been a great reduction in the demand on the general staples and there has been a great stimulus given to special lines. Travelers' orders are taxing wholesalers, who in turn are pressing brokers and importers for fresh stocks. A local broker, in speaking of the general western trade, stated that the big demand for goods at present was based upon the increased population and the prospects for a large wheat harvest this year. It is evident that there is plenty of money in the country, for only high-grade stuff is in demand and advancing prices do not curtail the output.

Sugar—This market is quite steady in harmony with the general continental trade. The output is heavy and there is no anticipated change in prices. There has been a recent revival in the powdered product.

Foreign Dried Fruits—The report of frost in fruit centres in California is not looked upon seriously just now, as it is believed the output next season will be very heavy. Currants have become somewhat weaker on the local market, a condition that will be only temporary. Dates also have been reduced half a cent. All other lines are quite strong, although the fresh fruits trade has weakened the demand for all dried lines.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, N.S., June 30, 1910.

The first native strawberries arrived here on Wednesday, and for the next two weeks the commission men will be busy. The opening price was 17c per box. With the increased receipts, however, from now on the price should drop. If the weather holds good, the crop this season promises to be very heavy. Usually in the past Ontario berries have been on the market long before the native stock, but so far this season no berries from the upper provinces have been marketed here.

Prices of sugar remain unchanged, the best grade of granulated being quoted at $5.20. Some of the dealers say that they would not be surprised at an early advance, now that the preserving season is near at hand.

A refrigerator car is now running between Halifax and points in the upper provinces. This iced car leaves here every Saturday for Montreal, over the Intercolonial. The shipments of fresh fish that are being made are very heavy. This trade shows enormous development; the shipments increasing every week.

Despite the low prices, dealers say that there is not much doing in the flour trade. All the dealers are reported to have large stocks of flour on hand.

Butter is in good supply, the receipts being above the average for the season of the year. Prices are unchanged from

CATALOGUES AND BOOKLETS.

The Eureka Refrigerator Co., Toronto, have just issued Catalogue No. 22, which they are sending out to the grocery trade. It is illustrated with half-tone cuts of the various grocery refrigerators sold by the company, each of which is described and priced. In addition to the abovementioned, they also show cuts of a refrigerator and showcase combined and a fish or poultry box.

The McCray Refrigerator Co., Kendalville, Ind., U.S.A., are also sending out an attractive catalogue, printed in several colors. It is Catalogue No. 67, and many of its pages show half-tone cuts of handsome store interiors; there are also several illustrations of the product of the company, and some good information on what refrigeration is and the operation of refrigerators.

TO PREVENT REFLECTIONS.

Editor Canadian Grocer—Can you tell us how to obviate the glare from the sidewalk from blinding the show windows. We are on the sunny side of the street, have a large overhanging awning, but during the day nothing can be seen in the window except the reflection of the sidewalk. We feel that there is some cure for this trouble, but we do not know it. Can you tell us?

COLLECTING SMALL DEBTS.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—We have read with interest an article in your issue of the 3rd inst. by E. Askunas, secretary R. M. A., Chatham, in which he points out the lack of legal machinery for collecting small debts, and suggest a remedy.

We have been in the collecting business in Winnipeg for several years, handling largely accounts for retail merchants, and have been impressed with the deplorable lack of recourse of the retail merchant, as against his delinquent debtor—this in the face of efficient remedies, easily obtainable.

In this province it is next to impossible to enforce payment of a small debt. The procedure is by a proportionately expensive writ of special summons. After ten days' default judgment is signed, if the debtor has not been wary enough to delay matters a month or more by putting in a bogus dispute note. Six days after judgment has been signed, and before the debtor can be brought before a judge for examination, it is necessary to take out an absolutely useless writ of execution, costing from some $2.50 upwards. Following this are two judgment summons. The debtor, not having to appear on the first, waits for the second. After an outlay of from $10 upwards, he then comes before a County Court judge for examination, who, in an average of less than two minutes, makes an order for payment of from $1 to say $5 per month, first payment to be made in a month or two from date; or possibly after hearing an ingeniously concocted hard-luck story dismisses the summons. Where the order as above is made, nine times out of ten it is not obeyed, and the array of affidavits, orders and services necessary to enforce it costs more than the claim is worth.

It would seem to us that the remedy lies in the establishment of a small debt court, along the lines suggested by Mr. Askunas. By this means a duly appointed presiding official could inexpensively, and to the advantage of both creditor and debtor, adjust and enforce payment of small debts.

The merchants interested should look to their provincial representatives.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, and trusting that Mr. Askunas may succeed in having his "Scheme for collecting small debts" put into practice.

Heavy Production Affects Provision Market

Butter and Eggs are Received in Large Quantities and Prices Seek a Lower Figure—Output of Cheese is Also Heavy—Season has Witnessed Bountiful Supplies—Country is not Wanting in Sufficiency of Produce—Easier Feeling in Pork Products Broilers are Quoted Lower.

The provision market is in good condition, with supply meeting demand in an even and regular trade. Butter, cheese and eggs, in point of production, have not fallen off. In regard to cheese it has probably reached its highest point. The flush season generally extends from the middle of June until the middle of July, with a gradual decline until the close of the season. Prices as quoted at board meetings are steady, and, if anything, slightly higher. The increase in cable enquiries has, no doubt, had a beneficial effect on the market. Old cheese is still a favorite among the retailers' customers.

Butter production is still heavy and an accumulation is reported, with a consequent easier feeling to the market. There has been no particular change in the egg market. Supplies are liberal and demand is meeting them. The quality is somewhat affected by weather conditions. An easier feeling is noticeable in pork products. Receipts of dressed hogs have been liberal and lower prices have been consequent. There has been no special change in the market since a week ago.

MONTREAL.

Provisions—There is no change since last week's drop in prices, except that trade has improved considerably. Live hogs have a tendency toward weakness, but otherwise the market is steady.

Provisions—Easier prices have been noted in various lines, and the only explanation offered was a slight temporary over-production. SMOOTH STRANGER POSES AS AGENT.

The following despatch sent out from Sarnia, Ont., speaks for itself:

Sarnia, June 24.—W. J. Robson, representing the MacLean Publishing Company, of Toronto, is in town to-day. He found on making his calls, that a man, giving the name of W. Hill, had made the rounds the day before yesterday and passed himself as agent for different trade journals.

He called at W. J. Barries' plumbing shop.

"Let me see, I believe you owe a small account to the MacLean Publishing Company."

"No, I do not," said Mr. Barrie, and then explained his standing. The smooth one then collected a year's subscription from Mr. Barrie in advance.

Mr. Hill had all the trade journals in his possession and did a land office business.

Mr. Robson said that the matter will at once be placed in the authorities' hands, and if possible will be apprehended.

[Editorial Note.]—Only the bona-fide subscription representatives of the MacLean trade papers carry receipt and renewal blanks made out in the company's name. No order should be given to or renewal placed with any person who does not have the company's regular blanks.

MAIL ORDER HOUSES GIVE CREDIT.

Two large Chicago mail order houses have now started a credit system among farmers, whereby they are giving from forty-five to ninety days' credit on all goods. The credit system is very complete in many instances, and some influential farmer is often given his goods much cheaper for the service he renders in giving the houses lists of names and guaranteeing the integrity of his neighbors.

The credit system might be expected as the next step in the methods of catalogue houses, as they exist in Canada. If retailers were only as keen for business, were working harmoniously together and were in fighting trim, there would be less apprehension in this regard.

GETTING NEW CUSTOMERS.

There are different ways in which the merchant may keep himself posted with reference to the new families coming to town. One man recognized that the draymen of his town should know a thing or two in that respect, so he agreed to supply them with their business cards on the understanding that they would furnish him with the names and addresses of newcomers. First knowledge in this case was used to good advantage in swelling his list of customers.

Turn Your Losses Into Gains

By adopting the one plan that will enable you to handle credit customers successfully and make them just as safe as the cash buyers.

Flour Market Possesses a Much Stronger Tone

Continued Dry Weather in th tain Extent—Wheat Takes Sh in Consequence—A Good Rain Restore the Market to Normal Might Prove Serious.

e West Threatens Crops to Cer- arp Jump and Flour is Affected Will Relieve the Situation and Conditions—Continued Drought

The wheat market seems at the time of going to press to be hanging in the balance and as farmers generally are most prone to worry, there must surely be some who are lying awake these nights thinking of what the morrow may bring. Continued dry weather with but a sparse rainfall has boosted the price of wheat fourteen cents during the past week.

But little attention was paid to the statements of the weather "knocker" at first, but his earliest "forecasts" seem to have been substantiated and the feeling has grown that the situation is beginning to look rather serious. A good shower of rain, several days of it, would quickly dispel all doubt and relieve the farmers and others of their worries. Montreal flour is quoted ten cents higher as a result of the firmness in the wheat lists. Tuesday the stock board saw another sharp increase in wheat and it is expected that there will be some wild fluctuations until the exact conditions are learned.

The feeling in the oats market is better and it is believed the lowest price has been left behind.

MONTREAL.

Flour—Flours are all up ten cents, on account of the rise in wheat, as well as the rather light condition of local supplies. The increase has seemed to have a somewhat stimulative effect on buying, and prices are firm at the new quotation.

TORONTO.

Flour—Local millers report business good. Considering conditions of the general market, they are in fact "very good," to use one miller's words. There has been no change in prices as the result of stronger prices in wheat due to weather conditions. Should the present dryness continue, prices will undoubtedly go higher locally. Millers are, however, praying for rain.

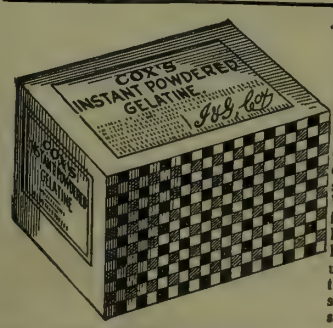
[Editorial Note]—At the time of going to press an advance of ten cents in the price of flour was announced. The reasons for this step are those mentioned above. One leading miller stated that the advance was hardly enough, he thought, for with wheat at its present price, he said there was hardly a profit to the miller. He expected flour to go higher if current wheat prices held firmly. The quotations given are for car lots. Quantities less than that are quoted at 10 cents extra.

FOR BREAD DELIVERY.

Indiana Bakers Must Wrap Loaves in Paper Before They are Taken From the Factory.

Bread must be wrapped before leaving the bakery according to the laws of the State of Indiana. The particular clause respecting it, is as follows:

"The pure food law of 1907 and the sanitary food law of 1909 define unsanitary conditions as they exist in food-producing and distributing establishments, and provide that all food in the process of manufacture, sale and distribution be securely protected from flies, dust and dirt. Bread, pasteries and other baker's goods which are not delivered to the consumer at the bakeshop, but which are carried unwrapped to grocery stores and other distributing stations in wagons, carts or similar conveyances, are not properly protected, and the practice is in violation of law. In order that the sale of bread, pasteries and baker's goods may be conducted under sanitary conditions and in conformity with the laws of the state, bakers are hereby instructed that on and after July 1st, 1910, all such goods, including bread, buns, rolls, biscuits, cakes, crackers, pies and other baker's products must be properly protected while in transit or while displayed for sale. For the guidance of bakers, it is ordered that bread shall be wrapped in suitable paper wrappers, or placed in suitable bags before being taken from the bakeshop, and that all other goods shall be carried in tight, dust-proof boxes or cartons."



There's a difference in the taste of a "Perfection" Cracker which distinguishes it from every other Soda Biscuit.

The difference begins by the better mixing of the choicest materials, and by the better baking of the biscuit in modern sanitary ovens.

The difference is protected and preserved for your customer by the package of the biscuit, which effectively retains the freshness and excludes all dust and dirt.

Who said Five Roses is too good?

PERHAPS, Brother Grocer, you have said it yourself that FIVE ROSES is too good for YOUR custom—they won't pay a fair price—

Quality has no selling force in your vicinity.

Then, let us say we are glad this is your only objection.

And let us tell you of conditions as they exist in the big city of Montreal.

In the big city slums are to be found the very poorest of the poor, folks who bite every copper before they spend it, to whom a dollar assumes big proportions, being seen through Poverty's microscope.

More than all others, Necessity compels this buyer to force the very last drop of money's worth out of every "nickel."

Everything is examined, tested, results compared with lynx-eyed Economy.

For they cannot afford not to purchase Quality.

These are the folks who bake their own bread; these are the women with their own hands in the dough.

And they purchase their flour "by the loaf"—so much money, so much flour—so much flour, so many loaves, you see.

The flour producing the most bread, the best bread.

They eat more bread than richer folks—they must. They buy more flour.

The most particular when quality is at stake—their only luxury being the high quality of their necessities.

This discrimination of the slums in flour buying has been noted in the largest cities—New York, Chicago, Boston, etc.

And we have seen it with out own eyes in Montreal, Brother Grocer.

Our travelers tell us—our books confirm it—that in the very poorest districts of Montreal—French "down east"—Hebrews back of the "Main"—Irish in "Griffintown"—are to be found the most enthusiastic users of FIVE ROSES flour.

It is not the cheapest flour they could buy, but they can't afford a cheaper.

Your constituency has never known such poor folks, Brother Grocer.

Will YOU tell us now that FIVE ROSES is too good for your trade?

Whose earning capacity is so much better?

An Abundance of Canadian Fruit on the Market

Strawberries are the Feature of the Present Quotations — Large Quantities Reported From all Parts of the Country—Saturday of this Week or Monday of Next Should Find Prices at the Bottom Figure—Lemons are Very Strong and There are no Indications of Weakness to the Market—Supply of Fish has Improved.

The fruit market is gradually reaching its season of greatest activity with supplies generally sufficient to meet the demand. There is apparently an abundance of strawberries throughout the country and prices are gradually going down. The Grocer's statement last week that it would be a rush sale has been borne out so far. It remains to be seen how long the supply will continue.

An editorial column recently contained the remark that the lemon market follows the mercury like a cat chasing its own tail. The recent hot wave was felt throughout the whole country, and created an abnormal demand for lemons. The supply of the same quench-relievers has not been too heavy and the result was higher prices. Fancy stocks are particularly strong.

It may be remarked in conjunction with the above that the warm weather is not going to leave yet awhile and lemons should enjoy a good sale at fancy prices. Bananas are selling steadily; Canadian cherries are on the market, fair of quality and price. Another week should find material changes as the Canadian season develops both as to fruit and vegetables. Buyers should follow the market carefully as it is action that counts in handling fruits.

By the end of the present week or during the early part of next, strawberries should be at their lowest quotation, quality taken into consideration.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits—The local fruit market is in receipt of a large shipment of bananas this week, 25 cars. This has as yet caused no weakening of prices, but it would not be at all surprising if it did. Lemons and late Valencia oranges are showing great scarcity. Prices are firm, and show signs of an early advance. Grape fruit are also scarce. Fine local and western strawberries are on the market at from 6-8c. This week promises to be the big week for them. Prices will undoubtedly be lower.

Vegetables—Trade is very slack this week. Owing to the tremendous supplies of fresh vegetables arriving daily dealers are at their wits' end to dispose of them. Fish—Gaspe salmon is arriving in good quantities and the prices had another drop this week, but as the fish will surely get scarce, prices are expected to stiffen now. Brook trout are scarce along with most lake fish. Ocean fish such as haddock, cod, halibut are plentiful. The mackerel season is drawing to a close, that is the summer schools, and the crop is short. It is close season in many districts for lobsters. Trade is fair, with demand a little better than usual at this time of year.

TORONTO.

Green Fruits—Toronto's fruit market, the distributing centre as it is for a large portion of inland Ontario, is now the scene of daily activities that reach almost gigantic proportions. Canadian fruit is arriving in large quantities but there are also car load shipments coming from California. Strawberries during the week have been the centre of attraction and business has been heavy. The quality has been good and as to quantity the crop is believed to be one of the best. Canadian cherries are also being received. They are of fair quality and sell at from 60 cents to $1.25. There has been a good demand for watermelons and cantaloupes. Lower prices are quoted for the latter. In regard to strawberries the decline has been gradual and the higher prices seeming to have been sustained longer than necessary. At least that is an opinion that retailers have expressed.

The California stock arriving consists of apricots, plums, pears, peaches, oranges, etc., and as found on display is a splendid line of fruit. Lemons have been in demand to such an extent that the supply proved altogether too limited, especially in the fancy lines. Verdellis

PROTECTING RETAILERS.

Wholesale Grocers of Spokane Adopt Agreement Asserting Their Loyalty to the Retail Trade.

The wholesale grocers of Spokane have adopted the following agreement:

"That the wholesale grocers of Spokane exercise the utmost loyalty to the retail dealers in selling only to those who are entitled to buy at wholesale.

"That we do not encourage new merchants in embarking in business in places already overcrowded with competition.

"That we refuse financial support to the incompetent dealer who has not the ability to succeed and who, through ignorance of the cost of doing business, sells goods at a loss, thus causing his competitors much annoyance and loss of legitimate profit.

"In doing these things, which are fair to both ourselves and customers, we can expect and will receive the support of the retail merchants throughout the Inland Empire."

Wellington M. Howe, grocer, Arnprior, Ont., has sold to D. Tuffy, formerly of Cobden, Ont. Mr. Howe intends taking trip to the west for his health.

Artist's Touch to the Display that Sells Goods

Calgary Clerk Points Out a Difficulty in Dressing a Window Which Will be Profitable—Slip-shod Methods of Some Grocers Who Fill a Window Simply to Cover the Bare Boards—Encouraged by His Employer.

The actual test of a window is obtained by a glance over the sales sheet. Did it lubricate business, and were all the goods sold that composed the display?

These questions were suggested by a clerk in a Calgary, Alta, grocery store, who states that his aim is to build up a window that will not only attract attention, but will lure the people into the store, with a desire to have some of the goods on display. He admits that there is no positive prescribed method to follow, and that even windows that have received the most attention may prove failures as far as bringing in new business goes.

He referred to grocers who have windows that are well suited for dressing, but which the proprietor fills in with a hodge-podge of goods merely for the sake of having something in the window and of keeping it from being entirely bare.

"Of course, the grocer who is actuated only by this desire receives no benefit," he maintains. "He does not believe in window displays because he never attempted to get anything out of them, and no doubt discredits stories of what others have done in this respect. Grocers or merchants of any kind who come under this list were born about a century too late. They would have been more at home in one of the old-time shops that are made the butt of jokes in the comic supplements."

But going back to this particular clerk, he is possessed of the laudable ambition to become a window-dressing artist, and he is not unwilling to work after hours now if need be to prepare windows.

Keeps an Eye on Results.

"I would like to become good enough at this work to be able to demand a good salary for it alone. I like the grocery business and have no desire to leave it, but I like window dressing, and particularly do I like to watch for results from my work."

This clerk is employed in a store of ordinary size, but there is something about the entire effect that gives it distinction. The shelves are neatly arranged, with goods, and there is a general appearance denoting that some one has more than a passing interest in both the interior and exterior.

"I like a good Saturday window," he remarked in a casual way. "I like to have the window looking good all the time, but it feels good to finish the week with better business than even you expected, and I find that a window will help a whole lot in that respect."

He explained that his employer encouraged him to dress the window as often as he liked, provided it did not interfere with business too much.

The Artistic Touch.

When asked his opinion of how the touch that made a window successful could be obtained, he answered: "Now you've got me. I do not know, and I don't think any one can answer that question. Some men can paint pictures and others can scarcely paint a barn. It's the same thing with windows. First you have to get the idea. At least, I believe that best results are obtained when the whole window has been previously thought out. Elaborateness does not always have the best effect. In fact, for the ordinary grocery store, the simple idea should only be attempted.

"You've got to get the people interested first. You have won the initial step if you get them stopped in front of the window looking at your display. You should make the general public feel that they need this article. A good show card, aptly worded, can help a lot in getting this part of your system to work and after that it depends upon the people themselves."

It is gratifying to find that this end of the grocery system is not overlooked in at least some stores. They are very much in the minority, it is true, and for that reason those who realize the import-

Do You Know That Dutch Bakers are the Best Bakers in Christendom?

Not only does cleanliness—characteristic of the Dutch—reign supreme in the bakeries of the Biscuit Fabrick DeLindeboom at Mydrecht, Holland, the home of Frou-Frou, but the quality of the ingredients used has been, and ever will be, a most important factor in this world famous bakery.

The process of making Frou-Frou, handed down from generation to generation, is one of the most valuable trade secrets of the present age, and the grocer who recommends this matchless wafer to his customers, is recommending something that will go a long way towards binding still closer his store to the householder who appreciates good things to eat.

Will you, Mr. Grocer, let us prove our claim by sending you, free of charge, a sample tin of Frou-Frou? We will do so on receipt of your name and address.

BOWSER

Long Distance System

For Handling

Kerosene or Gasolene

meets the highest approval because it is SAFE

The old method of handling oil by gravity or any kind of pressure was very dangerous, as a leak in a joint or elsewhere was most apt to result in an explosion.

Every feature of the Bowser Long Distance Underground Storage System meets the requirements of Insurance Companies and Fire Underwriters.

HEAR IS THE PLAN:—The oil is stored in a tank buried outside, any distance that you desire away from the building. The tank is made of best heavy sheet steel riveted and soldered, tested and guaranteed leak and evaporation proof. It is painted with three coats of asphaltum, which absolutely prevents the damp earth from acting upon the metal. The pump is the latest improved, all metal, and measures accurately gallons, half-gallons, quarts or pints at a stroke. The nozzle is fitted with a lever shut-off that absolutely prevents evaporation.

THE SYSTEM HAS NEVER CAUSED A FIRE, nor has an explosion of a Bowser Tank ever occurred. One hundred aud eighteen outfits passed through the San Francisco Fire--not one explosion resulted. Some of the pumps were warped and melted by the heat, but the oil remained in good condition in the tank. The Bowser System is safe in every way.

Advice to the Retailer from Wholesale Grocers

Merchant Who Serves Apprenticeship Has the Better Chance to Succeed Thinks One—Pains to be Taken in Buying—Guarding Against Financial Leaks —Advantages in Advertising if Done Properly—An Opinion on Association Work.

Some grocers, no doubt, would consider that they were in a better position to know the retail end of the question far better than the jobber, but it must be remembered that among the latter the majority rose from the ranks of the retailer and are really post-graduate grocers. They also have extensive relations with all classes of grocers and experience teaches them where to look for the various pitfalls that prove disastrous to the retailer and to a certain extent, affect the wholesaler.

"There are so many things that require the attention of the grocer," said a Canadian jobber, "that it is really not to be wondered that the idea obtains that 75 out of every 100 retailers fail. As for myself I believe that the number must be that large in some places. I do not want to deal with the essential necessities that are required. To make a successful grocer one must in the majority of cases serve an apprenticeship in a progressive store and before he branches out for himself he should be perfectly acquainted with the cost of goods, the cost of doing business, how to meet payments and all the other details that are connected with simply the buying and selling end of the grocery business.

"You have often heard the saying 'Buy Right.' That is of great importance but how is a man to buy right if he knows nothing at all about it? The clerk who has had no experience in this respect is not much better off than the hod-carrier or mechanic who has saved up a few hundred dollars and opens a grocery store because he thinks it is an easy way of doing business.

Check Over the Goods.

"But supposing a man is acquainted with this part of the business; there is one thing that is often overlooked. When a grocer receives a shipment of goods he should go over it in its entirety. He should know first, what he ordered and taking the invoice he should make it a point to see that he has received everything he paid for.

"In the same way he should check things going out. Give honest weight, but neither above or below that which is paid for."

Store Must be Clean.

"Cleanliness is a point that should be carefully remembered," said one wholesaler. "The scrupulous housewife cannot forgive or excuse untidiness in a store and if there are signs of uncleanliness her imagination makes it worse than it may be. This of course augurs no good to the grocer. Besides, the grocer of today should realize that the public demand pure food and if he wants to create the impression that he is trying to cater to public taste in that respect, he must have his premises clean.

"A diamond in a brass setting will not attract in the same manner as it would if it were embedded in gold. A grocer aims at building up a business. He wants a customer to remain with him for years—providing he pays promptly—and tidiness and cleanliness will go a long way toward satisfying a customer and holding her. To build up trade the store must be a little better or more appealing than a competitor's. Of course 'store' in this case includes a great deal but cleanliness and neatness are decided assets."

Should be no Money Leaks.

"The successful grocer is careful to safeguard against money leaks," was still another opinion. "There are so many crevices through which money can find its way almost imperceptibly that extreme vigilance is needed at all times. There is one point to which I would call particular attention. I believe that it is a good idea to pay by cheques. Banks are numerous in cities, towns and villages and the managers are only too pleased to receive the new business. When a grocer pays by cheque he has a receipt then and there. I would recommend this idea to grocers. Some always pay travelers for goods received. In such cases they should be sure that it is by cheque. I do not cast any reflection on the traveler but I do want to impress the idea of carefulness upon the grocer.

"Price cutting is not the sign of a good business man. The old established grocery houses that we have done business with for years did not secure their strength by methods of that kind. Price cutting is only a flash in the pan. It may bring a little extra trade for the time but the public seem to get the idea that grocers of this kind should always cut prices. The people look for a continuation of the policy and if a merchant is foolish enough to keep on cutting it will not be long until he is hopelessly lost."

"Know how you stand," was the pith of one opinion. "That is always good advice. A grocer should keep his books up with his business and in such a manner that he may know at any time his exact financial condition."

Thinks Retailers Should Advertise.

The advice of another wholesaler was to advertise.

"I have watched closely," he said, "those retailers who have advertised in their daily papers—I mean those who have taken pains and presented good readable informative ads—and I have found that the majority of them have been successful merchants.

"To give an example of this I might point to the mail order houses—see the successes they have made and they have been made because they advertised their goods so that the people read their advertisements.

Grocers' Associations.

"I have no doubt in my mind," he continued, "that grocers as a body would vastly improve the general conditions of the trade if they would organize properly. Throughout the Dominion association work is only in the pioneer state. In England it has reached such a stage that regular examinations are conducted for clerks at which questions on all departments are given and the successful clerks are given certificates. A great deal of good has been done in this one respect. Grocers will some day wake up to this fact when a spirit of friendliness pervades the trade more than at present and the grocers will then become sciened in their business and the 75 per cent. or more of failures should be greatly reduced."

CANNED GOODS AGREEMENT.

Dominion Canners Reach Agreement With the Wholesale Grocers' Guild.

As the outcome of recent conferences between the Dominion Canners, Ltd., Hamilton, and the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, an agreement has been reached whereby those wholesalers who bind themselves to handle only the goods of this company receive a certain stipulated profit of 10 per cent. on vegetables and 12½ per cent. on fruits. Wholesalers who agree to this will also agree to sell to the retail trade at the canners' list prices only.

PRICE CUTTING IN B. C.

The Vancouver representative of The Grocer tells of what might be termed wholesale price cutting in his district.

He says that a representative of a Toronto manufacturing firm is in Vancouver and has been making calls on the grocers with a view to pushing his firm's product. The trouble has been that there has been price cutting, with the result that the ordinary retailer does not feel like handling it. He has either to sell at two for 45c, cost price, or tell his customer, when it is remarked that down town it is cheaper than 30c, that he cannot handle it at that figure.

"Price cutting," he continues "has also played havoc with some breakfast foods, for grocers will not stock with goods on which they are not protected from larger dealers who offer these at a low price as an attraction. One firm has held its own, and this week the traveler for this is around doing good business."

THE CHOCOLATE TARIFF.

The Department of Customs, Ottawa, have sent to the various customs collectors a special notice in regard to duty on chocolate and preparations of chocolate shipped to Canada on consignment without sale prior to shipment. There will be collected on this the same special duty as if the chocolate had been sold to an importer in Canada prior to its shipment to Canada and a deposit of 15 p.c. ad valorem will be required to be made at the time of entry to the collector, to secure payment of the special duty.

The special duty paid in excess, if any, in such case will be refunded on application through the collector in the usual form, upon proof to the satisfaction of the Minister of Customs as to the actual price realized from the sale of the goods, exclusive of all charges thereon after shipment from the place whence exported directly into Canada.

Retailers Talk Plainly of Wholesalers' Methods

Some Think More Attention Should be Given to the Retailer Than He Now Receives—Wholesalers at Times Too Anxious to Start Going New Retail Concerns Without Experience—An Opinion on Advertising Through the Trade Press—Travelers' Calls Dealt With.

The wholesaler's relation to the retailer!

Some jobbers are credited with having stated that they are not dependent upon the condition of the retail trade but they must have been misquoted. At least that is the opinion of a Canadian retail grocer who offered an authority for the statement. Continuing he said:

"The wholesaler is certainly dependent upon the retail grocer and I think there are many things the wholesale trade could do that would not only benefit us but would act as a boomerang to the benefit of the wholesaler. To begin with the retailer is the main spring in the works by which articles are distributed.

Where the Retailer Comes in.

"Of course the manufacturer turns them out and the jobbers send out their army of travelers to get these goods on the grocers' shelves; but that last step should receive the interest of all three parties to the transaction. The grocer must sell the goods before he will make another demand on the jobber, and unless they prove profitable the retailer is not going to put forth any extra efforts. The manufacturer or jobber should get away from the idea of thinking only of the present sales. Let him give us a decent profit and there will be some incentive to dress windows with the goods and boom the article. If I were a jobber or manufacturer I would show the retail trade that I was interested in their handling my goods. I would satisfy the retail end first and if they should throw their profits away by price cutting that is their own funeral.

"I am also of the opinion that price protection is a good policy. Everyone may not agree with me but I have found that articles of good quality with their prices protected are ready sellers and make a sure profit.

Retailers' Financial Standing.

"I also think that the wholesaler should take more interest in the financial condition of his customers among the trade. In that event he will be familiar with individual conditions and will know when a retailer is getting beyond his means. This should be a matter of some concern to the wholesaler just as the consumer is to us. It is encouraging to receive large orders but speculating and over confidence in buying are responsible to a large extent for many of the failures recorded in the retail trade.

"Wholesalers—and I do not include all in this respect—are eager to get new customers," was another opinion "and many are just beginners. They have saved up five or six hundred dollars and decide to go into the grocery business. A jobber stocks them with goods and as is often the case Bradstreet's or Dun's reports a failure. The stock is then sold at bottom prices and the competitive retailer of course suffers. The steady-going grocer who knows how to conduct a business sustains the loss in these cases. I know for I have been up against them. These are the fellows who do not even know what goods cost them. They disrupt a whole business community."

Calls From Travelers.

"The wholesale trade could improve the method of sending travelers around," said one retailer. "I always try to give the travelers a hearing and to treat them as business men but on some days they seem to come in an unbroken stream. I consider the traveler indispensable but some times I think this part of the business could be arranged more systematically."

Talking to Retail Trade.

The elimination of the practice of selling to the consumer was what still another retailer considered the wholesaler should do.

"We buy everything we get through the wholesaler with, of course, the exception of those goods of manufacturers which he doesn't handle and which we want. Therefore I think he should not go over our heads and sell to our customers.

"Some, I know do not do this; they are considerate in their dealing with us and lend us aid whenever called upon.

"It helps us considerably to read talks of wholesalers through the trade papers. If they have some special articles to offer, something which has not been introduced to us before, or if they have a special price to give us we are always glad to know about it before their travelers come around. It saves both the traveler's time and our time and often I know ours is valuable whether the traveler's is or not.

Inexperienced Retailers.

"I think too, that wholesalers should discountenance the practice of uninformed men starting in the grocery business. The former are often too anxious to sell such men their first orders—which are usually paid for—but keep shy of them afterwards. This only makes it more difficult for those of us who are established, because new men in the trade who know little or nothing about it, cut and slash prices until eventually they fail. Their stocks are then sold for 20 or 30 cents on the dollar and we have to suffer again."

Question of Advertising Where Two Towns Join

"Enquirer" Wants to Know if it Can be Made Profitable for the Merchant in the Smaller to Use the Local Paper—The Opinion of Forsyth, Jr., on This Question—What do Others Similarly Situated Think About it?

Where two towns adjoin each other, is it advisable—profitable—for a merchant with a small business to advertise in a local paper?

"ENQUIRER."

The above question was submitted recently by a subscriber, and to secure an answer for it The Grocer asked Forsyth Jr., grocer, Dartmouth, N.S., a successful retail advertiser, for his opinion. Dartmouth is but a short distance from Halifax, N.S. Here is what he says.—

"Replying to your recent letter: It would be difficult to answer your subscriber's enquiry from the meagreness of the data supplied.

"For example, it would make a difference if the towns were very different as to population and importance, as trade is naturally drawn toward large centres. It would also make a difference whether he was in the larger or the smaller town, and whether the paper he proposed using circulated in one or both towns.

"Assuming that one town was large and the other small, and that the merchant did business in the latter, about the most he could hope to do, unless he had advantages not mentioned, would be to prevent his trade from going to the larger town. He could scarcely hope to draw business from the larger town.

"Assuming further that one paper covered the two towns, he would be compelled to pay for a circulation in the larger town which would be of no value to him, in which case I can hardly see how it would be profitable.

"But assuming that he was in the larger town, and that it was drawing business from its smaller neighbor, advertising would have the effect of helping to hold his own trade and increase his chance of getting his share of the business from the other town and new business from his own town as well.

"One fact about advertising that must never be lost sight of is that its effect is cumulative, and in the grocery business where the profits are small, profits should not be looked for all at once; and that even when the greatest care is taken it is often not possible to trace the business to the advertisement."

The Grocer would be glad to receive the opinions of others on this question. Evidently the inquirer refers to a merchant doing business in the smaller town, where there is a local paper circulating as well as papers from the larger town.

Present-Day Methods in Using the Journal

A Dumping Ground for Lines That Cannot be Put Through Some Other Book—Object of any System is to Cut Out Unnecessary and Cumbersome Detail — Some Suggestions for the Bookkeeper, by Howard R. Wellington.

The modern journal is a dumping ground for entries which cannot properly be put through some other book of original entry, such as the Cash Book, Sales Medium, or Bill Book. Some of the items which appear in our journal are:—

1. Writing off small ledger balances.
2. Transfer entries, when an amount must be transferred from some account to another.
3. Apportionment of general charges, usually when closing the books, or month by month.
4. Correcting entries which have been charged in error.

The Journal as a Day Book is seldom used to-day, as there are so many short duplicating and triplicating ideas that we only require the book of original entry.

Some bookkeepers use the cash book for a journal as well calling it the "Journal Cash Book" and this may be done to advantage when there is only an occasional journal entry.

Long System for Recording Transactions.

The object of a system in any business is to reduce the amount of detail work, providing, of course, the desired records and statistics can be obtained by the shorter method. Some of the systems installed by so-called systematizers are so cumbersome that it necessitates a great amount of extra work instead of reducing it and we should invariably keep in mind that the shorter method is always the preferable method if satisfactory results may be obtained.

In a large warehouse in one of our largest Canadian cities a system of recording sales is in force, and we will give the different processes necessary to complete the transaction, and also endeavor to show where, at least, one step might be omitted entirely.

Necessary Steps to Complete the Sale.

1. The order is taken on an order card, which goes first to the office, presumably to be O K'd by the credit man.
2. The shipper then carefully enters item by item in a Day Book or Journal, in which he also enters the name of the customer, the date of the transaction, the quantity and price of goods sold, in fact everything necessary to make out the invoice form.
3. The third step is to write his invoice for customer from the Day Book just referred to—invoice being sent with the goods, which is the best method.
4. The name and number of parcels are now entered in a delivery book and customer signs for receiving the goods.
5. The Day Book is periodically taken to the office, probably every morning, and the transactions therein journalized for posting purposes, as follows:—

Jones, Smith & Co., Dr.
To Sales (re Mdse) ac.
(for goods detailed on page 50 Day Book.)

Some merchants might detail these goods again, but it will be seen what amount of needless work it really is.

6. The last step in the transaction is to post the ledger, and from this point forward the steps in any business are similar.

This may seem a very cumbersome system of recording sales transactions, but there is no doubt that in most wholesale and retail business, where the matter has not been thoroughly worked out, there is sure to be some step or possibly more than one step which can be done away with entirely and yet the results and the desired information are entirely satisfactory.

The Shorter Plan.

Just to give some idea of the way in which the above system may be condensed and simplified we would suggest the following:—

1. The order is taken on an order sheet which answers the purpose of a book of original entry, and if goods are delivered, the signature may appear on this order. This sheet is filed away and full particulars as to quantities, prices, date of delivery, etc., may be obtained at any time.
2. While even the posting to the ledger might be done from this order sheet, no saving can be effected, as it is necessary to have an invoice for the customer, and it is safer always to have a carbon copy of every invoice sent out, for posting purposes.

No matter how careful the copyist, mistakes will occur, and besides this an order may not be filled complete, and would not make a very clear copy for posting purposes.

4. Recording sales in retail stores may be recorded in precisely the same way described above by the use of the duplicate and triplicate Cash and Charge Books, and the Journal so far as a posting medium is concerned is not in use at all for the purpose.

The old-fashioned journal entries such as:—

"June 1st, Jim Jones, Dr., to cash Cr.
Amount of account paid to-day in full," or June 2, James Smith Dr., to mdse Cr.
Amount of goods sold to-day
10 bush. oats @ 50c $5.00

are not used in our modern bookkeeping.

This is without doubt the simplest form of journal in use to-day. Every page is ruled up exactly as per copy, and the entries may be made as briefly as possible.

In the first entry, J. Smith owes a small amount which is no good, and this entry is made to balance the account on the books, expense account being debited and J. Smith credited. An explanation should be given after each transaction, as no further record is kept of a journal entry of this nature.

TRADE NOTES.

Vanwart Bros., St. John, N.B., have installed two computing scales in place of the ones formerly used and they are an attractive addition to the store.

Maylor's, Ltd., Forrest, Ont., general merchants, are branching out as fruit growers. They have purchased a farm near the lake and have planted more than 500 peach trees, and 1,500 strawberry plants.

Only two provinces of Canada took part in the production of beet sugar last year—Ontario and Alberta. There were three factories in operation, the one in Alberta being at Raymond, and those in Ontario, at Wallaceburg and Berlin, respectively. The total production, as the figures show, was almost 20,000,000 pounds, of which Ontario furnished 16,200,000 pounds. The total acreage devoted to the culture of the beet for sugar, was 11,100 acres, of which 2,300 was in Alberta.

Business of Village Hurt by Mail Order Houses

Recent Fire in Norwood, Ont., Destroyed Several Stores and Many of These Will Not be Rebuilt — Not Profitable Say the Merchants—Catalogue Houses Blamed for This—Need of More Aggressive Measures on Part of Merchants.

A few weeks ago a midnight fire laid waste the business centre of Norwood, Ont., a village on the C.P.R. east of Toronto, about 95 miles. A few years previous the skating rink fell through, but no one offered to rebuild it. Going back a little further on one occasion a row of stores were burned and the gaping cellars still yawn at those who pass along the main street.

But following this latest devastation there have been rumors that the places destroyed will not be rebuilt. Of those property owners who were asked as to their intentions in this respect only one said he was going to rebuild. Only those acquainted with the place know the extent of the loss as the result of this last fire, and if the statements mentioned are adhered to it means that this village is on the wane.

If any of the men who used to be merchants there were asked for the cause of the apathy which settled over the business of the place and slowly but surely worked its way, it is almost a certainty they would point to the mail order houses. It is no exaggeration to state that some years ago this same place was busy and prosperous. It is the centre of a good farming district and the proprietors of the majority of the business houses were widely known as successful men. Their residences bespoke the money accredited to them.

Work of Mail Order Houses.

The story of the decline of the town is interesting, but it is too lengthy for this reference. The farmers who prided themselves on the village in their midst and its annual fall fair proved excellent material for the catalogue houses to work upon and without realizing the harm they were indirectly doing themselves they forsook their home merchants. The change of course was gradual. The merchants were submitted to a slow torture. Some of them went west, others to various towns in Ontario. Some of the villagers have stated that the property on the main street is not worth one third of what it was seven or eight years ago.

The merchants of the village did not make many strenuous efforts to offset the inroads of these outside houses. The last scene up to the present was a fire in the night, apparently of incendiary origin, followed by the claims for insurance.

Norwood is just one of many towns that are struggling along like Sinbad, the sailor.

Hard Work Necessary.

The merchants know, too well, what is affecting their business and it is not only a matter of great concern to them personally, but to all the residents of the neighborhood that home trade should be protected and maintained before it is too late and the small retailers have thrown up the sponge.

The only thing to redeem this village now is hard aggressive work on the part of the merchants. They have got to show the farmers and townspeople through newspaper advertising, personal conversation and live, up-to-date business methods if they are to succeed.

There are, of course, some exceptions; a few of Norwood's merchants are making money, but the whole general tone of the business arena there has greatly deteriorated and the only cause in sight is that the money was sent out of the village instead of being spent at home.

BETTER TO MAKE SURE.

The grocer sells as he buys, says the Charlottetown, P.E.I., "Advertiser," and the first fault is with the producer or packer of fruit or butter if the package is under size or under weight. But some legal responsibility extends to every one who sells short-weight or measure, even if it be done unwittingly, as is often the case. It is, therefore, the duty of the honest trader to make sure that there is full weight or measure in what he buys from first hands.

In Oklahoma State, organization among grocers is complete. Almost every little town and hamlet, in addition to the larger communities and cities, has its local organization and in places where there are only five or six members they have their association and are in touch with all the other associations in the state and with the questions that are receiving attention.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

St. John Grocer Lights up His Night Window Display—Dominion Day Displays Made—Vancouver Grocers Have More Trouble Over Price-cutting—Uses Netting to Keep off Flies—Erin Grocer to Give Half Trade and Half Cash for Farmers Produce—Chatham Merchant Has Novel Advertising Scheme.

Window Lighting at Night.

St. John, N. B., July 6.—There is considerable difference of opinion among retail grocers as to the value of leaving the blinds in their show windows up at night, and keeping the lights burning. The majority of the stores here do not practice it, but one of the dealers has been doing it now for several weeks, and he claims it is an excellent advertisement. He has put—electric lamps of high power, in his six windows, and they burn until midnight, giving a brilliant light, and showing to fine advantage the well-trimmed windows.

A particularly appropriate display was made just previous to Dominion Day, when the windows were filled with goods suggesting lunches. One window had cans and jars of potted and sliced meats, pickled lambs' tongue, cooked hams, etc., neatly labelled and bearing price tags and suggesting that these were suitable for sandwiches, luncheons, etc.

Another window had bottled fruit syrups, lime juice, cordials, etc., and a third presented an attractive array of fruit. In the meat department various kinds of smoked meats and vegetables were shown, and at the rear of the store, fresh meats were to be seen through the glass front of the refrigerator. It was an enticing display, and it would seem that people passing could scarcely avoid being impressed with the good things they saw, and remembering the store when they wanted some of the things shown.

This merchant believes in the scheme as a business getter, and he says he is going to keep it up. It certainly is a marked contrast to the store across the street, where the blinds are tightly drawn, and the windows dark.

Price-cutting Not Relished.

Vancouver, B.C., July 6.—Retailers are discussing how to get even with wholesalers who supplied a local department store, with staple articles at reduced rates, which enables that firm to cut prices in its grocery department. Sugar is again being quoted at 90c for an 18-lb. sack, or $5 per 100 lbs., whereas the price to the trade is $5.90. Names of certain firms have been mentioned, but the defence advanced was that the price to the departmental store, was no more favorable than to any person who gave an order of that dimension. Retailers in Vancouver, especially those in business nearer the centre of the city feel the situation keenly. Some retailers here say that this action on the part of the wholesale trade may result in what has been suggested on other occasions, namely, the establishment of a wholesale exchange by the retailers. Whether this is really meant or not, time will tell.

Protects Fruit With Netting.

Calgary, Alta., July 7.—A local grocer who specializes on fruit at this time of the year believes that it is preferable to cover the fruit with a netting. "I used to leave it uncovered," he states, "but I found that flies were attracted to it, and their presence I knew was none too appealing to the prospective purchaser.

"I did not notice it in this light, having perhaps become accustomed to it, but one day a friend stopped in front of the store and enquired about this and the other class of fruit. Around the cherries in particular there were flies attracted by the sweet fluid that escaped from the broken fruit. He called my attention to it and I was enabled to see it from the customer's standpoint. After that I was careful to have the display looking as neat and tidy as possible, and as a means to this end I used the netting. After all the display is to attract, and we should be careful to guard against anything that will turn people away."

To Keep Trade at Home.

Emerson, Man., July 6.—E. J. Koen, general merchant, who bought out Whitman & Co., recently, is putting a new appearance on his store. He is working to keep buisness at home. To do this he proposes to give the best possible service and one that cannot be superseded by any mail order house.

Mr. Koen has served about 17 years in the retail business in Ontario, having been in Kingston and Peterboro for some years.

A Novel Advertising Idea.

Chatham, Ont., July 6.—The advertising possibilities of a peculiar firm name are being played up to the full by Parrott Bros., local shoe merchants. Cuts of the familiar bird are being used largely in the firm's newspaper advertising as well as on dodgers and cards.

In addition, two large signs have been placed outside the store, one on each side of the doorway, each with a big, green parrot painted on it. The bird is represented seated on its perch, with feed-cup handy, while beneath appear the respective names, "Pere" and "Vick" by which the brothers are popularly known. Issuing from each bird's mouth in cartoon style is the catchy expression, "Our shoes are crackers."

The idea is one capable of being worked out with many names, and seems to "take" with the buying public.

Half Trade and Half Cash.

Erin, Ont., July 7.—The business carried on here by Mrs. Hamilton, consisting of groceries and confectionery has been purchased by A. Gawthrope.

The latter in his newspaper advertisement states that he is having the store re-fitted and re-stocked and announces his intention to carry a first class stock of groceries and a fine assortment of confectionery.

He accepts butter and eggs for which he pays half trade and half cash. In the rear of the store he has opened an ice-cream parlor.

GROCERS WRITE ON EXAMS.

Judging from what is required of grocers in England they have to be familiar with every branch of the trade and in the various details before they may be said to know their business.

In September the International Grocery Exhibition will be held and a part of it is the competitions which are open to grocers and their assistants. The schedule for the competition included window dressing, card writing, tea blending, coffee blending and roasting, naming and placing of dried fruits, counter display, butter judging, bacon slicing, etc.

In regard to salesmanship competitors will be required to show their methods in serving a customer, introducing to him new goods, etc. Counter and stands for goods will be provided. In regard to soliciting orders the competitors will be presumed to be calling on a regular customer for orders. There is also cocoa valuing, chocolate powder valuing, tea valuing, parcel wrapping, invoice making, etc. Examination papers are set and in each particular competition valuable prizes are offered.

A CLERK'S APPRECIATION.

Frank Scott, for 12 years a salesman with Smith & Burton, large retail grocers, Brandon, Man., has gone to British Columbia. In a letter to the Winnipeg editors of The Grocer—of which he has been a reader for years—he says:

"As soon as I get located I will certainly subscribe, I wouldn't think of doing without it as long as I am in the trade; I think every grocer, grocer's manager and, most of all, grocers' clerks, should read your paper as it is a credit to the trade and getting better all the time."

Railway Wages and the Economic Tendency

Are the Demands of the Employes in Accord With the Signs of the Times?—Influence of Money Pressure on Prices Scale—Did the United States Railways Make an Economic Mistake?

The consuming classes in America have noted with satisfaction the various signs and indications that the cost of living may be lower in the near future. Householders of every class have been exercised and perplexed by the high prices that have prevailed for the articles they had to buy.

The matter of high prices has been a more pressing question in the United States than in Canada; and it is natural that relief should first be experienced there. A number of causes now appear to be operating to relieve the situation. Monetary pressure is always a potent factor in lowering commodity prices; and monetary pressure has been distinctly threatening on both sides of the boundary line.

Another factor working in the same direction is the political situation. That seems to promise a lowering of the United States tariff sooner or later. A lowering of the tariff by Washington, under present conditions, should result in lower prices for commodities on the other side of the border. But, if it be assumed that the Washington tariff be greatly lowered without any change being made in our own tariff, the fact might operate to increase the cost of living in Canada while lowering it in the United States.

That might come to pass as follows: It is our natural products that the United States want—wheat, butter, eggs, meat, lumber, etc. If buyers from the neighboring republic are strongly in evidence here, competing most vigorously with the buyers for home consumption and the European buyers, the chances are that those products would rise in price. The Canadian producers of them would benefit, but Canadian consumers would have to pay more for them. That would be a case wherein a happening outside of our control—viz., the lowering by the Washington authorities of their own tariff—would tend to make the cost of living in Canada higher and in the States lower than at present.

In several different directions the level of prices has been receding. Wheat and cotton have fallen, and the iron market has been sensibly weakening. This points distinctly to a lower cost of living.

But one recent happening in the United States had an important tendency in the other direction. It was the wage increases granted by the railroads. It is said that the railway companies have already, in the past year, granted wage increases to their employes amounting to $130,000,000 per year, and that increases amounting to a further sum of $70,000,000 are immediately in prospect. When they made those increases the railway companies probably underestimated the strength of the resistance that would be offered to the increase of freight rates by which they expected to reimburse themselves. Now it is just possible that the great difficulty experienced by the United States railways in adjusting their revenue schedules to the higher plane of overating costs is due to the prime fact that the recent move to increase wages was an economic mistake; in other words, it may be that that action was in a direction opposite to the general economic tendency of the times. It may turn out to be the case that the cost of living will continue to fall lower and lower; and it is upon the argument of a high cost of living that the demands of the railway employes for higher wages were based.

Until the tendency of the times is more clearly apparent it can be said that the railways in Canada are wise in resisting demands of their employes for large wage increases. Perhaps those parties who have been so loudly applauding the demands of the trainmen and condemning the attitude of the companies would not be so forward if they had a better understanding of the results almost certain to follow if their advice were taken and wages jumped up to a high level.

The large shippers throughout Canada have a lively enough sense of what is involved in a big wage increase by the railway companies. They know that the next thing to be expected would be an increase of freight rates, and a diminution of their own profits. If it were more generally known that an increase of large proportions in the rate of wages paid by the railway companies to their employes would have its effect in increasing the expenses not only of the shippers, large and small, but also of every man or woman who earns a salary or lives upon a small income, there would be less frothy talk about the rights of the railway workmen and the tyranny of the big railway companies. Of course, the railway workmen are entitled to proper consideration. According to their own report the C.P.R. and G.T.R. trainmen were, up to a short time ago, paid higher wages than the employes of the American roads in the same territory. They wanted no standardization of wages then. The U. S. roads, however, increased their pay so that the Canadian roads' employes were getting the less rate. Then the C.P.R. and G.T.R. men became advocates of standardization of wages.

LESS OPTIMISTIC OUTLOOK.

The crop outlook at present is not so promising as it was two weeks ago. The cause is the lack of moisture.

Reports continue to come from the west telling of the great damage being done by the heat. However, we believe that many of these are exaggerated. A special representative of The Canadian Grocer is at the present time in southern Manitoba and while he reports crops there badly burnt for lack of rain, the outlook in the northern part of that province is much better. Rains have fallen recently there as well as in Saskatchewan and northern Alberta which will assist materially.

It therefore looks as if those who have been predicting a complete failure of western crops have been astray. The crop under area in the west is some 1,500,000 acres in excess of last year which, under average conditions, means about 20,000,000 bushels. The damage would have to be great to even overcome this.

Eastern Canada is also badly in need of rain. The strawberry crop is being shortened in a hurry and peas, tomatoes, oats are also suffering.

Yesterday's rainfall, however, will do much to aid the growing crops. More will likely follow.

OLD POTATOES CHEAP.

The potato market just now presents a feature that all retailers handling them should be aware of.

So far as the Toronto market is concerned old potatoes are a drag. It is estimated that there are some 20 cars on that market awaiting buyers. They can be bought for as low as 30 cents a bag and some dealers are credited with the statement that they cannot give them away.

A number of cars have been placed in cold storage to prevent them from sprouting as when this occurs they begin to soften. This in the past has seldom, if ever, been resorted to.

GETTING NEWSPAPER AID.

In various places the local newspaper can be used with good results in educating the people on shopping early.

At the present time the "Dundas Banner," Dundas, Ont., is advocating this. It points out editorially that an auxiliary of one of the churches adopted a resolution against long hours and especially on Saturday evenings.

Not only that but its members actually aid in bringing about this condition of affairs, as the following indicates :

> "We pledge ourselves to so arrange our purchases, and to use our influence to induce others to do the same, so as to allow the merchants, their clerks and delivery boys to get away from their respective places of business at an earlier hour than they are now permitted to do."

The "Banner" says that this is a step in the right direction and thereby assists in educating the public on purchasing early.

Merchants in other towns and cities anxious to have early closing, and particularly in the summer season, can easily enlist the services of the local press to aid in educating the public. They can usually obtain this aid for the asking, as newspapers are always willing to help in such a humane cause.

BEATING OUT THE PEDDLER.

Grocers in the larger centres will just now experience considerable opposition in the peddler selling fresh fruits. These men go from door to door shouting out their prices which are usually lower than the grocer can afford to give.

This opposition must be offset by some means. Advertising is one. If a grocer advertises that the quality of his fruit can be absolutely depended upon he will obtain much of the trade taken from his territory by the transient trader.

He must be careful to back up his advertisement statements. If he says his fruit is sound and flavory, it should be so ; and if he wants to successfully compete with the peddler it should be sound.

The grocer can also do a great deal by diplomatically comparing the quality of the fruit he sells with that of the transient trader.

RETAILERS GIVING AWAY PROFITS.

"What's the use of giving it to the retailer—he'll only give it all away !"

One of the delegates at the Kingston convention of retail merchants told a story in which the above was the central point.

He was listening some time ago to a conversation among manufacturers when the question arose of allowing the retailer a certain fairly large profit on manufactured articles.

The discussion progressed for some time until one of the number asked : "What's the use of giving it to the retailer—he'll only give it all away ?"

Retailers must admit that there are many among them to whom this applies. Once they secure a fair profit on an article they cut down the price to the consumer in order to beat out their competitors on the other side of the street.

This shows the need of a better understanding among retailers and a better knowledge of the business. It means that retailers have to be educated and this can be done to a large extent through association work in each town and city.

There is certainly no use in a manufacturer allowing the retailer a better profit than he has been getting if he is going to give it away—the manufacturer in such a case thinks he might just as well keep it himself.

Retailers must maintain prices and they can usually do it by giving quality and service, and by newspaper and window dressing advertising.

GOOD STORE FIXTURES NEEDED.

While it is recognized as good policy on the part of grocers to handle only goods that bear a reputation, quality is not everything. Almost every store of any respectability nowadays sells pretty fair goods and gives pretty fair values. It is no longer a singularity to do this; no longer a sure passport to public favor.

Of course, no store can be permanently successful unless it sells good goods, but retail grocers must guard themselves against believing that good merchandise is the only requisite.

Attractiveness of store appearance, inside and out, has become nowadays a potent trade-winning factor.

Probably no one thing has so much to do with the impression a store produces on its visitors—not even attentiveness and courtesy of the sales people.

Surface indications determine the judgment of the masses of buyers. They are not, in the main, discriminating judges of the merchandise, however much they may fondly cherish the delusion that they are.

But everyone, however little fitted he or she may be to accurately analyze the general character of a store's merchandise, is certainly always capable of judging a store's general appearance.

Quality of merchandise and prices being fairly equal, the store that is attractive in fittings and arrangements will outdraw two to one the store that is rather old-fashioned and commonplace in these respects.

The store, with an old-fashioned, dingy-looking front, with old counters and fixtures, and a jumbled up, unkempt-looking stock, is laboring under heavy handicap which it will take more than good advertising to overcome.

Good advertising will not offset the effects of bad stockkeeping.

Keeping stock in good order, having everything neat and orderly and scrupulously clean, is an absolute essential to restful advertising.

Advertising can bring people into the store, but it cannot make them buy or induce them to visit the store a second time if the first visit is unsatisfactory.

REDUCING COST OF DOING BUSINESS.

In another column of this issue there is an item referring to the organization of Barrie, Ont., retail grocers.

At the same time as they formed their association they agreed to deliver goods to the public at stated periods only. They decided to do this in order that their delivery expenses should be cut down.

This is a wise move on the part of these men. If the public can be educated to order their groceries in time to catch certain deliveries—and the experiences of many show that they can—retailers stand to save money in delivery expenses. Money saved is money earned and the sooner the merchant brings his cost of doing business down to the minimum, the sooner will he be in a position to get the most out of his business in dollars and cents.

If at future meetings of the Barrie Retail Grocers' Association, the members can be shown other systems and means whereby they can reduce their expenses, the association will continue to hold its present membership and gather in those now outside its fold—if there are any.

PRACTICAL SALESMANSHIP.

Stretching a six item order into one that fills the order pad and at the same time retaining the confidence of the customer is a sign that the grocer is well up in the art of his business.

The writer had the pleasure of talking to a grocer in his office this week and witnessed several examples of ability which he demands from his clerks and at the same time possesses himself.

The telephone rang and in answering it he received a fairly good order. He promised a prompt delivery as requested and then suggested new peas, and got that order. He enquired about strawberries for preserving, explaining that the prospects were not toward higher prices and concluded with a sale of a dollar's worth—13 boxes. He tacked on several other items before he had finished.

The bell rang withing a few minutes for an order from another customer and to a certain extent he repeated the same performance. It seemed so easy to him. He conveyed the idea that he was solicitous that his customer did not forget anything and also that she should share in the seasonable goods which he had received that morning.

Salesmanship is a great asset in the grocery store, but everyone is not a salesman of the type that metaphorically stretches a "three bagger into a home run."

MAY RAISE CARLOAD MINIMUM.

Active preparations are being made by the Montreal Board of Trade to gather data for presentation to the Board of Railway Commissioners in connection with the proposed increase in the carload minimum weights on practically all the Canadian railways. The matter is one of considerable importance to shippers as the increase in the carload minimums is very considerable, the present minimum of 20,000 pounds being increased to 24,000; the 24,000 to 30,000, and the 30,000 to 36,000.

The proposed change will increase the difficulty of small retailers and jobbers in assembling a carload of goods so as to secure the better carload rates. If the change is made there should be a re-arrangement of the classification of mixed shipments in order to enable shippers to include a wider range of goods in mixed shipments in making up a carload.

TAKE A HOLIDAY.

During July and August most men engaged in mercantile pursuits will take a week, fortnight or month's holiday—that is, if they are wise and can get away. A respite from business cares and a rest in some quiet place near the water is helpful in enabling one to put additional vigor into his work when the fall rush comes on.

Some months ago The Canadian Grocer suggested that retail merchants give their clerks a holiday and, where one is willing to do so, to pay the railroad fare to some grocery manufacturing centre where the clerk can, on presentation of a letter of introduction, be shown over some of the manufacturing plants where a foodstuff is manufactured. In this way the clerk with a desire to learn more about the business he is engaged in can increase his knowledge and selling powers while taking his holiday and his employer will benefit by the encouragement given.

It is poor economy to neglect to take a holiday or refuse employes a holiday during the summer. The practice has become an established feature in commercial life and it will pay merchants to live in the present and enjoy life now as well as in the future.

All machinery requires a rest and the human machine is no exception to the rule. A rest frequently puts a sharper edge on a razor, and a holiday will sharpen up the merchant or clerk who takes one during the warm summer months.

CHEAP SCALES ON MARKET.

A typical case of departmental store methods has just come to light and retailers who have to meet the competition of the store in question should take note of the incident. Manufacturers, too, who sell to the big mail order houses, can learn a useful lesson.

A manufacturer began making scales and accepted an order from the departmental concern for 1,000 family scales at a certain price. Then he called on the hardware jobbers and tried to sell them at the same figure, but very naturally got a turn down as it would be impossible for the jobbers to protect their retail customers and allow them to meet the mail order price.

The scales were given the government stamp and delivered to the departmental, which used them as a leader, the price quoted being very close to cost. The goods went out and in a few days complaints began to come in. The scales soon went out of order, the castings being rough and poorly made. The Winnipeg branch of the departmental, it is understood, refused to distribute any of the scales and the stock in hand is left for sale to mail order buyers in Ontario and the East.

The government stamp is not likely to be put on any more of the scales and the manufacturer who made the mistake of catering to the mail order demand for cheap goods will have difficulty in living down the results of his mistake.

Retail merchants who aim to build up an enduring business will pay little heed to the cheap goods sold by the mail-order houses. By selling "quality" goods and always emphasizing to customers that "quality" rather than "cheapness" is the store motto, the confidence of customers will be won sooner or later. The retailer should, of course, be prepared to meet the demand for certain lines of cheap goods but should hesitate to follow the departmentals to the extreme they have set in aiming at "cheapness" at the expense of "quality."

The Markets—New Pack Strawberries to be Short

Reports Indicate That This Will be the Case—Hot, Dry Weather Ripened the Fruit Early—Last Year's Pack Almost all Sold—Heavy Consumption of Sugar Due to Preserving Season—All Dried Fruits Firmly Held in Primary Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Still high with excellent demand.

Canned Canadian Peas.—None in the market.

Evaporated Apples.—Bare market. None good to be had.

Montreal, July 7, 1910.

Midsummer dullness has not exactly taken hold of the grocery trade, but it is present. The big demand is for sugar for the preserving season. This will most likely keep up for many weeks to come. Strawberries are now retailing as low as one dollar a dozen boxes and this will be the limit of the market. The season will be covered by other berries right away and soon raspberries and thimbleberries as well as currants and gooseberries will rule.

Canned goods of all kinds find ready sale, owing possibly to the camping parties, the picnics and the general tendency to avoid labor and especially cooking labor. Women and men agree now that the canned goods are O. K. and so with purity and safety assured everyone uses canned goods.

A strange anomaly in canned goods has occurred in that the canned peas as far as Canadian goods are concerned have been exhausted. Not a can is to be had. One big jobber held a large stock of these peas and held them at a good stiff price, in fact at 72c, and then advanced them owing to scarcity to $1 and still the demand kept up and has kept up until not one can is available.

One firm here have reduced their package flour ten cents a case. This seems strange in the face of an advance in the loose flour.

In evaporated apples a bare market exists and there is a likelihood of a shortage before the new crop comes in.

Sugar.—A splendid demand has set in for sugar. Although no change in prices has taken place the call for all grades has been heavy all over the country. The preserving season has occasioned this as well as the consumption in cooling drinks, etc. Everywhere the anticipation is that sugar will go up.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—The notable fact of the week is the shortage of canned Canadian peas. This, as already recorded, is remarkable because one house which was heavily stocked ran the price of the remainder of their lot up from 72 to $1, and still the call kept up. It merely shows the value of precaution in such popular lines. Canned peas are a staple call in all households and they are as popular as any potatoes ever were. The idea suggests great possibilities for a "corner" at other times. The canned goods trade generally is excellent. Fish and fruit and all vegetables are in steady demand. The supplies in most lines are ample and the prices are well maintained.

Lobsters and sardines are reported scarce, but this will soon be remedied with new products.

TORONTO.—Practically everything in the canned fruit and vegetable market is firm and wholesalers generally are quoting slightly higher prices.

There have been few strawberries or raspberries held over and from all reports the strawberry pack this year will be comparatively light. This has been due to the shortening up of the crop by the excessive heat. Canners, too, have had to pay a high price for their berries; as high as 8 cents has been ruling. No doubt there were considerable quantities picked up at lower prices apart from the contracts made with growers. Taken altogether it looks as if canned strawberries were going to be fairly high and firm. No prices have yet been quoted for present pack.

Weather conditions have not been conducive to a good pea crop and market is practically bare of canned peas now. The outcome is obvious unless the weather redeems itself in a hurry. Growth of tomato vines has been hindered also, but of course, little can be told of the tomato crop until August.

Raspberries have only begun to arrive and the future of the canned raspberry market is therefore uncertain. It must be remembered, however, that the raspberry fruit can stand a great deal more heat than the strawberry.

The trade should remember that there will be no advance opening prices this year. Canners intend waiting until the pack of each fruit or vegetable is well under way before prices are named.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Heavy demand.

Starch—May be a drop.

Canned Strawberries—New pack short.

Dried Fruits—Firm.

Toronto, July 7, 1910.

Despite the hot weather wholesalers report business good. Some were even behind a day or more in shipping orders. The heavy demands being made on sugar have much to do with this and sugar orders always have a few other goods attached to them. The sugar market remains firm and there is no prospect of a decline in the near future from natural influences.

The new canned goods pack is being closely followed and as explained below new strawberries are likely to rule fairly high. All old pack goods are firm and many are in short compass.

Moisture is required soon if the pea crop is to be near normal; the same is true of tomatoes although its is rather early to predict anything about them.

There is a possibility of a decline in starch some time soon; the market at any rate is not at all firm, although the demand is good.

Sugar.—Sugar is the great moving spirit of the grocery market this week. Both refiners and wholesalers report splendid business in spite of the hot weather. Everybody is buying sugar of course for preserving operations since the fresh fruits are coming in abundantly. This trade is likely to last for some time and there is little chance of the market declining. Raws are dearer while in the U. S. some refiners have lowered prices simply to try to get the trade. In Canada refiners are holding firm and if any change should take place here it will likely be upward.

Dried Fruits.—This market is generally firm. California prunes are firm with a steadily rising market. The spring demand from retailers was heavy but of course now it is slackening. Sultana raisins in the primary market are up and Valencias are also strong. Currants still continue strong in Greece, where the crops have not been extra good, due to wet weather. Locally currants are moving freely. Figs and dates are out of date.

Tea.—The tea market is as strong as ever and it is the opinion of those closely in touch with the trade that tea will not be as cheap as it was 3 or 4 years ago, for at least the next 10 years. The chances are that it will be dearer due, to some extent, to the planting of rubber trees in tea gardens. What effect this will eventually have is hard to tell. Some even hold that it will not influence the market. Planters are devoting attention to planting rubber on new grounds instead of tea and as the consumption of tea is increasing every year and the production not, the ultimate result can be easily judged. High prices are ruling on the London market.

Coffee.—The usual fair demand exists for coffee. The future primary markets are likely to be higher.

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS—

Reduced—Prunes, peanuts, evaporated apples.

Stronger—Currants, sugar.

Winnipeg, July 7, 1910.

Whether it was the extreme hot weather of the past few days that has changed the condition of the general market, is difficult to design, but a remarkable change has taken place. It may be that it was too hot for wholesalers, travelers and retailers to work and the trade was amply taking care of itself. It is probable also that people over the entire west were eating little and drinking much. At any rate lemons have gone up about $3 per case and almost everything else except fresh fruits has gone down. It must be remembered, however, that retailers were stocking heavily for the past few months and it is likely that the quietness that prevails at present in the ordering will be a good thing for the retail trade, since the tendency to overstock is altogether too prevalent.

The proverbial hand to mouth condition describes the trade this week very aptly. Collections are slow and everyone is looking eagerly for reports on the crop condition so as to estimate the cash circulation next fall. The hot weather everywhere in the west has given the vast wheat crop a setback and at present cool, moist weather is very much needed.

Sugar—The trade in sugar is only fair at present, although the hot weather of the past two weeks has greatly increased the consumption. It is evident that retailers had stocked heavily when the tide of immigration was at its full. Reports are prevalent that the raw product both in beet and cane is stronger, but there is no change whatever in the market conditions this week.

Foreign Dried Fruits.—The hot weather has stimulated the dried fruit trade this week, since in many centres fresh fruits and vegetables cannot be had. The raisin market is well maintained, while prunes have been slightly weakened in an effort to dispose of superfluous poor quality. This is only temporary and a much stronger market is confidently expected in prunes. Currants and dates are maintained at last week's reduced prices.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, July 7, 1910.

The price of flour is quick to respond to any change in the prospects of the wheat crop. This week, as a result of advices from Winnipeg that the hot weather had affected the wheat, the price of flour was jumped from $6.50 to which point it had only been recently reduced, to $6.70.

Local eggs have advanced to 35 cents, with eastern at 28c and 29c.

Strawberries are drawing to a close for this season, with a drop in the price to $2 a crate. The general figure has been about $2 50.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, N. S., July 7, 1910.

The flour markets are now attracting the attention of the wholesale grocery trade. This week the dealers received advices of an increase of 25 cents per barrel in the price of flour, but so far it has not been put into effect here. The local dealers bought large stocks when prices were low, and as a result they are in a good position at the present time.

The receipts of butter continue and prices are low at present. The receipts of eggs are falling but the price has not varied much.

Dealers report that business is in good volume in all lines of fruit and vegetables. Bananas are still in good demand and receipts continue to be rapidly absorbed. Lemons have scored a sharp advance being quoted at $6 for 300 count. This, however, is partly to be expected at this season on account of some decay, and the large demand. Navel oranges are practically off the market for the season, and firm prices prevail for other varieties. Valencias range from $6.25 to $7.50, and Mediterranean sweets from $4.50 to $4.75. American wax beans are high and scarce at $4.80 per box.

Strawberries are now coming on the market in large quantities and the demand is good. The price dropped during the latter part of the week to ten cents per box. Ontario berries are also coming on the market in competition with the local grown stock. There is a demand, however, for all the berries offering.

St. John, N. B., July 7, 1910.

Manitoba flour advanced 30 cents and Ontario Flour was marked up 10 cents last week. The quotation for the former is now $6.65 and for the latter, $5.60. The only reason assigned for the advance is the hot weather in the west, which has resulted in a feeling that there may be a loss in the wheat crop.

Native strawberries are now coming in plentifully and are selling retail at two boxes for a quarter. New vegetables are also making their appearance.

AGAINST PEANUT VENDOR.

A delegation of retail grocers and fruit dealers of Fredericton, N.B., recently waited on the mayor to have a license withdrawn from a Grecian peanut vendor on street corners. Their petition urged that the stands themselves were a nuisance and were also dangerous on account of the gasoline used to roast peanuts. It was also stated that the vendor had no settled place of business, was not a ratepayer and was in direct competition with ratepayers.

The Grecian has a license and there is doubt as to whether he can be compelled to stop business. It was decided to have the police take the matter up.

COLOR IN WINDOW LIGHTING.

By Emile Reugg.

The photographer's ambition is always to produce a picture which will flatter the real object. The same is apt to be true of the window trimmer's ambition. He wants to give his objects an effect which will make them appear to the onlooker as if they are worth, at least, twice as much as they really are. This is what we call the art of creating a desire.

How may we arrive at the best results? There is at present much lack of originality in electric window lighting, owing to the fact that the art is comparatively new. I am now alluding to the arrangements of the electric bulbs, which, in many cases, are simply fixed all in a row, like a crown all around the frame of the window.

It is quite evident that the glaring lights are almost blinding the eyes of the passers-by. The storekeeper notices also that the objects are not properly illuminated and he goes to work and exchanges the 16 candle lamps for 32 candle ones. The result is, as may well be thought, far worse than if he had reduced his lamps to half.

WATCHING THE PROFITS.

There was to have been a meeting in Toronto during the week between the bakers and the grocers section of the R. M. A., Toronto branch, but at the request of the former, it was postponed. The meeting is for the purpose of finding out where each other is at in the matter or prices and profits since the new Ontario Bread Act came into force. The grocers are anxious that, if there is any change in prices, their profits shall not be cut down. One of them remarked to a Grocer representative: "two cents profit on a 10 cent loaf is not the same as 2 cents on 12 cents."

This goes to show what grocers are doing in order to maintain prices.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

W. E. Skinner, the Winnipeg agent of the Ontario Lantern & Lamp Co., was in Hamilton last week for the first time in ten years. He was surprised at the enormous strides Hamilton had made since his last visit, as, like all westerners, he thought the "Woolly West" monopolized all Canadian rapid growth. He was present at the laying of the corner stone of the large new wing the Ontario Lantern & Lamp Co. are erecting on their new property on Cannon Street, just east of their present building. This wing when completed will add nearly 50 per cent. to their present floor space, and whilst they under-estimated their requirements last November, they anticipate the new building will be sufficient, at any rate for the next few years.

Dominion Canners, Ltd., Hamilton, Ont., have appointed W. H. Millman & Sons and C. L. Marshall & Co., their brokers for Toronto.

W. H. Millman & Sons, grocery brokers, Toronto, have just received another car of white beans.

At the second annual meeting of H. W. Cole, Limited, wholesale grocers, St. John, N. B., held on June 25th, a dividend of 7 per cent. was declared for the year ending April 30th.

A case of interest to grocers has been decided in the provincial court of appeal of British Columbia. Kelly, Douglas & Co., Vancouver, brought action against F. Shelly & Company, bakers, for the price of certain sugar. It was admitted that the wrong sugar was delivered to Shelly & Co., and subsequently Shelly & Co. undertook to return the same to Kelly, Douglas & Company, by handling the sugar over to a teamster delivering other goods from Kelly, Douglas & Company. The goods, however, never reached the wholesale firm, and action was taken against Shelly & Co. for the price, judgment being obtained. Shelly & Co. appealed, and the court of appeal set aside the judgment with costs.

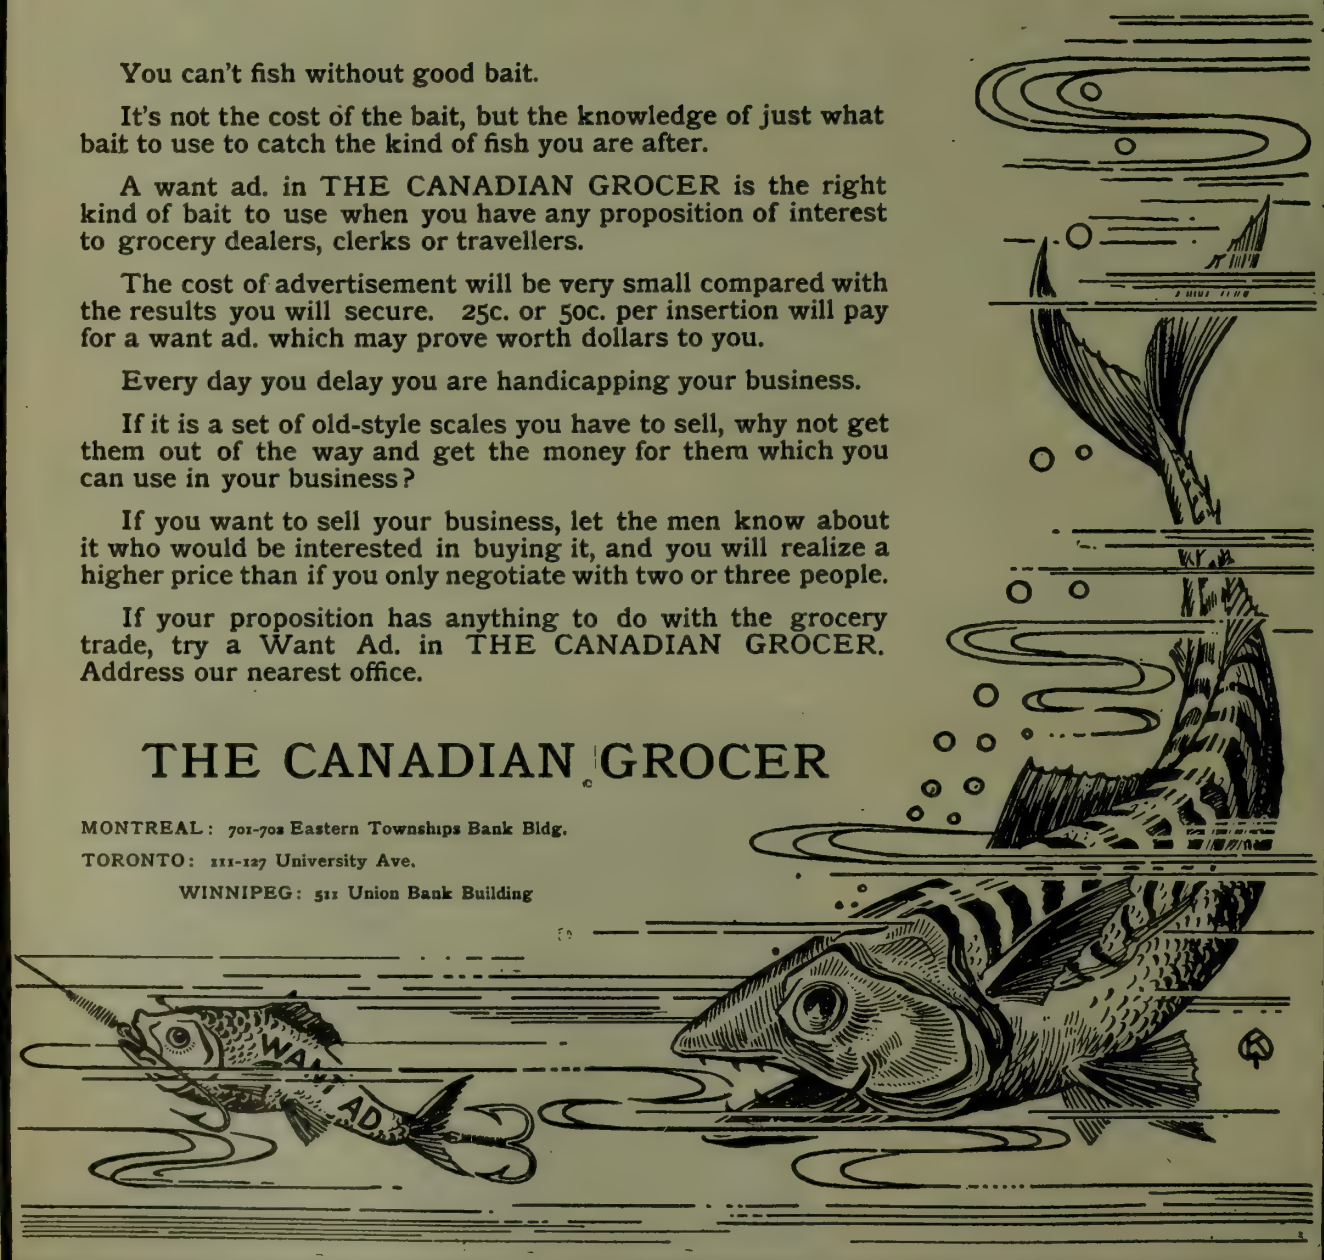
THROW A SPRAT TO CATCH A MACKEREL

You can't fish without good bait.

It's not the cost of the bait, but the knowledge of just what bait to use to catch the kind of fish you are after.

A want ad. in THE CANADIAN GROCER is the right kind of bait to use when you have any proposition of interest to grocery dealers, clerks or travellers.



The cost of advertisement will be very small compared with the results you will secure. 25c. or 50c. per insertion will pay for a want ad. which may prove worth dollars to you.

Every day you delay you are handicapping your business.

If it is a set of old-style scales you have to sell, why not get them out of the way and get the money for them which you can use in your business?

If you want to sell your business, let the men know about it who would be interested in buying it, and you will realize a higher price than if you only negotiate with two or three people.

If your proposition has anything to do with the grocery trade, try a Want Ad. in THE CANADIAN GROCER. Address our nearest office.

Background for a Summer Camp Goods Window

Drawing Shown Herewith Represents One Suggestion — What Goods Should be Given Prominent Display — Money in the Picnic Fruit-Basket.

Unless business is gone after with greater vigor, than during the winter months, the summer grocery trade is liable to lag behind.

It should be the aim of every grocer to increase his business every month over the corresponding month of the previous year. To do this the merchant must total every month his aggregate sales. These should be listed in a handy note-book so that comparisons can be easily made. Then if business in July a year ago was more than during July of 1910, something must be wrong—the merchant is not following the best methods.

This is where the window display comes in. The most should be made out of the window. Its value is comparative. Some meechants make much money and some little from their windows. The men who are alive to the best that can be secured from the window asset are careful in watching the seasons and seasonable goods.

July and August are the months of holidays. Nearly every village, town or city has some sort of a summer resort in its vicinity. People leave every week and particularly on Saturday evenings for cooler spots. This suggests a camp goods window and the more attractive and appropriate it is, the better will be the chances of making it a good seller.

An Appropriate Background.

The accompanying drawing is one suggestion. A miniature tent can easily be arranged by any ambitious clerk. This with a few evergreen bushes and a kettle for boiling water hung on a crossbar will make the scene realistic. To add to it, a small table cloth in the window with a few dishes spread thereon should produce a better effect.

When the background has been arranged the next thing to consider is the seasonable goods. These would of course include canned fruits and vegetables, preserved fruits in bottles, canned salmon, sardines, lobster, herring, etc., canned meats, pickles, catsups, sauces, cooked ham, fresh vegetables and fruits. All of these are appropriate and many other goods as well.

Grocers, who have not already done so, might find it profitable to try out the picnic fruit-basket scheme. Baskets ranging in price from 25 cents up to a dollar should sell well if they are artistically filled with mixed fruit. Show cards and price tickets are practically necessary as then the prospective buyer knows at a glance the prices of the various offerings and performs in his own mind the purchase before he enters the store.

One of these camp goods windows every week in July and August should prove to be a good investment. A little extra trouble is required in the summer months and financial results are bound to come.

ADVANCE OF ST. JOHN SHIPPING.

St. John, N.B., July 6.—Shipping in this port has received a wonderful impetus during the past year. The exports from St. John by Transatlantic steamers for the six months ending May 31 were $24,030,007 worth, including wheat and other grains, flour and meal, cheese, butter, meat products, apples, cattle, horses, lumber, furs, Cobalt silver, etc.

The exports from St. John port for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1910, were $24,988,519 worth; an increase of $4,320,002 over the preceeding year. In 1900 the figures were $9,733,534, making an increase during the last 10 years of $15,254,985.

For the winter season of 1909-1910 there were 114 sailings with 504,260 registered tons, as against 108 sailings and 474,620 registered tons of the previous year.

The St. John Board of Trade is making capital out of these and other facts by sending them broadcast in circular form.

Another case of adulterating pepper comes from Chatham, Ont., where a grocer was fined $5 and costs—$16.75 in all. In fining him the court remarked that morally he did not believe him guilty, as he did not know that the goods were adulterated, they having evidently been tampered with before they were shipped to him. Nevertheless this did not make him any the less responsible in the eyes of the law.

Western Merchants Anxious to Curtail Credits

A Universal Trouble on Which Action Should be Taken Immediately—Resolution Passed by United Boards of Trade of Western Canada—Some Want Small Debt Court.

By L. C. Harkness.

The introduction of a resolution at the convention of the boards of trade of Western Canada recently held at Brandon, aiming at the curtailment of the abused credit system, marks an epoch in the history of merchandizing methods.

The resolution, which was moved by W. J. Birnie, of Carman, Manitoba, reads as follows :

> RESOLVED that this Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada are of the opinion that legislation should be enacted to make it clear that overdue accounts shall bear interest from due date, on the same terms and same rules as are now provided for overdue bills and notes.

It is not difficult for the merchant who has had any experience in making collections or dealing with delinquents to understand the circumstances which led up to action of the merchant at Carman as outlined by the resolution. There are few merchants that have no overdue accounts on their books, and there are few merchants who have not had difficulty some time in their career trying to get accounts straightened out. So it would seem natural that every merchant would readily become keenly interested in the above resolution.

It may not be that this particular action meets with the endorsation of every merchant. Indeed it is probable that it would meet with opposition. But every retailer should be glad to know that somewhere else someone is grappling with a momentous problem. Every merchant should take off his hat to the man who is struggling to get light on a vexatious commercial problem and so far as the vital point is concerned at least, should give such support as will help to clear the sky on the sore problem of credit.

Many Attempts Made.

In addition to this action there have been other more or less far-reaching attempts to solve the problem of the abused credit system. In Ontario a few towns and cities have established collection departments. In Western Canada the idea of forming a small debt court has been spoken of favorably for a number of years. Many merchants have entirely shut out the giving of credit and operate altogether on a cash basis.

A large percentage of retailers have private systems of their own to control their accounts; some are successful and some are not. All these methods and systems, including the one which recently emanated from Carman, go to show the tendency of the times toward a system which curtails or controls the giving of credit, or makes more secure the financial position of the retailer in his dealings with the consumer.

There are varied opinions concerning the resolution. It is only hoped that this introduction will create a more widespread interest in the great question. It must be admitted that there is altogether too much latitude allowed the consumer in the matter of settlement for goods. And it is evident that the resolution aims at limiting that latitude by the written law. It is believed that as all commercial and industrial life advances, it is followed up by what may be understood as commercial legalization. That is, the law controls to a greater or lesser degree the operations of any trade enterprise.

As the science of merchandising advances it is not surprising to hear the law spoken of as a means to regulate certain branches of the trade.

Trade Wants Action.

It may be that any one method would not be applicable under all conditions, but there is hope for a solution everywhere, so long as there is continued action on the question. Action is what the trade wants, and it is this that we all admire in the various methods that have been brought to our attention.

THE TRADE REBATE.

From Printers' Ink.

In line with the gradual establishment of stronger and better trade relations is the marked tendency of manufacturers to declare themselves as abolishing the trade rebate and allowance. The latest example is the N. K. Fairbank Company, which has recently notified the wholesale trade that its quarterly cash rebate is to be discontinued, and goods are now to be billed at net jobbers' prices, provided that in sales to dealers list prices are maintained.

The new rule is made with an interesting price maintenance penalty attached—a penalty in many respects similar to that of the Foster Rubber Company described in this issue, but significantly different in that the penalty is boldly made despite the fact that it has no legal patent monopoly like the rubber company to strengthen its arm. The penalty clause reads :

> It is further understood that you will not sell to other buyers whom we shall have designated to you as having cut list prices.
> In the event of the violation of these terms by any dealer it is understood that said dealer for the first failure to maintain prices as above stipulated shall forfeit to this company the sum of $50; for the second violation the sum of $100, both to be construed as liquidated damages, it being recognized that material damages would result to the N. K. Fairbank Company from such price cutting in violation of the conditions of sale, the amount of which it would be difficult or impracticable to ascertain.

There is only one explanation for the probable ease with which this penalty plan in combination with the abolition of rebates can be put through by the Fairbank Company. That explanation is its powerful hold upon consumers, through its very able and very thoroughly distributed advertising, penetrating to every class and every section. Without this hold dealers would defy this dictum.

Both manufacturers and retailers are now learning, after many bad snarls, that the straightforward unhampered manner of dealing is far better than any other.

BOOST THEM NOW

Some of the Articles the Summer Season Creates a Good Demand For—Suggestions to Progressive Grocers.

Starch.—This necessity for the laundry is now in great demand, but grocers should not be content to wait for trade. Try to augment it by attractive counter displays and windows with appropriate show cards here and there. Starch should not be difficult to move rapidly with white the predominating color of summer attire.

Lemons.—Apart from your fruit business, if you have one, the sultry days of summer create a heavy demand for lemons as relief from thirst. Follow the advice of making hay while the sun shines. If you do not get the lemon trade in your district your neighbors or peddlers will.

Confectionery.—If you have been conducting a confectionery department now is the time to realize the best returns from it. Do not be content with waiting for trade. Tell your customers about your goods. Most of them are doing but little baking during the summer months. Some one is supplying them with cakes, etc. Why not you?

Breakfast Foods.—You know that there is a big demand for breakfast foods just now but are you making an extra effort to increase the business that will come to you of itself? There are so many ways of interesting the consumer by window display, etc., that a grocer should never experience a difficulty as to what to do.

Good Summer Demand for Cooked Meats and Bacon

Best Season For These Products Has Arrived — Provision Market Generally Quiet—No Decline Noticeable in Butter and Cheese Production—Hot Weather Makes Great Shrinkage in Eggs.

The Canadian bacon market shows few changes from a week ago. The local demand is fair, but there is not much for export. The English retailer is not enthusiastic over advancing the sale of bacon as consumers are objecting to the prices. Irish and Danish bacon were reduced recently on that market, but Canadian held its own. The continued scarcity of hogs of course makes the prices necessarily high.

Butter and cheese production is heavy; apparently the grass has not yet been materially injured by the hot weather. Both markets are a little easier than a week ago.

Hot weather is bad for eggs and bad eggs are coming on the market. Demand has declined and the surplus goes to cold storage. Should the co-operative egg circles among the farmers spread throughout Canada, it will have the effect at least of placing better eggs on the market.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—Little change has taken place since last week. The live hog market contained limited supplies, and the demand good. At $9.50 to $9.75 per hundred the demand is first rate. The market for mixed lots is weaker and prices as compared with a week ago were twenty-five cents lower. In dressed hogs the feeling remains steady under a fair demand for small lots at $13 to $13.50 per hundred. The trade in hams and bacon continues good and as supplies are not in excess of the requirements, prices rule firm. The demand for lard and other lines is quiet and prices are expected to lower yet on the whole a good trade is passing and the market may be considered active.

Butter.—Holidaying and exporting has strengthened the market on this product. The supply is abundant, but if the hot weather continues the supply may drop off soon. Creamery is jobbing at 24 cents, dairy at 21 cts.

Eggs.—The egg market is active and large shipments are continually leaving the city, many are being stored also and the jobbing price to-day is firm at 20 cents.

Cheese.—Local manufactured stuff is jobbing at 12 cents, but the price is slightly stronger than last week. The Ontario product is quite strong at 13½ cents.

TORONTO.

Provisions.—The only change in prices of any account during the week was a reduction of a ½c in lard and this was only announced by some provision dealers. Lard is undoubtedly weaker. The same is true of live hogs, some quoting them 10 cents lower. This is the season for smoked and cooked meats and the demand is good with no changes in prices. Bacon is also a good seller, but uncooked meats generally are not.

Butter.—The receipts of butter are still high. The only condition in sight that would have a tendency to make them less is the drying up of the grass by the hot weather, but up to the present this has produced no appreciable effect. The direct effects of the heat on the butter itself is not noticeable as the facilities for handling it are much better than they were 10 or 12 years ago. The quality of the June butter was excellent and the demand fair. Prices remain fairly firm as when spring arrived the new goods came on to a bare market. No changes in price are quoted.

Cheese.—The production of cheese is still heavy; in fact, it is heavier than last year. The market is somewhat easier. Cheese in the country is bringing from 80¼ to 10½ cents. Old cheese is gradually getting scarcer and some quote it a little higher.

Eggs.—The chief trouble with the egg market this week is the shrinkage. The weather is to be again blamed for this as a little of the sun's heat on an egg this weather has a deterrent effect on its quality. The demand is easing up somewhat and packers are putting into cold storage all the surplus.

BUTTER NOT IN WRONG LABELS.

So Decides Vancouver Judge in an Interesting Police Court Case.

Vancouver, B.C., July 7.—It was mentioned in these columns some time ago about the methods employed in putting up inferior butter under standard labels and everyone using butter was satisfied that this was taking place. The inferior article was then sold at the price of the standard. One creamery company brought action in the police court against a wholesale firm, the charge being that the firm wrapped butter in the labels of the creamery company, after it had stopped sending butter to the firm in question. The case was dismissed in the police court, and an appeal was made, which was also dismissed. One of the proprietors and some employes of the firm swore that they only re-wrapped the butter when it arrived in bad condition and that they never used the plaintiff's labels on anything but that creamery's butter. The manager of the creamery deposed that they never put boracic acid in their butter and the city analyst gave evidence that the samples of butter shown him had boracic acid. Butter, however, it was observed, would absorb a good deal from surrounding odors. The appeal judge held that the charge was not proven.

GOOD OUTLOOK FOR BEANS.

Authority Predicts Crop of 1,000,000 Bushels—Consumption Increasing in Canada.

Chatham, Ont., July 7.—That the Ontario bean crop for the coming year should, with a continuance of the present favorable conditions, aggregate close on one million bushels is the prediction voiced by N. H. Stevens, president of the Canada Flour Mills Co. and probably the best posted bean authority in Canada.

Interviewed with respect to the outlook, Mr. Stevens expressed himself in optimistic terms.

"Though I have not been able to visit the bean growing districts as much as usual during the past month," he remarked, "farmers have kept me in close touch with the state of the crop, and I have no hesitation in saying that prospects for the bean crop of 1910 are fully equal to if not better than those of 1909 at this season a year ago.

"Although seeding was a little late this year, the beans have come up evenly and have a good color and are making good progress. If the balance of the season continues as favorable as that which has been experienced thus far, with the increased acreage which has been sown in beans, we ought to get over the whole country a twenty-five per cent. larger yield in 1910 than we had in 1909.

"The 1909 yield," added Mr. Stevens in response to a query, "was over 800,000 bushels. We ought to get a million bushels this year.

"Quite a few old beans have been offered lately since the people got through with their seeding. The market is pretty dull at the present time. About $1.50 to $1.60 a bushel is all the farmers can realize, unless it be for some choice lots.

"There has been no opportunity since the last harvest of beans to place any of our beans in the United States. Our price, f.o.b. here, has been too high all season to export and pay the duty of 45 cents a bushel.

"In fact, Canada provides her own market. I don't think the increase in the quantity of beans grown in this province will show any greater gain than the increase in consumption by the people of Canada. The people of this country are using more and more beans every year, even when you just count the per capita consumption. Our people are cultivating a growing taste for beans, which to-day form one of the cheapest and healthiest food we have."

Mr. Stevens added that other crops throughout this section of the country were all looking fine. "It would do your heart good to see them," he said. "It looks like a bumper year."

CO-OPERATIVE EGG CIRCLES.

The Grocer mentioned some weeks ago that farmers in some sections were taking up the question of Co-operative Egg Circles. About a week ago the first tangible evidence of this becoming a reality occurred in Peterboro County, Ontario.

Egg wagons were started and collection made from the members of the circles. An increase of two cents a dozen over the current market price was paid.

There is reported to be some opposition to this movement on the part of grocers who say they will attempt to break the egg-circles by paying 2 or 3 cents extra per dozen for a time than farmers belonging to the circle would get. Whether this opposition will become real or not remains to be seen.

OPPOSED TO LOWER DUTY.

Vancouver, B.C., July 7.—The board of trade of Mission, B.C., one of the Fraser river valley fruit districts, has gone on record as opposed to the Dominion government lowering the rate of duty on United States fruit coming into Canada. The following resolution was passed: "Whereas the jobbers and wholesalers of the Northwest are petitioning the Dominion government through their various boards of trade to further reduce the duty on U. S. fruit coming into Canada, this board of trade calls the attention to the government to the great injustice and hardship this would be to the fruit growing industry and petition that in lieu of any decrease being made in the duty the same should be increased."

BEET SUGAR FACTORY FOR B. C.

A proposal has been endorsed to establish a beet root sugar factory in the Fraser Valley, British Columbia, and the matter will be brought to the attention of the provincial government of that province.

Flour Up, Due to Drought in Western Wheat Fields

Two Advances of 10 cents Each Last Week—Strong Tendency Jpust Now—Cereals Strong With Slow Demand—In Sympathy With Raw Material.

Flour advanced twice last week—10 cents each time. The cause was the upward tendency of the wheat market due to the reported extensive drought throughout the west. The flour market is still firm and may go higher before it gets lower.

Some of the reports are no doubt exaggerated. Some have stated that the wheat crop was "absolutely ruined" but of course this has to be taken with a grain of salt. Those who are anxious to bull the market like to spread such rumors. The heaviest damage is reported from Southern Manitoba where moisture has been particularly scarce. It must be remembered, however, that the acreage of wheat in the Canadian North West is 1,550,000 acres more than a year ago, equal to an ordinary average of 20,000,000 bushels. Wheat is only at its normal price and if there were no market manipulators the chances are flour would not have advanced as it did.

The oat and wheat product market is strong in sympathy with the raw material but as yet has not advanced. The demand is not heavy just now.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—The usually lifeless condition of the flour market was in a transitory state this week. Pronounced dullness changed to some activity and the market advanced ten cents all around and the prices quoted here are now ruling. The unsettled condition of the wheat market is said to have had the effect announced and it is probable that fluctuations will take place.

TORONTO.

Flour.—Last week the flour market advanced twice—10 cents on Tuesday and 10 cents later. Some millers made the advance all at once towards the end of the week. This is what has been expected on account of the unfavorable reports from the wheat fields of the west caused by drought. Wheat has been going up at various times a cent or so at a time and one miller stated the advance would ordinarily make a 65 cent advance per bbl. on flour. But even yet wheat is only around its normal price. The prospects are for a still firmer flour market for a time, but if better reports come from the west the tendency will be downwards. Later in the season flour should decline again under natural conditions.

Cereals.—While the cereal market so far as oat and wheat products are concerned is not active in demand, prices are firm in view of the upward tendency of wheat and oats due to reported damage by drought. PRACTICAL SALESMANSHIP.

ADOPT REGULAR DELIVERIES.

Barrie Grocers Form Association and Will Deliver Goods at Stated Times Only.

Barrie, Ont., July 7.—The retail grocers of this town have advanced another stage when they decided to form a grocers' association recently. After obtaining the signatures a meeting was held last week and officers were elected as follows :

President, James Vair ; vice-president, J. D. Wisdom ; secretary, S. G. Caldwell. The various committees also were appointed.

After considerable discussion re a half holiday, it was carried by a big majority that the grocers hold Wednesday afternoons. It was pointed out by some that, as Barrie was catering to a tourist trade, the grocery stores should not close ; on the other hand, it was contended that, as the merchants in other lines of business were closing Wednesday afternoons, it was the best time to take a holiday.

Attention was called to the fact that in many cities and large towns there were systematic deliveries. This matter was thoroughly gone into, and a system of regular stated deliveries was adopted. Cards were ordered to be printed and hung up in the stores of all the members of the Association. The following will be the hours of delivery, commencing July 4th, 1910 :

Goods ordered before 10 a.m., delivered before 12 noon.

Goods ordered between 10 a.m. and 12 noon, delivered before 4 p.m.

Goods ordered between 12 noon and 4 p.m., delivered before 6 p.m.

Goods ordered between 4 and 6 p.m., delivered next day before 10 a.m.

Saturday will have an extra delivery, and goods ordered between 4 and 6 p.m. will be delivered before 9.30 p.m.

Goods ordered on Saturday after 6 p.m. will be delivered Monday before 10 a.m.

It is intended that a grocers' picnic will be held in the near future for the purpose of bringing together the grocers for a days outing.

Make Your Buying Fit Your Selling

LET us say at once, Brother Grocer, that the "buying end" of your business is the least important of all. For it means only one thing—a steady outgo of capital, expense, everything going out and nothing coming in.

Isn't that so?

The "selling end" is the thing—that's where the profits come from.

Anybody with credit or money can buy goods, but the question is, "Can he sell them at a profit?"

And yet, think of it, how very many merchants spend time, and temper, and trouble—ay, and money, too—on the "buying end" alone, oblivious of the soul of their business—the "selling."

If you buy your flour "dirt cheap"—why, then, you save in buying, but lose heavily in selling, and selling is everything, you see.

You purchase flour not to please yourself (the buyer), but to please the consumer.

And when you deal with Mrs. Ultimate Consumer, then you are no longer the "buyer," but the "seller." Your profits, present and future, are now at stake, not the amount to be saved by haggling with the mill representatives.

FIVE ROSES flour, Brother Grocer, was made not to sell, but to satisfy.

And because it satisfies, because it accomplishes its mission, delivers the goods, that is why it is the best sold flour in Canada and the easiest sold.

That is why it stays sold.
Don't let price, discounts, long terms, elastic terms befog your buying judgment.

Remember that quality, quality alone, is the consideration above all else when you are changed from buyer to seller.

We ask you to sell FIVE ROSES, not to buy it.

You will always get your money before we get ours, your profits before ours.

Would you rather be a good buyer than be a good seller?

One way lies success, the other failure.

Choose, Brother Grocer.

Lemon Prices up Again; Strawberries Waning

Raspberries and Red Currants are Being Introduced to the Trade—Cherries at Their Height—Navel Oranges Disappearing—Hot Weather Without Rains Hard on Strawberry and Raspberry Crops—Tomatoes Scarce Due to Southern Frosts—Fish Market Rather Quiet.

Now is the time for fruit of all descriptions. No holding back can exist. Strawberries are dominating the market but will soon be off. The rush sale of our prophecy has held and it is keeping up. Orange offerings have been light. Navels are almost done and the prices are beginning to advance. Pineapples weakened and are in good supply. The demand of course keeps good, but the general idea is that the supply is in excess of requirements. Bananas continue to be in good supply and they are selling well. Cherries are now at their height. Canadian cherries are now holding their own and everything points to a strong fruit market all around. Apples may not be any too plentiful according to outside reports and this is causing some anxiety. Prompt and careful action will be the wise movement for fruit as nothing but, quickness solves a difficult situation. Lemons have again advanced. The excessively hot weather brought on a continued demand and the short crop helped to raise prices. Among the new Canadian fruits introduced this week are raspberries and red currants.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits.—The local market shows no distinct change, though prices have fluctuated. Another big shipment of bananas has arrived and there is a splendid demand. A slight weakening of prices has taken place, but the old strength has revived owing to the excellence of the fruit.

Lemons and oranbes are interesting owing to the firmness and there seems to be no chance of subsidence. Limes are selling freely to certain consumers and these are known to the trade. Grape fruit are continuing scarce. Strawberries are sure to be lower every day now and the rate from six to eight will likely drop a cent or two any day.

Fish.—The market is not active although there is considerable doing. Haddock and cod are coming in freely and prices continue low. Brook trout are very scarce and fishermen report the catch small with the size of fish small. Lake fish are very scarce, especially dore and pickerel. Gaspe and Restigouche salmon are in fair supply with demand heavy. Prices are shghtly higher.

Fresh Halibut is coming in from the Pacific coast and mackerel is also popular. The frozen fish including dore and pike are in fine condition and owing to the scarcity of fresh fish are selling freely. There is little demand for other frozen fish.

The prepared fish are in excellent shape and the demand keeps good. Haddies are all that could be wished for and the demand is surprisingly strong. Some advances are worthy of note.

we bring our lemons under ventilation and endeavor to deliver them here in good condition. A long way, isn't it, to bring perishable fruit? How far we have succeeded is shown by our sales—an increase in one year of 110%. No other packers shipping to Canada can boast of such an increase. There's a reason—you know. Order always our lemons.

Green Fruits.—Several interesting features have developed in the fruit market. Strawberries are waning; the season for sour cherries is here; raspberries and red currants are being introduced, lemons are away up and scarce on this market; navel oranges are off and grape fruit is practically going unnoticed.

The strawberry season is almost over. This condition of affairs was hastened on account of the extremely hot weather which ripened the fruit in a hurry towards the finish. While it lasted, however, the season was brisk with an average of from 8 to 10 cars coming into Toronto per day. The lowest wholesale price touched was 4 cents, but berries which sold for this were not extra good quality. For real good berries the lowest price was 5 cents, reached at the beginning of last week and the Saturday preceding. That was the time for retailers to buy and this was pointed out in The Grocer before those dates. Prices at the beginning of this week were from 5 to 7 cents, according to quality. Next week will see strawberries practically a thing of the past.

Attention of retailers should now be directed to cherries. Their season is on and it is not likely that sour cherries will be any cheaper. The crop is only from 50 to 75 p.c. normal. This was a splendid year for sweet cherries as the dry weather is conducive to good quality; wet weather rots the fruit quickly.

Lemons are stronger than ever, the price of Verdelli advancing to $6 for the best. Only about 3,000 boxes arrived on this market during the past week and orders from outside points cannot be filled; many dealers, in fact, have no stocks whatever. Local hot weather and a short Italian crop are the causes. The market here is much lower than in Chicago and New York where prices are from $7 to $9. An odd car is coming in and in two weeks' time the supply will be much better. Cooler weather would stop the demand considerably.

Raspberries received their introduction on Monday last when a few crates came in from the Watertown and Queenstown districts. More arrived on Tuesday and later. Early prices were from 18 to 22 cents. The crop this year will be pretty fair and if sufficient rain falls the supply will be distributed better. Rain is badly needed in Ontario. Other new home fruit is the red currant. California cantaloupes will be over soon, next week's supply coming from Georgia.

Sorrento lemons and navel oranges are off the market. Georgia peaches are $2.50 and California from $1.25 to $1.50.

Vegetables.—Tomatoes are somewhat scarce. The present supply comes from Texas and Mississippi where early frosts damaged the crops, killing many vines. What is known as "succors" are arriving. These are the fruit which grow on the new vines after the frost does the damage. They are of inferior quality. Tennessee tomatoes are expected this week and it is expected the quality will be better. Our own product will not be on the market till August. Asparagus are practically off. Any that is on hand brings a high price —$1.50 per doz. Beans are getting cheaper rapidly. Bermuda onions and mushrooms are going off the market. The supply of several United States vegetables is no longer wanted here, home produce being sufficient to fill the demand.

Every good idea that you put into operation means more dollars tinkling in the till.

It is a good thing to have plenty of sand, but don't let it get into your gear box. It will stop the wheels of your business if you do.

Show that you are alive. Suggest by window displays, etc., summer goods which you know the public want at this season, but which they have not yet thought of. Get in on the ground floor first.

An Australian trade journal dealing with notes for the season states that autumn is nearly over and winter is at hand. We of the northern clime sometimes forget our compatriots in the antipodes until some little casual note of this kind attracts our attention.

"Play the game square. Don't be a piker." This advice given to grocers at a recent convention is not only applicable to the trade, but should be the motto of every man who really possesses the essentials of manliness.

Some men who pride themselves upon their business ability have a ledger that show debts running well past the hundred mark. Is that a sign of business ability?

The man who has gone into the grocery business with the opinion that it is an easy method of making money might better get out of it on the first opportunity before he loses the little cash he has.

A sure sign of weakness, half hearted methods and a business that is only second rate is the grocer who begins to get busy as soon as a traveler enters. If you don't want anything say so courteously.

The jobbing trade in the Eastern States have been notified by one company that hereafter all brands of the product of that company will be billed at the regular jobbing prices and no rebates will be allowed as have been since the change in the selling plans in July of last year.

In a war between the hucksters and grocers of El Paso, Texas, it is reported that the former have procured the aid of the labor unions to eliminate the retail grocer of that city when making purchases of food for their families. The combined move on the part of the hucksters and the labor unions follows the recent activity on the part of the grocers of that place to have the city council pass an ordinance taxing the hucksters.

The Anglo-American Fisheries Arbitration to settle the long standing disputes between Canada and the United States regarding fishing in their respective territorial waters is now in session in The Hague. It will continue probably until the end of July. Four speeches are allowed each side and a week or more is being required for each speech.

At a meeting of the St. John, N. B., branch of the Commercial Travelers' Association, held recently, the question of effecting an improvement in the sanitary arrangements of the hotels in small towns, was again discussed, and a petition requesting the public authorities to take action in the matter was drawn up. It will be forwarded to the Maritime Association which intends to send a delegation to interview the various provincial authorities.

The trading stamp evil has received its quietus in the District of Columbia where the United States Court of Appeals handed out a decision to the effect that the giving of trading stamps is unlawful. The Retail Grocers' Protective Association took up the question first in the police court where they sustained a set back but the government took the case to the higher court with the above result.

Bennet, Sloan & Co., New York city, have been fined for adulterating pepper. Their brand was found to be a mixture of pepper, sand and ash.

Mayor Gaynor, of New York, has appointed a new chief of the Bureau of Weights and Measures. Complaints have accordingly been filed in 94 civil cases which are to be tried in Brooklyn. Officials have been led to say that 30 per cent. of the retailers of that city have been cheating their patrons. This is, however, regarded as an exaggeration. The secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association of the city said that a wedding present of a pair of scales should be received by every young housewife in order that she could trust the honesty of her grocer, butcher, etc., in regard to weight.

Norwegian packers of sardines are now following the French practice of packing them unsmoked and are active competitors.

The careful, clean tidy grocer is fighting the fly. It may hardly be necessary to remind him not to allow anything to create an unfavorable impression upon the public. Fly paper or poison near any object except canned goods, possibly, will not prove prepossessing. If the grocer is really determined to keep flies out he will find ways and means for stopping the most of them.

In the case of the western butcher who was fined for selling adulterated lard the average retailer fails to understand why the manufacturer should be allowed to go free. C. Woursell, of Woursell & Co., Calgary, sold a tin of the lard to R. W. Fletcher, a Dominion Government food inspector. The retailer did not know the lard was impure and took it for what it was labeled "pure lard." He was fined $5 and costs in police court, paying altogether $36.50.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

GOOD soup is good every day; and good for everybody.

You'll hardly find a meal—except breakfast—where one of our 21 kinds would not be exactly the right thing, either for a first course or one of the principal dishes. And there's always a Campbell's Soup that just suits the whole family. For example take

Campbell's Tomato Soup

It is so spicy and tempting that it sharpens the appetite of any who want to follow it with a hearty meal. At the same time it is so nourishing that it affords the best part of a sustaining light meal in itself.

This is not only the most palatable of all tomato soups but the purest, in every sense; and the richest in food-value.

If any Campbell's Soup is not completely satisfactory the grocer returns your money.

21 kinds 10c a can

Asparagus, Beef, Bouillon, Celery, Chicken, Chicken Gumbo (Okra), Clam Bouillon, Clam Chowder, Consommé, Julienne, Mock Turtle, Mulligatawny, Mutton Broth, Ox Tail, Pea, Pepper Pot, Printanier, Tomato, Tomato Okra Vegetable, Vermicelli-Tomato

Just add hot water, bring to a boil, and serve.

You'll always find a good usable suggestion in Campbell's Menu Book. Why not write for a copy today?

Do You Know That Dutch Bakers are the Best Bakers in Christendom?

Not only does cleanliness, characteristic of the Dutch, reign supreme in the bakeries of the Biscuit Fabrick DeLindeboom at Mydrecht, Holland, the home of Frou-Frou, but the quality of the ingredients used has been, and ever will be, a most mportant factor in this world famous bakery.

The process of making Frou-Frou, handed down from generation to generation, is one of the most valuable trade secrets of the present age, and the grocer who recommends this matchless wafer to his customers, is recommending something that will go a long way towards binding still closer his store to the house-holder who appreciates good things to eat.

Will you, Mr. Grocer, let us prove our claim by sending you, free of charge, a sample tin of Frou-Frou? We will do so on receipt of your name and address.

Is not a good judge of groceries and knows it.

¶ Therefore, the particular buyer looks for certain "guide posts" to indicate the store upon which he can depend for quality when buying groceries.

¶ He may not know how to select good tea or coffee in bulk, for instance, but he knows he gets value when he buys Heinz Pickles; and is likely to be favorably influenced toward the grocer who sells them and other trade-marked goods of equal standing.

¶ He may not be able to argue for or against Benzoate of Soda, but he knows he prefers to take no chances with drugs in his food, and is likely to read the label on the kind of Ketchup the grocer recommends.

Retailer's Liability with Adulterated Goods

Chief Analyst Points Out Why Government Makes the Party Who Sells to the Consumer Responsible—By Receipt of Warranty Retailer Protects Himself—Compounds Must be Sold as Such.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—As a subscriber to The Canadian Grocer, I have been thinking of dropping you a line for sometime. We have been troubled here recently as regards to pure goods. I heartily cooperate with pure food legislation, for, I believe, there is nothing we as merchants should be more particular about as the goods we sell. Yet, is the government taking the wise plan? They come to our retail stores, take samples, send same to Ottawa, and if the goods are not up to standard, then we are fined. Now suppose even that the wholesaler or manufacturer stands the fine; in my way of thinking the retailer still gets the blame as the public are not acquainted with the situation. The consumer only knows that so and so were fined for selling mixed goods. I think if the inspectors were sent to the wholesaler and there got the unbroken packages then they could reach the difficulty and saddle the right horse.

JAS. McCULLA.

Kingston, Ont., July 13, 1910.

P.S.—We get good points from your paper.

Why Retailer is Responsible.

Mr. McCulla's communication forms the basis of some interesting discussion and opinions of others on this question would be valuable.

A. McGill, Dominion Government Analyst, says that the Adulteration of Food Act makes the vendor directly responsible for the quality of his goods. His reason is that the purchaser has direct relations only with the persons who sell the goods and that naturally the purchaser looks to those vendors as being responsible for the quality.

"In cases where the vendor has been a purchaser," says Mr. McGill, "and not a manufacturer of the article he sells, it is often urged as a hardship that he should be held as guarantor, since he is, in the nature of things, compelled to take on trust the genuineness of what the actual manufacturer has supplied to him.

"A little consideration will make it evident that no other course is tenable. The retailer has certainly had the goods in his possession. He is the only one who can establish the fact of their source; more than that, he is the only one who can vouch for the fact that they have not been tampered with while in his charge.

May Ask for Warranty.

"The Adulteration Act recognizes the importance, to the retailer, of his dependence upon the honesty of the manufacturer, and provides for his being able to call into the case, as third party, the manufacturer himself. This he does by the production of a warranty from the manufacturer; and it is not too much to ask of any person, having intelligence enough to go into business at all, that he should be wise enough to secure himself by having such a guaranty furnished him, with all goods he buys.

"For the further protection of the retail dealer, the Act provides a form of guaranty, so that he cannot plead anything but his own gross ignorance or carelessness, if he fails to fully protect himself against all charges of having, with knowledge, any adulterated goods in his stock.

"It must be clearly understood—and we believe that it is generally understood—that neither cheap goods, nor mixed goods, are necessarily adulterated. Compound lard, for example, is a perfectly legal article. But the retailer should know, and we believe he generally does know, that it is compound lard, and not simple lard. If a customer asks for compound lard, or is willing to accept compound lard, the sale is entirely legal. It is the same with cream of tartar substitute, or compound cream of tartar; with coffee compounds or substitutes, and so on.

"These things are not cream of tartar, or coffee, and must not be sold as such. We will venture to say that in vastly the greater number of cases they were not bought as such by the retailer himself. The lard he buys at 4 or 5 cents a pound cheaper than the highest grade offered to him by the manufacturer, is almost invariably marked as 'Compound Lard' on the container. He might suspect its quality from the mere fact of the lower price he pays for it. The same thing is true of cheap goods in general."

From what Mr. McGill says, it is apparent that all the retailer has to do in buying goods represented to be pure by the salesman of the wholesale or manufacturing house, is to ask for a warranty to the effect that they are pure. When the retailer has this warranty in his possession he no longer becomes responsible. This warranty, of course, will probably only be given in case of package goods—where it is possible to tamper with them if they were in bulk—and should the retailer break the package and sell in bulk then he becomes liable again in spite of the warranty.

In selling a compound article, if the retailer says it is a compound—tells his customer that it is—then he cannot be held responsible by the law.

Things That Shouldn't Be

Too often when a clerk or grocer has finished serving a customer he carries on a lengthy conversation to the disgust of others who are waiting. This is a poor policy and frequently results in the loss of a customer.

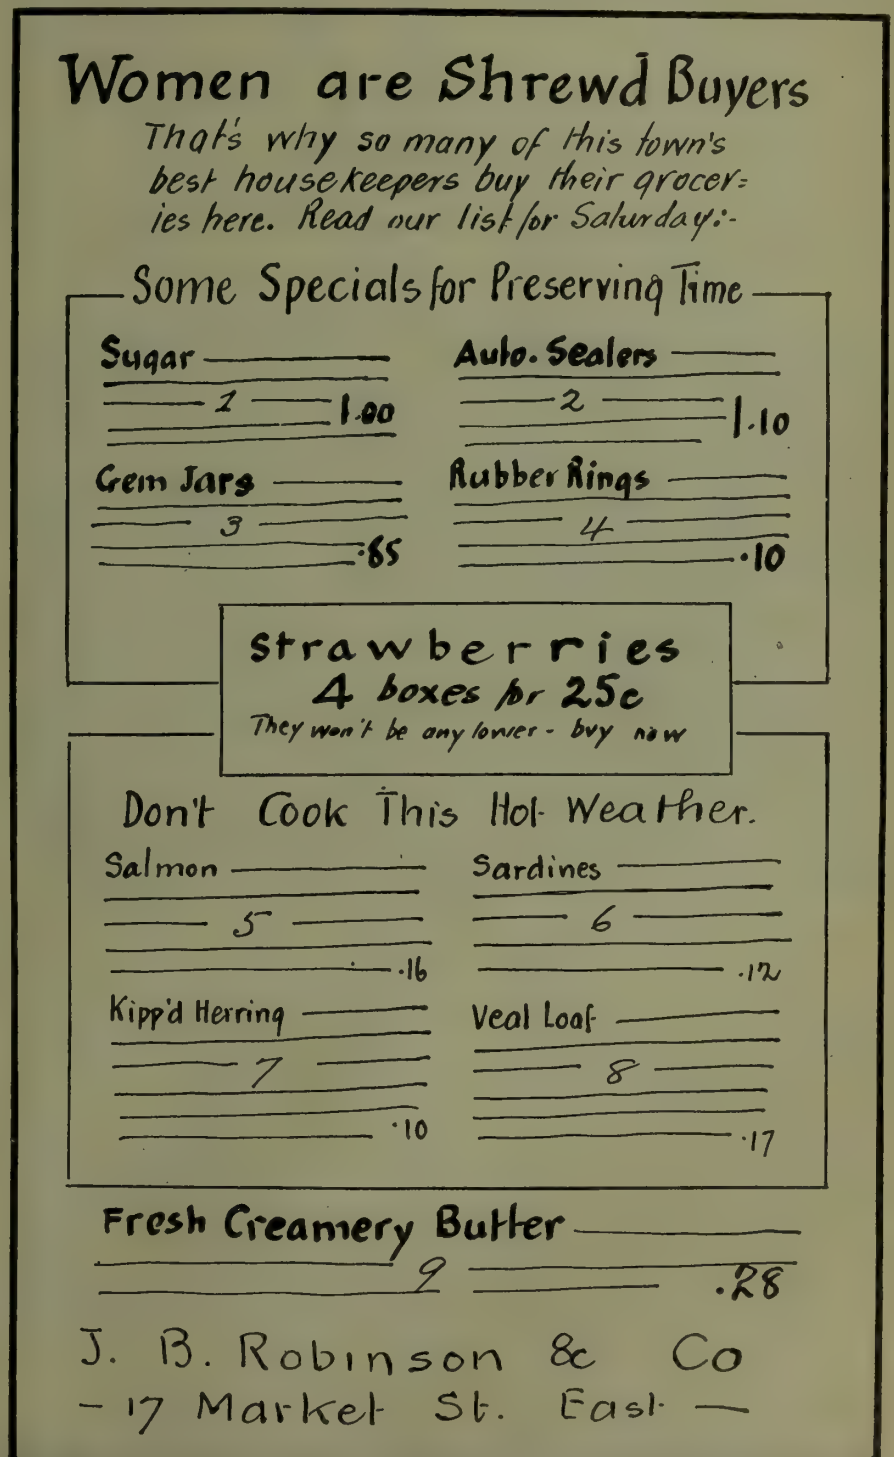
Grocery Store Advertising

By W. F. RALPH

In writing advertising it is the part of wisdom to avoid generalities. They are seldom interesting and never convincing. The merchant who writes his own advertising is fortunate in the possession of first hand knowledge and enthusiasm. These qualities, with the addition of discretion and sufficient literary ability to be able to express his thoughts in lucid English, should enable any merchant to write ads. that will pull satisfactory results.

It is not to be expected that every merchant in the land will be able to produce advertising that shall be strikingly original, neither is it necessary. What is required is advertising that says something; advertising that offers specific advantages to the buyer. That is the kind of advertising that pays the largest dividends on your space investment.

The Use of Cuts.



In preparing advertising it is good business to determine in advance the articles that shall be featured on a certain day, and upon the amount of space necessary to present them attractively and forcefully.

A good space for regular advertising, where several articles are to be featured, is a space three columns wide by ten inches deep. This allows plenty of room for display and illustrations—provided the cuts used are of moderate size. While speaking of cuts it may be well to mention that half-tones should never be used in newspapers where line cuts are available. A half-tone is composed of a multitude of different tones of light and shade produced by groups of small dots more or less closely placed. In the rapid printing of a newspaper the fine dotted surface of the half-tone plate is apt to print up in a blurred condition which does scant justice to the article pictured. On the other hand, a well made line cut, the printing surface of which consists mainly or wholly of clear, sharp lines, seldom fails to print up well even on poor paper, printed rapidly with inferior ink.

When the space to be used has been determined, communicate with the newspaper office and reserve the space for the issue in which the ad. is to appear. Then get to work preparing the copy.

In writing the copy remember that people will read pretty nearly any quantity of advertising, so long as it is humanly interesting. Strive, then, to infuse human interest into every line. By this is meant: talk of the results that ensue from the use of an article as they affect the user rather than of any merely intrinsic or mechanical qualities the article may contain. Hitch a man or a woman to it.

A comparison of the two accompany-

A Setting That Might be Used to Advantage by a Retail Grocer in His Newspaper Advertising.

ing methods of writing up canned goods may serve to illustrate the point:

CANNED SALMON.

Salmon is in excellent demand now. We carry the best brands.

WHY BOTHER WITH COOKING?

Why spend your time in the kitchen while all the others are out enjoying themselves? Among our canned goods you can provide a whole ready-to-eat meal from soup to dessert at prices that mean a distinct saving in money as well as labor. Drop in and see what an immense choice you can have at this grocery.

The first method consists of a bald statement of fact and is liable to be passed over by the reader without leaving the slightest impression that canned salmon is an excellent substitute for heavy cooked meals during the warm weather. The other method contains a suggestion that will appeal strongly to nearly all women. In advertising, experience seems to show that brevity can be carried too far. Use as many words as may be necessary to create the right impression. This can easily be done without much fear of being "long-winded."

Write as You Talk.

No one is so well qualified to develop the human interest feature in advertising merchandise as the merchant himself. He is, or should be, familiar with the uses of the various articles that compose his stock. When selling over the counter the average merchant seldom lacks ability to expound the various uses of the goods he is selling and the many comforts, conveniences, economies, etc., they bring to the customer. A merchant should endeavor to transfer this persuasive selling talk to his written advertising. Viewed rightly, retail advertising is nothing more or less than selling talk printed and addressed to a multitude of people.

Laying Out an Ad.

The most practical way to assist the printer in producing a well-displayed ad. is to take a piece of paper and rule upon it the exact shape and size of the space the ad. is to occupy. Get prints of all cuts, if possible, and paste them in the positions you desire them to appear. Then write in your display lines and indicate in some manner, such as by numbering, the various blocks of reading matter and their respective positions in the ad. The various blocks of reading matter, properly numbered, should be attached to the layout. An examination of the accompanying diagram will give some idea of how to lay out an ad. for the printer.

The grocer who is foolish enough to adopt the cutting system, thereby failing to obtain a fair profit on his goods, cannot expect to retire with a fortune.

The Telephone City Grocers Take a Day Off

With Their Friends They Spend a Good Time at the Falls—Defeat the Butchers by Whirlwind Finish in Baseball Contest—Fat Men Couldn't Run at all—Many go to Buffalo.

Brantford, Ont., July 13.—The big cataract at Niagara Falls enticed away from here last Wednesday about 1,500 people. It was the occasion of the annual excursion of the Brantford Retail Grocers' and Butchers' Association, and the affair was one big success from the drop of the hat to the ringing down of the final curtain.

Last year the grocers and butchers went to the Falls with the Hamilton grocers, but this year they went alone—they wanted plenty of room to work off the surplus energy they have gathered up during the year.

The day was hot and dry, so far as the atmosphere was concerned, and in striking contrast to the same event a year ago when the clouds opened up for an all-day shower.

Many excursionists went on to Buffalo to see the races at Fort Erie and the big eastern league ball game in the Bison City.

Grocers Win Ball Game.

But then there was a bigger ball game at Queen's Park, Niagara Falls. It consisted in a clash between the grocers and butchers, and according to the law of efficiency the food dispensers won. It was a mighty tight squeeze, however—a one run margin. The total number of runs scored was 37—now figure it out for yourself.

The ball game was the opener of the programme and as intimated before it was a superb game. Eddie Dore from Hamilton handled the indicator and what he thinks of the merits and demerits of the various nines would fill a history. Who the real managers of the teams were nobody knows, but at any rate more than one pitcher was warmed up. The triumphant ones are still smoking cigars, but not in the grocery stores—thanks to The Canadian Grocer's cartoons. The teams were:

Grocers—Sager and Harp, p.; R. Welsh, c.; Sager, 1b.; Kew, 2b.; Edwards, 3b.; Townsend, ss.; Gowman, c.f.; Bradley, l.f.; Cutmore, r.f.

Butchers—Newham, p.; Cammell, c.; Doughty, 1b.; Burke, 2b.; Browman, 3b.; Needham, s s.; Hearns, c.f.; Freedman, l.f.; Adams, r.f.

At one time it looked as if the butchers would win, but when Arthur Harp stepped into the box it was all up with the fresh meat men. It is hinted around that the game will be protested on the grounds that Harp is a professional.

Then there were running races, tea and soap races, shoe races and baby contests. There was to have been a fat man's race, but the weather was warm; it would have meant the use of sprinkling carts to cool off the contestants. For the same reason the tug-of-war had to be cancelled.

Music From the Rube Band.

There was music—at least it was purported to be music—from the rube band. At any rate this contingent had a much better following than the 25th Brant Dragoon Band, which is noted for its proficiency.

The committee who had charge of the arrangements consisted of President J. W. Mellen; secretary P. Truss, Messrs. A. Coulbeck, Henry Foulds, F. C. Harp, J. Kew, C. Gress, and Jas. Burns.

NEWFOUNDLAND TRADE.

J. E. Ray, Canadian Trade Commissioner, St. John's, Newfoundland, says: "With the railway extensions in full swing, the Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company, and the Belle Island iron mines appealing for additional laborers, and the revenue increasing monthly, every encouragement is proffered to Canadian exporters to cultivate trade relationship with the colony of Newfoundland.

BUYING AND SELLING SUGAR.

Events in the sugar market the past week, says the New York Journal of Commerce, recall the statement made at the Louisville convention, that "a boy could buy sugar." It is probably the only case in business of any kind where the buyer cannot lose. And yet there is a disposition among jobbers to complain. A paper read at the convention told of the immense amount of sugar handled by the jobbers and at a loss. But why blame the system under which it is bought? On the contrary thanks should be returned that there is enough competition to keep prices down.

The loss to the jobber is not in the buying, but in the selling end of the business. Every jobber is a free agent in the matter, with no one to blame but himself if he cuts sugar to a point that means a loss. The answer to this argument would probably be that the buying system offers too much of a temptation. The jobber cannot resist cutting on a product to the buying price of which he has to give no thought. This is an awful confession of weakness. The jobber should stiffen up his backbone or take the consequences. Remember what President Drake said at Louisville on "Discounts."

Winnipeg Grocers Think Out Unique Contests

The Number of Seeds in a Watermelon—The Best Baby, The Biggest Family and Climbing The Greasy Pole—A $125 Prize For a Couple Who Got Married on the Grounds — Grocers Meet Defeat in Baseball.

(Staff Correspondence.)

Winnipeg, July 13.—For several weeks preceding July 6, the Caterers' Association were making elaborate preparations for the gala outing on that date. It would have been disappointing indeed had anything entered in to mar the brilliant success which was sure to mark such a well organized excursion and picnic. The weather man broke out in a broad smile at early dawn, and all day did his best to intensify the merriment of the great event. Wholesale and retail grocers, butchers and bakers, with their wives, children and friends to the approximate number of five thousand people were at Winnipeg Beach.

The preparations for entertainment on the trains in transit was carried out well. Harper Wilson, the city weight and scales inspector, was in charge of transportation, and as he went up and down the long train that left at ten o'clock selling tickets to those who through excitement forgot to get them at the station, he imparted mirth and enjoyment to the boys and girls, who knew him familiarly as "Harper."

The trip was not without its inconveniences—the coaches were not of the most comfortable type. But when the blue waters came into view the ladies smiled again.

Seeds in the Watermelon.

An event on the train which aroused great interest, and which was arranged by the sports committee under the direction of Sid Screaton, was the watermelon guessing contest. A melon was passed through the train and cards were issued to each passenger upon which to register a guess as to the number of seeds in the melon. An award of five dollars was made on the grounds to the correct guesser, which was the young son of J. A. Jackson, grocer—1,017 was the correct number.

A most elaborate programme of sports had been prepared, and not a hitch was experienced in running off the events. Twenty-two of the items on the list were foot races which included young and old, fat and thin, professional and amateur, male and female.

Needless to say, all the special events created great interest, and the crowd was well pleased with the decision of the judges.

A Wonderful Ball Game.

The sports opened on the grounds with the baseball match between Grocers and Butchers vs. Travelers and Bakers. Thousands watched a most spectacular semi-professional game. The travelers and bakers were younger men than their opponents of the scoop and knife, and, of course, they were also swifter on their feet. This was one occasion when the travelers could get back at the grocers and they put it over them 9 to 7. Lots of smashes, plenty of muffs, a few skinned knees, some wild shouting, an occasional scream from the ladies on the side, characterized the whole contest.

The crowd was quickly ushered to another part of the grounds where a 100-yard race track was roped in and ready for the prancing youth and children and eager adults. Charles Waring, (manager Robinson & Co.'s grocery), acted as judge at the finish line, and although he was knocked down at the conclusion of almost every race, he held his post for all the events and his temper in check too.

Was Proud of His Son.

The special events which were "pulled off" during the afternoon were eagerly taken advantage of by a large number of contestants. The prize for the prettiest baby on the grounds was won by the 7 months' old son of Mrs. Chittick. Fifteen minutes afterwards Mr. Chittick was seen making his way to the nearest bar. The prize for the fattest baby was captured by the young daughter of Billy Boyd, one of the local grocers. F. W. Marples carried off the honors for the largest family competition. Mr. Marples rules a family of ten. The prettiest girl contest was won by Miss Austman, and shortly afterwards her young gentleman escort went to the barber shop to secure a shave.

A Courageous Couple.

The leading special event was the marriage of Miss Nash to Cecil Potton on the grounds, in the presence of thousands of spectators. The band began to play the wedding march at 3 o'clock, the bride was ushered in by her father, and the saintly divine performed the ceremony in the usual sanctimonious manner. Following the ceremony speeches were made by prominent caterers, including ex-President Milton, President Tugwell and Secy. Battley. The young couple were presented with a prize to the value of $125, also with the minister's fee, the marriage license and a 30-pound wedding cake by Alderman Milton.

With the finish of the land sports there was a general rush to the bathing houses and boat house, and there was a greasy pole contest, which was won by B. McManus, who seemed to possess all the attributes of the lord of the chicken roost. The hundred yard caterers swimming race was won by W. Warren.

The Executive of the Winnipeg Caterers' Association—President E. Tugwell is in the Centre Wearing the Long White Coat.

When all the events were finished, the day was spent, and many tired couples proceeded to the shades for a well earned rest. A great many, however, went to the dancing pavilion, and there sought repose in one another's embrace. The 24th annual caterers' outing was the most successful in the history of the association.

Enthusiasm ran high on the return journey, and already plans are being made for the next year's outing, which no doubt, will surpass the event of 1910 to the extent that this year's event has surpassed those of previous years.

Hamper Trade Makes a Heavy Summer Business

Large Montreal Retailers Dress Windows With These Hampers and do More Business in Summer Than in Winter — Canned Meats and Vegetables, Fruits, Biscuits, Tea, Etc., Used in the Display—Baskets Filled to Suit all Purses.

Montreal, July 14.—The accompanying cut shows how one of Montreal's retailers is pushing a summer specialty. This special line of trade has already been referred to casually in The Grocer, but as yet your correspondent has not been in a position to give readers a good window illustrating the hamper trade.

For some years past Fraser, Viger & Co. have been creating a summer trade in this line, which, to make a long matter short, has put their summer trade far ahead of their winter. This surprising state of affairs, so unusual in the retail grocery business, is increasing to such an extent that extra clerks have to be hired for the summer, and even night work is sometimes a necessity. Special training is given to the clerks who pack the hampers, and they are certainly useful and withal handsome articles when finished.

As to the window shown here, it is the work of Charles P. Macklaier, the assistant manager of the store. In the centre are three hampers, packed to show how differently they can be done and still have all the necessities. Of course this is not shown any too clearly by the cut, but a close observer will note considerable differences.

The other articles in the window are salmon and trout rods, a fish net, and a minnow pail. The idea as a whole, being to represent the outfit of a fishing party who started out equipped with Fraser, Viger & Co.'s hampers. It is not only seasonable but in many ways unique as a summer advertisement. The articles in the hampers are good enough to make one's mouth water simply to look at, anh a show card at the side indicates that "Baskets are Filled to Suit all Purses," so who wouldn't want one?

Hampers at Little Cost.

The hampers themselves come from Germany, and are strongly made. They are rather expensive at first, but can be refilled many times, thus reducing the proportional cost to a very small figure. The articles with which they are filled are as varied as the stock of the store itself. It all depends on what is wanted by the customer. Some essentials, however, seem to be always necessary. Canned meats and vegetables, fruits both fresh and canned, imported biscuits, tea, coffee, liquors and such handy little articles as a corkscrew and a can opener. In fact there seems to be no limit to the variety of articles in the well packed hamper.

There is no reason why a similar trade cannot be developed by every progressive retailer, at least to a certain extent, and the profits are much better than from the regular everyday trade. At least one concern is doing a large and ever increasing business of this kind. Why not others?

DIFFERENCE IN WINDOWS.

The following letter has been received from a clerk in a Winnipeg grocery store relating how two methods of window display attracted the public.

"Winnipeg, July 14.—In regard to show windows I had an experience with pickles that establishes the fact that it is not always nicety of detail and arrangement that counts nor always a fine variety of the same line that gets business. I tested results in the two displays which were made five weeks apart. One displayed various sized bottles of pickles of favorite brands. They were well arranged, well labeled and altogether were placed in exact and regular positions. The other window showed five or six boxes of pickles with the tops removed or only partly pulled off. The sawdust packing was allowed to fall in any direction and there was no attempt at regularity. The very opposite was aimed at. In fact I think it sometimes would be wise to take the boxes into the window and open them there; then pull out some of the bottles from each box; place them careless ly about—not too many. Let some be only partly out of the packing and so on. This last display brought in more than fifty per cent. more business than the other. It was thrown together in a short time and required but little attention."

HONESTY IN BUSINESS.

"Honesty in business dealings, purity of goods and full measure to everyone." Such was the maxim adopted by the retail grocers of Brooklyn, N.Y., where recent disclosures were made in connection with short weights and many scales were found to be incorrect. The grocers are incensed that they should be under suspicion of intentional shady work. One of the members in his plea for honest dealings suggested that the ancient custom of "nailing up tricky dealers by the ears" was the only adequate punishment.

TEACH GROCERS BY VIEWS.

Oklahoma Retail Association at a recent meeting had a class in advertising with displays on window trimming, card writing, and advertising conducted by the Oklahoma Ad. Club. Stereopticon slides and charts were used in illustrating the subjects taken up and every merchant attending left with a better knowledge of how to conduct this important part of his business.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Prince Edward Island Merchant Advertises What He Will Sell For 25 Cents—Advancing Sale of Breakfast Foods—Early Closing in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick—Arnprior Merchant Strict About His Credit Standing—Grocer In Owen Sound Instals New Fixtures.

What 25 Cents Will Buy.

Summerside, P.E.I., July 13.—One of the big retail grocery advertisers here is R. T. Holman, Ltd. In a recent issue of the local newspaper they used a space 16½ inches by 6½ inches to advertise principally hot weather foods, heading the ad. with the words in black type, "Choice Groceries for Summer Weather." Cuts were used to illustrate breakfast foods, camp coffee, etc.

At the bottom of the ad. a two-inch space was devoted to what 25 cents would buy. Among the articles were the following:

9 lbs. Rolled Oats or Oatmeal.
7 lbs. Rice.
3 pkgs. Corn Starch.
3 pkgs. Seeded Raisins.
1 Bottle, 40, Mustard Pickles.
6 Bars Good Laundry Soap.
6 pkgs. —— Jelly Powder.
3 cans Peas, Beans, Corn or Tomatoes.
1 lb. —— Blend Tea.
1 dozen Lemons.
1 lb. Cream of Tartar.

More Time For Recreation.

Dartmouth, N.S., July 13.—The grocers of Dartmouth have agreed to close their places of business on Wednesday afternoons at one o'clock during the months of July, August and September. The grocers have two days in one on Saturdays and their hours are long anyway, so that this half holiday will be a specially good thing for them. Fifteen or sixteen places of business are concerned in this change.

The meat dealers of Dartmouth have for the past couple of years taken Monday afternoon as a half holiday. It is not unlikely that other lines of business will follow the meat dealers and the grocers and select a half day to give their employers a chance for recreation.

Strict About His Credits.

Arnprior, Ont., July 14.—W. M. Howe, for fifteen years a grocer here, recently sold his business to Daniel Duffy, Cobden, Ont. The latter, however, only held the business for three weeks when on the advice of his physician he was obliged to sell. The next purchaser was W. E. Parsons, for a number of years head salesman for Mr. Howe. The latter leaves shortly for western Canada where he intends entering the grocery business again.

Mr. Howe has been a successful grocer; he holds and cherishes many testimonials from wholesalers and others with whom he has been doing business. One of his hobbies was to make sure that his credit was of the very best and he always secured his discounts.

Early Closing in Suburbs.

St. John, N.B., July 14.—The retail grocers in the district known as the "Valley" have agreed to close their stores on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings each week, and after trying it for a week they find that they have not lost any business by the change as the people quickly adapt themselves to the new order.

An endeavor is being made to get the dealers in the Haymarket square district to join in, but one of the proprietors, who is opposed to the idea, has been holding out and thus far has blocked the movement. The labor unions are being appealed to, to support only those stores that give their employes the three nights a week. It is hoped eventually to have all the stores in the outlying districts adopt the principle of closing every evening at seven o'clock, except Saturdays, as is now done by the merchants in the city proper.

Calls His Store "The Hub."

Tilbury, Ont., July 14.—Nelson Emery, who designates his place of business "The Hub," uses a cut of the hub of a wagon in his newspaper advertisements.

He has recently added groceries and dry goods to his men's furnishing and boot and shoe stock and advertises that he will buy all kinds of produce from farmers on a cash basis.

Doubling Size of Store.

Owen Sound, Ont., July 14.—Dan McClean, a local grocer, is doubling the size of his premises by taking over the store, until this week occupied by T. McAuley, gents' furnisher. The partition between the two stores is being taken down and Mr. McClean is having the entire establishment refitted with new shelving and appliances suited to his business. When these alterations are completed he will have a much better grocery store.

Unusual Collecting Method.

Toronto, July 14.—A local grocer tells an amusing story of how he collected an old bill which he had given up as a hopeless case. The method practically presented itself and it certainly proved efficient.

Without dwelling upon the preliminary details this collector looked more like Jerry the Tramp than a business man of any type. He was offered two dollars a day to "hang around" this house until he got the money. The grocer knew it would not inconvenience the debtor to hand it over and he sought to shame them into it. The collector presented himself, but was told to be off. He intimated that he was in no hurry. The door banged and the collector sat down on the step to wait.

Three hours turned the trick. Rather than create a scene they handed over the money and thus rid themselves of the questionable looking individual who was decorating the front door step. This is not offered as a method to be employed in every case, but it served in this particular instance.

FARRINGTON PHILOSOPHY.

A reputation may get a clerk a job, but it will take more than that to keep it for him.

When a man agrees to work for so much, he contracts to devote his time while on duty to his employer. Time stolen for other purposes is no less stolen than is money taken out of the till.

The man who was not brought up to be polite is going to have a hard time cultivating that virtue, but he can do it and he must if he would succeed.

The merchant who thinks that his advertising ought to build him up a big business in a few months has forgotten that a business, like the building that houses it, can be built only stone by stone.

Do everything in your power to keep customers good natured, to cure them of a grouch if they come with one. The good-natured customers buy twice as much as any other.

Some men are so easily satisfied that they are always satisfied with themselves. No such men are among the Captains of Industry.

It is the little thing in the treatment of a customer that brings him back another day or sends him away never to return.

The customer's vanity is a fair mark for the arrows of salesmanship. He who learns to hit the mark most frequently makes the most sales.

TRADE NOTES.

The retail Grocers of Owen Sound, Ont., have all decided to close their stores every Wednesday afternoon for the balance of July and August all grocers have neatly printed cards in their windows advertising this move.

A report from New York states that more than 12 tons of frozen or dessicated eggs shipped there from Chicago have been seized as unfit for human consumption at one of the refrigerating company's plants in Brooklyn. Government inspectors, acting under orders from the Department of Agriculture made the seizure. It is the largest on record in Greater New York.

A Grocers' Bill has been passed in Massachusetts whereby a married woman is made liable for groceries to the amount of $100 provided she is worth $2 000.

STARCH FORECAST CORRECT.

Since last week's issue there has been a decline in some starch prices, both laundry and culinary. The decline amounts from ¼ to ½ a cent.

Just at present starch is one of the fast sellers and needs the attention of retailers. Manufacturers state that despite the fact that laundries are making a much larger demand on laundry starch than ever before, householders are doing the same.

The declines above mentioned were forecast in last week's issue of The Grocer. This shows the necessity of retailers keeping closely in touch with our market reports, for in many instances they are sure to save money if they do.

FRUIT JAR SEASON.

Now is the time to call the housewife's attention to the fruit jar stock; if you do not get the business some other merchant will.

One of the best methods is the use of newspaper space, calling attention to the fruit gem and naming the prices of the various sizes. This can be augmented by two or three window displays during the fruit season, and also by direct conversations with customers over the phone and in the store.

Often when a customer's attention is directed in conversation to an article she will at once order it because she had previously read your advertisement in the newspaper. The ad. had produced an unconscious effect on her mind at the time, and it merely lacked your suggestion to close the deal.

ADVERTISE BREAKFAST FOODS.

The season is here when grocers should advance their breakfast food sales. As a general rule, housewives do not care to do too much cooking in hot weather, and to take advantage of this fact should be one of the aims of the merchant who supplies the foodstuffs.

As will be observed in another column of this issue, such is being done by a firm in Summerside, P.E.I.—the R. T. Holman, Ltd. They are advertising eight or ten different breakfast foods. as well as camp coffee, and using a large newspaper space in which to do it. They are out after the breakfast food business at a time when these goods move the most rapidly.

This is good business. It shows foresight and an insight into scientific retailing.

BAN ON THE SECRET REBATER.

The secret rebater is becoming more and more unpopular, and it begins to look as if Canadian salesmen were to be divided into two great moral classes—the secret rebater and the honest salesman who depends upon his ability.

The man who stoops so low as to offer a rebate in order to cover up his lack of salesmanship does not deserve the support or glad hand of his fellow traveler. His competition is most unfair; not only that, it is criminal in the eyes of the law.

Recent cases have come to our observation where travelers have declined to recognize their confreres on the street because the latter have been guilty of an offence of the criminal code in respect to secret rebates.

Under ordinary circumstances their action in keeping aloof from their competitors should be discouraged. But in the case at hand are they not justified to a certain extent in ostracising them?

The secret rebater is rapidly becoming unpopular, and rightly so. Business should be done on honest principles—a salesman should rely on his salesmanship ability, the standard of his goods, and the reliability of his house, and not on rebates contrary to the criminal, as well as to the moral law.

DISAGREEABLE SALESMEN.

A discourteous salesman behind the counter is dear at any price and his employer would find it more profitable to pay him to stay away from the store than to receive money from him for the privilege of attempting to sell goods. As long as he is in the store he is likely to increase rather than decrease the number of disagreeable customers. Like begets like.

There are a good many customers who would try the patience of Job. Most clerks have a fair amount of patience and desire to please customers and advance the interests of their employer. In moments of weakness, however, the best of them are in danger of going down before the assaults of disagreeable customers.

But in spite of all, it is the duty of salesmen to practise patience as if they were qualifying for a saintship. It is business, and salesmen are designed for business building.

LET US AVOID HYPOCRISY.

The extra-provincial tax of British Columbia is a menace to inter-provincial trade. There is no doubt about it, and no one denies it.

It is a sort of McKinley Act levied against the other provinces composing the Dominion.

But while this is true, do not let us who live and do business outside British Columbia play the hypocrite. These British Columbians may be sinners greater than we are in this one respect, but none of us can lay claim to being altogether free from narrow provincial legislative sins of the type which has been placed upon the statute book of British Columbia.

Several of the provinces have rather drastic laws on their statute books in regard to extra-provincial companies. In Ontario, for example, the penalty for non-registration is the same as in British Columbia, namely, $50 a day for the company and $20 a day for the agent or representative. And then some that have not extra-provincial taxes, permit municipalities to levy taxes upon commercial travelers, which is even a more irksome form of taxation.

Wherein the British Columbia Act chiefly differs from similar Acts on the statute books of Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba is in its enforcement. British Columbia seems determined to strictly enforce the law; the other provinces that possess a similar law are in the main unconcerned about its enforcement. The Vancouver Board of Trade has failed to induce the Attorney-General to suspend the operations of the Act for even six months.

The enforcement of the law will certainly interfere with trade relations between British Columbia and the other provinces.

But the tax of $25 to $250, according to the capital stock of the company, is not the worst feature of the legislation. It is its narrow provincialism that is most to be deprecated.

It is nationalism, not provincialism, which should be the aim of every Canadian to develop.

A law which, according to the Attorney-General's own word, declares it to be illegal for a person in British Columbia to order goods from a non-registered company located outside the province, certainly does not savor of nationalism.

Before, however, the business men of eastern Canada seriously undertake the modification of the objectionable British Columbia Act, would it not be well for them to begin at home? Their laws, in practice, may not be as aggressive as that in British Columbia, but they are on the statute book, and as long as they are thereon they can scarcely, with clear consciences, undertake the regeneration of their fellow sinners in the Pacific Province.

HOW LAND VALUE WAS RAISED.

If any merchant does not believe that scientific methods in the store tend to success, let him look at the benefits derived from scientific farming and fruit raising.

The Ontario Government has taken over for two years six orchards in Simcoe county, with a view to pointing out to the farmers of what value these orchards really are. It is estimated that Simcoe county, with its 12,000 acres of apple trees, can be made into a great fruit-growing district. If these 12,000 acres were properly handled an annual revenue of $1,200,000, or $100 an acre, could be realized.

This, too, is only a conservative estimate, as the apple growers in Norfolk county are realizing from $100 to $300 an acre. In the latter district the growers have an association numbering more than 300 members. They have applied science to their work, with the result that the value of the fruit land has increased from 10 to 20 per cent.

Scientific methods are needed in the store as well as on the farm. Merchants, through their associations, can, if they will, study the best methods in merchandizing. Then, if they apply them to their businesses, they are almost sure to be successful.

DROUGHT AFFECTS THE HUCKLEBERRIES.

Authentic reports from the Highlands of Ontario state that the huckleberry crop will not be nearly up to the average, in view of lack of moisture at the proper time. Farmers in Muskoka are predicting only half a picking, but this is, no doubt, under-estimated.

In any event, huckleberries are likely to be high in price and not extra good in quality.

Did you ever stop to think that rice forms the principal food of half the population of the earth? The Canadian people are not heavy users, and that is all the greater reason why grocers should endeavor to increase their business in this respect.

A Method to Gain the Confidence of Customers

A Plan That General Merchants Doing a Business of $40,000 a Year are Following to Hold Trade—They Strive to Give Entire Satisfaction When Complaints are Made—An Inexpensive Plan.

Confidence in the quality of his goods, confidence in himself, in his clerks and in the general character of the house, is after all what the average grocer strives to implant in the minds of his customers. It comes only after years of business relations. Likewise it explains why families dealt with some grocers for years, and children of the former continued to deal with the same business houses.

A grocer may feel sometimes that customers look for opportunities to impose upon him but it is a rather well established fact that the grocer who concedes a point has less difficulty in holding his customers than the one who refuses to consider a claim after deciding that neither he nor his clerks are responsible for the incident that gave rise to the misunderstanding.

The most progressive firms have found that it paid them to guarantee satisfaction to their customers, and friends once made for a store on this basis generally maintain their loyalty to the extent of not only continuing to give it their own patronage, but to also advertise the store amongst their personal friends.

To Promote Confidence.

A striking example of the methods employed by one firm of general merchants is shown in the printed matter used. In each package which leaves the store, a card is included which reads as follows:

> It is well understood that we guarantee satisfaction with every sale. The man who makes the mistake can usually adjust it more readily than some one not familiar with the transaction.
> This order was filled by our Mr.....
> A claim accompanied by this card can be adjusted within three minutes after reaching our store—and we want you to complain if you are not pleased.
> Sale No. .....
> Date .....

On the back of the card appears the following:

> AFTER ALL.
> Buying is a confidence game; confidence in the house; confidence in the man you trade with. Few buyers (merchants not excepted) know the real value of everything they buy. They are guided by prices and the confidence they place in the man who sells them. Each man in our employ enjoys the full confidence of the people where they have spent most of their lives. Each man has instructions to
> PLEASE THE CUSTOMER.
> He understands fully that we guarantee every article to give satisfaction, and that it IS OUR AIM to treat every one right. We are human, and in selling $40,000 worth in 12 months make some mistakes, but we gladly correct any, and most persons who are reasonable will accept a correction.
> We have the utmost confidence in each of our men, and as every article is marked in plain figures and fully guaranteed, you are risking nothing when you place confidence in us for part or all your wants.

A Convincing Argument.

This kind of advertising should appeal to you if you were a customer of the above firm. It contains a dignified expression of the policy upon which these merchants operate and is intended to convince their customers that their trade is appreciated and that as far as it lies within the firm's power, every effort will be made to give fair treatment and perfect satisfaction with each purchase. A reputation established on this basis is a most valuable asset.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR AWNINGS.

Awnings will last longer and look better if merchants would dry them out when they get wet. Some leave their awnings down to soak and drip all through a heavy rain, but it doesn't do an awning any more good than it would any other fabric to soak it in that way. To preserve your awnings haul them up when it rains, but, if they get wet, when the air is right, lower them and let them dry out, and be sure they're dry when you furl them before you close up for the night.

Some merchants, of course, consider an awning is a protection to the passersby, and believe that many tarry under it during a shower, some of whom enter the store, and perhaps purchase goods. That's one way of looking at it, but to consider the awning itself there's no question about the advisability of taking care of it so that it will not become faded and discolored.

McGillivray & Cunningham have purchased the grocery store of A. J. Malcolm, Wingham, Ont.

One hundred and fifty children were recently dismissed from further attendance during the remainder of the school year at Salem, Oregan, to assist a canning company to handle the berries delivered by growers at that firm's plant.

Keeping the Store Sanitary in Hot Weather

The Importance of a Good Air Circulation — Cool Atmosphere Conducive to Attracting Customers — Screens and Electric Fans Should be Used to Help Keep Out the Flies — A Story From Saskatchewan.

July and August are the two real summer months of the year. Occasionally we experience some hot weather in June, and this year the thermometer registered some high temperatures during that month in western Canada.

There is no doubt that during the past few weeks, not only the grocer has suffered physically, but his business has also suffered, because he was not prepared for the extraordinary hot weather that prevailed. His business may have gone down on account of many reasons. It may have been too warm to take care of it properly. He may not have had enough seasonable goods on hand. He may not have had his windows and doors screened so that fresh draughts could be circulated through the store. His store may have had the appearance of a fly hive during the days when these pests breed rapidly. Customers may have felt it too uncomfortable in the stuffy store to order many goods.

It cannot be said that some one of these conditions did not prevail somewhere, and as July is half gone and August is coming it would be wise for the grocer to make his entire business and premises seasonable.

Moving Salt on a Hot Day.

A traveler entered a grocery store in a Saskatchewan town recently, and found the merchant toiling with a barrel of salt. The thermometer at that moment was 92 in the shade, and the door of the store was closed. Several customers were in the store watching the sweltering merchant who did not realize how ridiculous it looked for him to be wearing a broadcloth coat under the most trying circumstances. Common sense should have made him take off his coat at least. The careful merchant would have refrained from presenting such an appearance. It is actually cooling to enter a store and see the merchant coolly dressed and looking fresh, and going about cheerfully in fresh, airy premises. People like to come into a store like that.

Screen Door all Winter.

It is only human nature to be careless about many things regarding the appearance of the store. Sometimes the grocer leaves his screen door on all winter, and the following summer patches it up roughly and allows it to clatter away in a half serviceable manner.

It would be best to take proper time and either put on a new well fitting door, or else have the old one respectably repaired, and serviceable enough to, at least, keep out the flies. It may be that some grocers do not put on a screen door at all. In this case there is either a host of flies in the store, or the place is stuffy and unhealthy.

By all means pains should be taken to give the store a cool appearance. Appearance is sometimes equal to realization. But it is highly probable that if efforts are directed toward a cool appearance that the desired object will be realized.

Using Electric and Palm Fans.

Many stores are installing electric fans and the result is that the air is always fresh and cool.

Many grocers hang palm fans from the ceiling on elastic strings. These are suspended over the outer edge of the counter, and can be conveniently reached by the customer seated by the counter. The average customer considers this a luxury, and it goes far in making the purchaser at home while in the store. The green palm plant is a pleasant thing to have in the store. It gives the place a fresh and inviting appearance when it is warm and sultry without.

Much can be done to keep the store cool and fresh by carefully oiling or sprinkling the floor. Hardwood floors, only, can be oiled, and in very warm weather they could be oiled with advantage at least once a week. The soft wood floors should be sprinkled often, as it settles the dust and cools the air in the store.

A water fountain is a favorite thing in the grocery window. In most cases it is used to sprinkle vegetables, and it is valuable for its cooling appearance and its fresh effect upon the atmosphere. A great secret in keeping the premises inviting and comfortable is to have plenty of window and door openings to permit of a free circulation of draughts. These openings must all be screened, however, to keep out the dust and flies, but screening is a simple matter. It is a good idea in planning a store front to have the top part of the main window on hinges so that it can be opened during the summer season and screened.

Get After the Fly.

A great midsummer problem is the suppressing of flies. The general business is sure to suffer if the grocer ceases to fight these pests. They must be screened out. All material that accumulates on the counter and floor that attracts them must be cleaned away. Cleanliness is an absolute necessity in the fight against flies. The absence of decayed and decaying matter means the absence of flies. All goods such as dried fruits, meats and breadstuffs should not be exposed during the summer months. There are glass cases, and wire screens made purposely to cover these goods, and the careful merchant will take advantage of these articles to keep his stock clean and in good taste.

Every grocer will admit that, when goods present a wholesome and tasty appearance, when the store is cool, clean and fresh, and when the grocer and his clerks are comfortable and cheery, the science of merchandizing is greatly faciliated. It is for that reason the foregoing hints are thrown out.

CANADIAN AND U. S. FOOD PRICES

Boston Wholesaler Says There is Little Difference—Thinks U. S. Consumer Gets Good Value for His Money.

The Massachusetts commission appointed to compare prices of grocery articles in Canada and in the United States included a Boston wholesale grocer who has given out some interesting facts and figures. Comparisons were made between Windsor and Detroit and between Montreal and Boston and the conclusion reached that there was little difference.

In his report this wholesaler says in part:

"It is almost impossible to make up a schedule or chart covering prices for accurate comparison, owing to the fact that some cities use different qualities and different kinds of goods.

"Following is submitted a list of foods which, owing to difference in kind and grade, could not be specifically compared by selling prices, but which I shall generalize as higher or lower in one country or the other, according to what, in my judgment, the customers get for their money:

"Cereal foods (packages).—Cost retailer and consumer approximately the same in both countries.

"Peaches (canned).—Canada packs in Ontario a peach entirely different from our California product; prices are higher in Canada.

"Milk (condensed).—Prices rule about the same to the consumer on both countries; sold a little cheaper to wholesaler in Canada in some cases.

"Molasses—Canada uses different variety from the United States, with prices to the consumer about the same per gallon.

"Olives (in bottles).—Olives in bottles are much higher in Canada; a 10-ounce bottle of 90-110 Queen sells for 25 cents in Canada, while a 14-ounce bottle of 90-110 Queen sells for 25 cents in the United States.

"Teas.—Canada uses mostly blended teas in foil packages, while Detroit uses Japan, Bangor and Boston mostly oolongs; consumers' prices average lower in Canada.

"Salmon (canned).—Canada uses principally a sockeye salmon, at 18 cents at retail; the United States uses principally a red Alaska salmon, at 15 cents at retail; the consumer gets equal relative value in both cases.

"Nuts.—Canada uses French walnuts, at about 15 cents a pound at retail; the United States uses California and Naples walnuts at about 17 to 18 cents a pound at retail.

"Canned goods.—The Canadian prices on the largest selling varieties of canned goods are nearly the same, as far as the consumer is concerned. There apparently is not quite the variety and careful grading in Canada that is shown in the United States product, which must show a slightly higher commercial value cost in Canada over that of a similar product in the United States.

"Taking into consideration all the foregoing data, it is the opinion of the writer, based on his observations and comparisons as far as he has gone in the research, that the consumer gets, on an average, fully as much value, more variety and in some cases a better article for his money in the United States than in Canada.

A Strong Method for Keeping Trade at Home

Stayner Retail Merchants Talk in Business Terms to the People of Their District—Make Direct Appeal to Not Only Their Sense of Loyalty, But Show Them They are Better off Financially in Spending Their Money in Their Home Town—Actual Instances Where Better Prices are Given Than by Mail Order Houses.

To get the trade of people who are always looking for the best price you have to SHOW them. To do this, good, sound business reasoning is practically the only way to permanently prove that you have the goods, that your prices are right, and that these people are actually losing money and time in sending their orders to outside centres.

Bell & McEachern, general merchants, Stayner, Ont., aim to SHOW the people in their district by appealing to two of their senses—their sense of loyalty to their home town and their sense of business acumen. As a matter of loyalty they should support their home town by buying at home and keeping their money there; but more important, they should buy at home because the prices are better, because the value of real estate is lessened if the money is sent away, and if the merchants are not successful.

Bell & McEachern say to The Canadian Grocer:

> "Hitherto our policy has been to ignore the practice complained of entirely, particularly the sending of mail orders, but it has become so widespread and appears to be gaining ground so rapidly that the prophecy of a prominent merchant not 75 miles from Toronto, that before ten years all business places outside of the large centres would be reduced to the status of a peanut stand, does not appear so wild as it sounds. Although we do not feel so pessimistic about the situation, it strikes us that we can no longer ignore it."

On June 30—the day before Dominion Day—they ran the following advertisement in a three-column space down the entire left-hand side of the front page of the Stayner Sun, the word "Loyalty" being in large black type, with a rule beneath, and there being plenty of white space surrounding the whole matter:

LOYALTY.

"To-morrow will be Dominion Day—the day on which we celebrate the confederation of the various provinces of our country. Surely the note of patriotic pride and fervor will be dominant throughout its length and breadth.

"Think of its magnificent size; its potential wealth; its sterling people! Three thousand five hundred miles in length; sixteen hundred miles in breadth, our boundless wheatfields; our hidden stores of minerals; our mighty tide of immigration—from three to four hundred thousand a year; our healthy, happy people. No wonder we sing with heart and voice, "God Save Our King, and Heaven Bless the Maple Leaf Forever!!"

"Loyalty to our country has built up our industries, conserved our farming interests, and is making of us a strong, sturdy, self-reliant nation.

"What do we think of the man or woman, who, enjoying all the privileges that citizenship brings, decries our land, our industries, our products, and gives his trade to a foreign country? His loyalty might well be questioned.

"A nation is simply a big community, made up in its integral part of small communities such as our own, reflecting their habits of life and thought; and yet what do we find many of our people doing locally? Following this very thing! If not actually decrying our town and business houses by word of mouth, they are doing so by practice. The ultimate outcome of such a course, if generally pursued will be that Stayner, and all other rural towns and villages will cease to exist.

"As business men we ask no favors, we make a straight appeal to your patriotism, to your sense of fairness, and at the same time to your self-interest. for the body politic is so constituted that what affects part affects the whole, and by sending your business away from your own town whether you are a farmer, a tradesman or a mechanic, you depreciate to that extent your own property. Why is it that farm land around the City of Hamilton to-day is worth from $500 to $1,000 per acre; or $1,000 to $2,000 around Toronto? Do you suppose if the people of Hamilton had sent their trade to Toronto, or the people of Toronto had sent their trade to New York that present conditions would obtain? Not much. These people were loyal to their respective towns in their small days and these results followed.

"As we stated before we ask no favors. If we cannot supply goods,—reliable goods—at as low a price as you can get any where we do not ask your trade, but we claim we have a right to expect it on even terms if nothing more.

"Here are a few instances that have lately come under our notice:—An order came in from a lady for three toilet sets—plain white ware at $1 per set. In it she said, "I was told I could not get these anywhere but at ——— (naming a Toronto departmental store) at that price and I was surprised to find that you had them.' Here was an order probably going out of town on which freight and packing would have to be paid—the latter at least even if it was a $25 order, adding from 10 to 15 per cent. on their cost; and going to swell the income of a multi-millionaire who never contributed five cents for the welfare of Stayner or five minutes for its upbuilding in any way.

Another letter order reached us this week asking—among other things — for six window shades, 'if you have anything similar to the enclosed clipping.' The 'clipping' was an illustration of a shade either in cream or green at 25c. Our price on the same article is 22½c.

"This week again we came across a magnificently illustrated summer catalogue from the same source quoting special prices for summer needs. On the back page, priced in large red ink letters to indicate something very special is advertised an Arabian Curtain Cloth at 24c. We have identically the same goods, and our ordinary every day price is 25c and we are making our ordinary legitimate profit on it, and so on through the whole catalogue.

"The same remarks apply to the practice of running to Collingwood or Barrie. Why should you build up these places and communities at the expense of your own? You will loose more on the value of your own farm if you destroy your own town as a market place than all your imaginary savings would amount to in a life time.

"Be sane, be sensible, bring along all your catalogues, your sale bills—common every day loyalty demands that you give us and the rest of our business people a fair show—compare prices fairly and honestly, and if we cannot do as well for you as any business house in Toronto or any other place we will not expect you to buy. Isn't that fair?"

BELL & McEACHERN,

It Advertises."

TRADE NOTES.

The prune market maintains a firm position.

There seems to be a revival of the fruit industry throughout Canada. Spraying demonstrations are being given by agricultural representatives in Ontario and more care is being exercised to the preparation of orchards. To help the good cause along the Board of Trade in Orillia, Ont., has formed a fruit board in an endeavor to advance the fruit growing industry.

Probably nothing else known in United States agriculture has made as great strides in popularity in recent years as the asparagus. Only a short time ago it was regarded as a luxury, now it is practically within the range of everyone. The canners are turning out a good product and this gives the growers a good market.

Montreal, July 14, 1910.

Trade conditions are good here at present. All the jobbers report a large volume of business at fair margins and extending to nearly all lines. The most serious outlook locally is in canned peas, standard size, which are practically exhausted. However, the new crop will be in before long and relieve matters. Seed tapioca is another item which is destined to keep scarce. Little is offering and it is snapped up with surprising celerity.

Evaporated apples are doing better and show signs of continuing at fairly high prices in the primary markets.

Taken all through the situation is a strong one and trade through the summer should be exceptionally good.

During the week there was a reduction in the prices of some brands of starch.

Sugar—While there seems to be a slight weakening in the raw market during the past few days, still it is thought to be a very strong situation, and no change is expected. It looks like continued high prices for some time to come. Trade is very brisk at present prices, owing to the preserving season and the large trade in summer drinks.

Spices—The continued demand for high grade spices has kept the market firm, and as there is a strong demand for preserving purposes, there seems to be little prospect of any change, unless higher, until fall. Gingers, cloves and peppers seem to be selling the best.

Dried Fruits—Raisins of all kinds seem to be scarce and that in face of the strong demand has caused prices to firm up considerably, though not sufficiently as yet to affect the retailer.

Prunes in the larger sizes are also scarce, though the demand is light, thus relieving the situation somewhat.

Nuts—The usual gloomy stories from France regarding the walnut crop are afloat, and local dealers seem inclined to place more confidence in them than usual. If so, higher prices are in prospect.

Almonds seem to be scarce and prices are due for a slight advance it is thought. Filberts are ½c lower owing to a slack demand.

Evaporated Apples—Prices are ruling higher in the primary market owing to the bare state of the market and a sudden return of the export demand. An offer to buy a car at ½c advance over the former price was turned down. Altogether the situation in this line is much more encouraging.

Evaporated apples, prime	0 08

Beans and Peas—There seems to be a decided improvement in the pea situation during the past few days. The cause is said to be a growing scarcity of the better grades. At any rate holders are asking higher prices.

In beans there is little doing at present.

Rice and Tapioca—Tapioca is firm. Offerings are scarce, especially seed. Prices in the primary markets keep high and there are only a few sellers, consequently they are able to keep values up. It looks as if the market would continue strong for some time to come, as rubber plantations have taken the place of many tapioca plantations.

Rice is having rather a dull sale at present, but prices are unchanged.

TORONTO.

Jobbers report good business in canned goods, particularly in vegetables. The new fruits have, of course, curtailed business in canned fruits.

There is a good demand for salmon but from all reports the supply is none too plentiful. The opening prices for the new British Columbia pack have not yet been published, but they are likely to be named soon. An advance idea of what they are likely to be has been received by The Grocer from an authentic source and when the new quotations are given out it is believed the difference will be nil. It has been learned that best Fraser River sockeyes are placed at $6.50 a case, best cohoes at from $4.75 to $5 and best pinks at $3.25. These are coast prices by car lot. It will not be long until the prices are quoted publicly.

The new strawberry pack has been put up and prices have been given out by some of the canners. The pack is claimed to be just about one half the normal or what was expected. This was due to the short season and the dry weather that prevailed at the finish. The prices announced are: for group A, $1.50 a doz.; for group B, $1.47½ a doz.

These are considerably higher than last year when the opening quotations ranged from $1.25 to $1.35. but it is less than the prices for two years ago when $1.90 was asked. Everyone is waiting for the price list as it will appear this year and it may be said that the strawberry prices are no more than was expected by many of those who had been following conditions closely.

Peas are coming under consideraton and it is felt that the pack will only be one half the normal. High prices are likely to rule since the market is practically bare.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Starch—Decline ¼ to ½c.

Currants and Raisins—Firm.

Canned Strawberries—New prices out.

Canned Salmon—Advanced quotations secured.

Toronto, July 14, 1910.

Jobbers still report good business along general lines and a feeling of satisfaction with business prevails. Sugar is running along smoothly with the chances for another increase more remote than they were a few weeks ago. The sugar market is steady and firm, but it was expected that a bumper yield of strawberries would lead to a heavy demand for sugar. The crops did not come up to expectations however.

During the week a reduction in the price of starch was reported in some brands. The consumption of starch is heavy just now and business is good.

Rice and tapioca are quite steady before a good summer demand. Dried fruits are firm, raisins and currants particularly so. New currants for most direct shipment opened 3s. higher than a year ago. Prunes, too, are inclined to be firm.

In canned goods, the new prices are being awaited with interest. Strawberries have been named at $1.47½ and $1.50. Only half a pack is reported. Peas are expected to be below the usual pack although the recent rains may have a good influence. The new salmon prices are expected any day now and on this page are quoted prices which were secured from a good authority, but which have not yet been made public.

Sugar—Expectations of a heavy consumption of sugar as the result of a big crop of strawberries were not exactly realized to the full. The season was too short and the crop itself was disappointing. The market is steady, however, and is improving. Wholesalers do not expect another increase in prices at least not for the present. The demand should remain steady during July and August, they state, increasing in September when a change is more likely to occur.

Dried Fruits—The price for new currants to be shipped by the first direct steamer is quoted 3s. higher than that of last year. The crop is reported to be 30 per cent. below the average, thus substantiating the reports that have been received from time to time. The spot market is quiet.

Advices regarding Valencia raisins are to the effect that the prices are going to be higher than last year. Australia has grown only a sufficient stock for her own needs and in consequence England will have to depend on other sources of supply. There is also reported a shortage of currants and Sultanas. In view of these conditions the demand is bound to be heavier on Valencias. But the latter crop is going to be smaller than usual on account of the dry weather that has been experienced. Even should rains come now, they will be too late to bring forth a full crop. Everything seems to combine for higher prices.

MANITOBA MARKETS

Advanced—Rolled oats, tapioca, sago.
Stronger—Sugar, dried fruits.
Reduced—Almonds.

Winnipeg, July 14, 1910.

The general trade is greatly improved this week. During the depressing weather of the past few weeks there was little activity in the markets and few men in any branch of business were hustling The result was that retailers' stocks got low and now travelers are sending in good orders for a wide range of stock.

The reports from crop centres are interesting this week. In the western States the crop in some lines is light, while in the far east. The destruction of plants is being carried on relentlessly to make room for rubber. This all tends to strengthen the markets everywhere.

Crop conditions in Saskatchewan and Manitoba remain practically unchanged from a week ago, and any change is in the direction of improvement following heavy local showers in many of the northern districts where rain was greatly needed. In Regina district conditions remain good. Wheat now shows a growth of from 22 to 33 inches, and in many places is already heading out. Prospects generally are for an early harvest with fair average yield.

Except in very rare cases where the wheat was sown very early and on poorly worked land, the crop is good. The heavy rain which fell during the seeding gave the wheat a good start, and there has hardly been a week since without at least a shower, and quite often a good general rain.

The oat crop is not nearly as large in acreage this year as last. The wheat crop yielded such large returns last year that the majority of farmers have only sufficient oats sown for their own use. The plant is strong and healthy and the yield is expected to be fairly large.

Sugar—Prices have firmed up locally due to the opening of the preserving season everywhere in the west. This condition will be maintained for some weeks at least and it will tend to keep the sugar market strong for the remainder of the season. The demand for icing and powdered sugars is fair only and the lump stuff is held strong.

Foreign Dried Fruits—Conditions in crop centres almost entirely rule the market at present. The demand is good everywhere and this would warrant a strong market. Packers in California and Oregon are holding for higher prices. In Oregon the crop is estimated at 25 to 50 per cent. of last year and although the California crop is about equal to last year the packers in the latter state are corralling the stocks and higher prices are sure to rule. When new fruit actually comes on the market buyers feel that lower prices than are at present in view can be quoted. The Valencia raisin crop is good but rain is badly needed at present. The currant crop in Greece is suffering with the Peronosperous disease which is peculiar to that plant. As a result the crop will be light and goods will be marred. No change, however, has yet been made in the local quotations.

Peanuts are going well at the prices quoted, which are according to quality, and rumors are that higher prices may be quoted soon due to the general heavy consumption. How a Famous Manufacturer Maintains Prices Without Using a Contract—He Relies on the Personal Honor of Those to Whom He Sells—Handling of the Recalcitrant Ones.

By Frank H. Holman, in Printers' Ink.

A white-haired, grizzled veteran of business not long ago smiled philosophically at a square-jawed young manufacturer who was exhibiting with great satisfaction a bunch of contracts for price maintenance with dealers and jobbers. "Your contracts," said the old man, with an air of wisdom, "arn't worth the paper they're written on."

The young manufacturer snorted dissent.

"Every honest man whose name you've got signed to those contracts," continued the old man unabashed, "would maintain prices if he promised to do so, contract or no contract; while the crooks and the wishy-washies will break your prices, contract or no contract. Personal honor is a stronger force than imposing contracts, legal seals and foxy clauses. There has never yet been written a contract that couldn't be broken by legal quibble and dishonorable intent. The law is not as omnipotent as you think—and personal honor is a practical business factor that has yet to get its full share of credit."

And then that philosopher-manufacturer quietly pulled out some card index drawers which were simply overflowing with cards containing the names of many thousands of retailers throughout this country, many of them the same as had signed price maintenance contracts with the young manufacturer.

"With every one of these dealers," said the elder manufacturer, "I have a gentlemen's understanding that they will not cut prices, and by far the greater part of them stand by their word—I've tested them for years. I've never asked them to sign their name to a thing."

Soap Price Cutting.

This is no tale from Arcadia—the firm in question is world-renowned and does a tremendous annual volume of business in a wide variety of lines of goods. One of these is soaps—a line in which price cutting is usually especially acute; yet so effectual is the system that the company's eastern manager states that in the course of years of experience he has never met with a single failure to finally line up the dealers upon a strict price-maintenance policy based solely upon spoken pledges.

The men who would admit that they are wilfully dishonest or that their spoken word is not to be trusted, are few and far between, if really they are ever to be met with among prospering business men. In that fact lies the secret of the success of the policy of this soap house. When one of the latter's salesmen closes with a dealer for the initial order, the interview invariably ends with the salesman explaining that it is the established policy of his house to insist upon strict price-maintenance, and asking the dealer point-blank if he pledges, upon his honor, not to cut prices.

Sometimes, indeed, very often, such a dealer will haughtily answer that he is not a "price-cutter" and "never has cut prices." But such an answer is not accepted as final. Every salesman is explicitly instructed to insist upon a firm "Yes-or-No" answer to his question. If it is "Yes," all right; if it is "No," the salesman's line-o'-talk runs somewhat like this: "Well, Mr. Dealer, I am sorry you cannot see it the way we do, and realize that it is to your own advantage not to cut prices. But, if you persist in your refusal, I am going to ask you not to order any of our goods. In that event, we don't want your order, and really you don't want our goods, for, if you began cutting, all your competitors would have to do the same thing, and there would be no end to it. You are selling enough soaps, as it is upon which you are not meeting selling-expenses or are even losing money."

It is to be noted that goods are not directly refused the man. The proposition is thus never taken off the personal basis, it being up to the personal integrity of the dealer to do The Square-Thing. And it may overjoy the optimist and the believer in the sense of integrity of average humanity to learn that, in the case of this soap house, it is said not one dealer in the course of years of experience has failed to come to the chalk-mark when the matter has been put up to him on this personal basis.

Detecting Violations.

This is not saying that there have not been violations, however, and instances of price-cutting. Such instances have been easily detected, as a rule; and have even been anticipated. The reputation of a dealer who is known as a price-cutter usually goes before him. His contemporaries will give him away. "Are you selling goods to Jones?" is the question asked by Price-cutter Jones' competitor. "Then we don't want any because there can't be any question what he will do." Such an argument is met with the proposition that, if the competitor will telegraph, charges reversed, to the soap house the first time Jones is caught cutting prices, and agree not to cut in the interim himself, the soap house will hustle a salesman to the spot by the very next train to bring Jones to terms. Being a liberal proposal, the suggestion is usually accepted, and thereupon the detective work begins and continues automatically.

When a specific instance of price-cutting, contrary to the spoken-word agreement, is shown, the first possible moment for a personal interview is seized. In many cases the man detected in the act of cutting prices is found in a rather pugnacious mood at the time of such an interview. In not a small percentage of cases he will stoutly deny having ever agreed to maintain prices, anyway. He is then never allowed to believe that his bluff will pass for an instant. "I can see how it may be possible, Mr. Dealer," says the salesman, "that you may really believe you never made an agreement not to cut prices, but I am absolutely positive that you did give your word in the matter—I have not the least shadow of a doubt." Not having been called a liar in so many words, the dealer will then usually come down from his "high-horse," it is found, and meekly admit that "the matter may have slipped his mind."

Gets Second Pledge.

Then the whole proposition is approached anew, and a second spoken pledge, as between two gentlemen, is asked. In case it is refused, which is not often, a little "heavy tragedy" is brought to bear—even a cuss word or two and a show of valor on the part of the salesman. "Oh, well," says the latter, "if that is the kind of a business man you are, sir, and if that is all your word is worth, why all right. But we took you for a gentleman." It is the Bullet that Hits the Invulnerable Spot. Even the grimmest dealer has a sort of commercial Tendon of Achilles where he is sensitive. It is self-respect, his pride in his personal reputation for honesty and for being a man of his word and an honorable man among men. Sneer as the pessimists may at this manner of approach, and this way of doing business, yet the fact remains, and it is testified to by the commercial philosopher referred to, that this appeal has never yet failed to reach its mark. And every new success naturally makes the succeeding one the easier.

In some instances a slightly different angle of approach is taken in case of a point-blank refusal to maintain prices. This manager tells the story of how he lately went to Pittsfield Mass., to see a recreant dealer, and sat in his office, in company with one of his under-salesmen, during business hours, from 11 o'clock one morning until next noon in a successful effort to bring the man to terms. It did the trick. "Sometimes it is better to besiege the enemy and starve them into submission," he says with a smile of reminiscence, "than it is to attempt to attack them directly and blow them to smithereens. That fellow agreed to get rid of us. I'd have camped out there a month otherwise."

Dealers Kept Samples.

This same personal appeal to a dealer's sense of right actions has been extensively used by this same soap house along a little different line in the matter of sampling too. One of its recent big moves was a monster appeal through the mails to the consumers whose names were provided by the dealers. Along with the letter to them went a coupon redeemable at their dealer's store for a regulation-sized cake of soap, the dealer having been provided in advance with the latter in the necessary quantities. It was cheaper to provide a regulation-sized cake than to make up a special smaller one. As is always the case, the great temptation was for the dealer to steal these sample-cakes, assert that he had not received them from the manufacturer when coupon-holders came, and add them to his regular stock of salable soap.

"But a little careful argument on our part," says this manager "and a little more manipulation of the Appeal-Personal, sufficed to offset this dealer's temptation. By personal interviews and by mail, we explained how we fully appreciated that the dealer in question 'was personally above any such practices,' even if it were not for the fact that it was for his best interests in the end that the soap should be given out as originally intended, as samples. We explained that for him not to give out the soap as samples would mean but to curtail the growth of his ultimate sales just so much in proportion and to miss the Golden Opportunity. And the appeal struck home and, as far as I know, the sample-cakes were used as originally intended in every case."

In this, too, too legal age when lawyers in grim battalions and safes loaded with parchments bearing doubly-witnessed signatures are so frequently relied upon to push through price protection and other sales policies, it seems as if the harking back to the fundamental, personal and moral appeal is both better business and more agreeable and optimistic. It is certainly true that a better feeling must exist between a retailer and a manufacturer whose relations are put on the plane of pure loyalty and honor than between the manufacturer who handcuffs dealers with steel chains of legal documents.

Long ago, in pedagogy, it has been established that you build morality quicker by putting questions up to the personal honor of pupils than by any grim systems of punishments and rules. Evidently business can make use of the same principle.

Overcoming Delay in Finding Out Retail Price

Customers Often Have to Wait a Minute or Two While a Clerk Leaves the Store to Ask the Proprietor—How a Small Indexed Retail Price Book Will Solve the Problem — A Time-Saver Costing Only Five or Ten Cents—May be Customer Saver Too.

It is annoying to a person who asks the price of a particular article in a grocery store to be told by the salesman that he doesn't know, but that he will find out in a minute or two.

Of course, where the proprietor is the sole salesman this seldom happens as he invariably knows the cost of the goods and the selling price. But this situation does not exist often. There is usually an employe in every store who is obliged to inquire day after day what the price of a certain article is. Sometimes the salesman or saleslady, and particularly one who does not take a deep interest in the progress of the business, has to travel into the residential apartments nearby or above the store to make the inquiry.

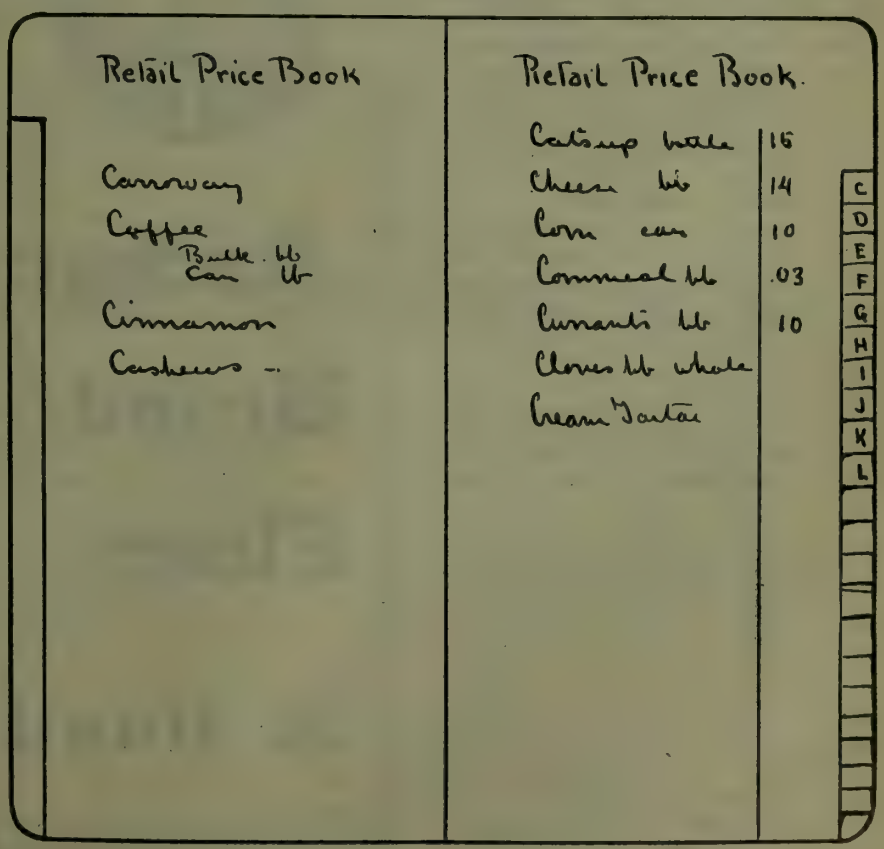
No customer wants to wait five, four, or even a minute to know the price of an article; and it is far from good salesmanship to have her do so. When she asks a price she wants to know it. Often, as every grocer knows from his experience as a clerk, the customer will say: "Oh, never mind asking Mr. —— about it, I only wanted to know the price." This no doubt loses many a sale for the probability is that she would have made a purchase if she thought the price to be low enough.

How to Overcome This.

This deficiency, therefore, represents a leak in the store business. It is concrete; now the question remains, "how can it be remedied?"

It is almost impossible for any man to learn the different prices of every article, except after having spent several years in a store, and this situation is aggravated by the fact that there are always new lines of package goods coming on the market, the prices of which, in the different sizes of cans or packages, are hard to remember.

The only solution that presents itself is the use of an indexed price book by the salesman.



This would solve the difficulty since in a moment a clerk can turn to the exact page containing any article and find the price. Many articles of food have now established prices; they do not change once in a blue moon and it would therefore not be necessary to change their price in the indexed price book very often. The prices of rapid sellers, of course, are soon fixed in a salesman's memory, but in other cases it is difficult to remember them from one sale to another.

This is where the book would be valuable. It would prevent delay on the part of the salesman or saleslady, which would tend to make a satisfied customer and every satisfied customer adds to the general good-will of the business.

Little Expense Necessary.

This price-list book might consist of a small ruled indexed book as shown in the accompanying illustration. This would only cost 5 or 10 cents. A double page could be given over to articles beginning with a certain letter and if the words were written small there should be enough space for everything.

Editorial Note.—The above article was suggested by an actual occurrence in a Canadian grocery store. A consumer was purchasing some groceries from a woman clerk. On two or three occasions the latter had to leave the grocery department to determine from the manager the retail prices of different articles. The purchaser was much annoyed at the delays, all of which goes to prove that customers want to be served promptly and efficiently.

The Inspection of Canadian Eggs is Proposed

Writer of Letter Sent to Government Analyst Advocates That They Should be Included in Food Standards — Estimate of Annual Production in Canada and Comparison With Losses.

There is a movement under way to include egg inspection under the new Food Standards which are being prepared at Ottawa under the supervision of Chief Analyst A. McGill.

The following letter has been sent to Mr. McGill by a man interested in the egg trade:

"We would like to bring to your attention the urgent necessity for some action being taken to prevent the sale of bad eggs, and would recommend that in the Food Standards now under consideration, provision be made covering this very important article of food.

"Competition in buying eggs throughout Canada, Ontario particularly, during the producing season, has become so keen that the buyers throughout the country are afraid to insist on their being allowed to reject bad eggs, when taking delivery from the store-keepers, and the majority of the storekeepers in turn will take anything the farmer brings in, knowing that he will be able to pass off the bad eggs to the buyer. The result is that the large firms for whom the eggs are bought, suffer a loss annually of an enormous sum in bad eggs paid for as good, and while realizing the injustice of this state of affairs, no one of these firms is able to take a stand that they will not pay for bad eggs, as it would mean cutting off all sources of supply. One of the largest dealers in Canada made the statement a short time ago, before a Farmers' Institute meeting, that his firm buried each year bad eggs which had cost enough to buy the best farm in his county. His experience is the experience of every dealer to a greater or less degree, according to their volume of business in eggs.

Should be Penalized.

"We think you will agree with us that the offering of bad eggs for sale, whether by farmers, storekeepers, merchant or retailer, should be made subject to heavy penalty, and it is only in this way that justice can be done to those in the egg business, and the consumer properly protected, for it is getting every year to be more a practice for farmers and country storekeepers to send their eggs direct to retailers in the city.

"It may be of interest to you in this connection to note the bulletin issued by the Nebraska State Food, Dairy and Drug Commission, and of which we enclose a copy. We understand similar legislation is in effect in several of the states, and is likely soon to be extended to a number of others. No injustice could be done to the farmer, or anyone interested in the business, by the prohibition of the sale of bad eggs, for the dealers who buy the eggs, if they knew the quality could be depended upon, would be willing and able to pay the farmers a higher price for guaranteed stock."

The same writer has compiled figures showing the estimated production and loss due to want of care in handling. He says:

"We have no authentic information at our disposal covering the total production of eggs in Canada, but suppose, for the purpose of computing our losses, that we put it at 3,500,000 cases each year, or a fraction over 100,000,000 dozen. Prof. Elford, of Macdonald College, agrees with me that this estimate is well inside the mark. Milo Hastings, of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, in a pamphlet recently issued by him reviewing the egg trade of the United States estimates that the average preventable loss totals 17 per cent. of the whole. This is made up as follows:

	Per cent.
Dirties	2
Mouldy and bad flavor	½
Breakage	2
Chick development	5
Held eggs	5
Rotten	2½
Total	17

"On the basis of the aggregate stock totalling what we have estimated it at, this would show that a total of 17,000,000 doz. in Canada alone are affected each year. It is quite true that from dirties, shrunken and held eggs some revenue is secured, but there is 8 per cent. which is an absolute, total loss.

Nearly Two Millions Lost.

"In addition to this there is the loss that is represented by the cost of buying, labor and freight to be added. Figuring only the total loss of 8 per cent. at an average price of 18c per dozen, you have the magnificent sum of over $1,400,000. Now it would be safe to figure that the remaining 9 per cent. of affected eggs would show an average loss of 5c per dozen, which would make an additional $450,000; add this to the $1,400,000 and you have a total of $1,850,000, which could, and ought to be saved to the farmers of Canada each year. I am satisfied that these figures are a very conservative estimate, and when you add to that the additional expense of labor and freight as already referred to, you have a total which is staggering.

New Quotations for Honey Will be Out Soon

Prices for the Spring Make are Being Awaited—Production of Butter and Eggs Continues Heavy, But the Shrinkage of the Latter is Rather Serious—Output of Cheese has Declined of Late, Contrary to Expectations, and Total Make for the Year May be Below Last Year's Figures—Easier Tone in Provision List.

The various branches of the provision market are running along smoothly with trade reported normal. The weather seems to have a depressing effect. Dealers in eggs are reporting heavy shrinkages and in point of quality they have deteriorated considerably. Production of butter continues heavy, but trade is only normal. There have been no changes in regard to prices The make of cheese has fallen off, although it is thought that a longer season will bring the present up to last year's mark. The export demand is favorable. There has been a slightly easier feeling at country points.

A rather easier tone exists in pork products. On the whole the past week has not witnessed any big changes in these markets.

Quotations for this year's honey are expected soon. It is believed that prices will not differ materially from those of last year. While there have been reports of a falling off in supply, there is but little credence placed in them.

MONTREAL.

Provisions—There is a drop of ½c in both pure and compound lards. A light demand is responsible, according to local men. Also a slight easing in the price of live and dressed hogs may have had something to do with it. Altogether the situation is somewhat weak, as is only natural to expect at this time of year.

The dairy No. 1 is well maintained at 21 cents and large shipments are going east for export purposes. Picnics and excursions are keep the demand and no lower prices are in sight.

Eggs.—There is an abundance of eggs on the market and the jobbing price for candled is 18 cents to-day. There are no eggs leaving the province.

Cheese.—The price for the local stuff is unchanged at 12 cents and the consumption is fair. Ontario cheese is in large quantities and it is jobbing at 13½ cents.

Honey.—The trade is not heavy only small orders being put up. The supply of Manitoba honey is greatly increased over last year and although lower prices are not looked for a revival is not looked for until the fall at the earliest.

CLAIMS COMBINE IN EGGS.

Nelson Board of Trade May Investigate —What The President Says.

Nelson, B.C., July 14.—It is probable that the board of trade of Nelson will take up the question of an alleged combine in the egg market in the Kootenay, which is said to have resulted in high prices. Speaking of this matter, F. A. Starkey, president of the board, says that there are all the marks of the operations of a combine. "Ask for quotations," he remarks, "from any of the leading egg firms and they all quote the same terms and conditions and submit the same kind of contract. Moreover, the prices they quote are $1.50 a case higher than prices in St. Paul. Adding the duty and freight, the price laid down in Nelson is 70 cents less for eggs purchased in St. Paul, than for eggs purchased on this side of the line. As a consuming community we are naturally in a position to be toled by any combine. Whether the poultryman in the east gets any benefit or whether the combine forces him to take lower prices is another matter. The situation is certainly one that should be investigated."

WORTH MANY TIMES ITS COST.

W. M. Howe, a successful retail grocer in Arnprior, Ont., who is just retiring from business, writes as follows:

"After being a subscriber of The Canadian Grocer for a great number of years I have no hesitancy in saying that I consider it the grocer's friend. It is a great assistance to any grocer, and is worth many times over its cost. Every number has been full of new, up-to-date articles regarding the conducting of a successful grocery business, besides having the very latest market reports.

"No person conducting a grocery business should be without it."

Subscribers are requested to carefully study The Grocer every week; unless it is read the profitable information referred to by Mr. Howe, will be missed.

TO TEST B.C. COMPANIES ACT

Vancouver, July 14.—Protests of brokers and manufacturers' agents against the enforcement of the Companies Act have been ineffectual and it went into effect on the first of the month. For the last two months there has been a general agitation in both Vancouver and Victoria among the members of the boards of trade, the brokers and all representatives of outside companies to at least have the penalties of the act suspended for six months, but the attorney-general has refused to give favorable consideration. It is now proposed to make a test case, eminent counsel having already been engaged and the constitutionality of the act will be brought before the highest courts.

Those opposed to the act on the coast will have support in the east, and they regard as encouraging the action of manufacturers in Toronto and Montreal who are naturally opposed also, since they are compelled to incorporate in British Columbia.

One broker told The Grocer, it will mean the elimination of the small commission man, since his dealings were not sufficient to warrant the expense of registration, and trade will be confined in certain and larger channels, which he claims will promote monopoly. This will result in higher prices to the consumer, he says, since the additional cost of operation will doubtless be added to the selling price.

Flour Has Advanced 40 Cents in Two Weeks

Persistency of Reports Regarding Weather and the Partial Authenticity of the Same has had the Result Expected—Market is Unsettled Under Uncertain Condition of Western Crops—Some are More Sanguine Than Others — Another Advance in Flour May Occur at Any Minute.

Recent changes in the wheat markets have affected flour and the advance has been appreciable. Previous to the latter part of June there seemed to be such a favorable aspect to the coming crop situation that millers in many places disposed of a large amount of their holdings expecting a steady decline, but now they have to repurchase in some cases at higher prices.

The feeling apparently prevailing among the millers is that flour is going to go higher. At present an advance is about due owing to the price of wheat being high. Should another increase in the price of wheat be recorded it will prove the undoing of the existing flour prices. Conditions practically similar to those in the Northwest are reported from Russia, where it is stated the ctops are suffering from dry hot weather. The market is still unsettled owing to the uncertainty regarding the extent of the damage to the western crops and in many quarters the feeling is more optimistic than the spirit of some of the reports that have been sent out.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—Flours are all up 10c this week. This is the result of the continued rise in the wheat market. Even at the increase trade continues very good with a decidedly firm tone. For export there is a good steady demand, which promises still further improvement.

TORONTO.

Flour.—The market has continued to grow stronger with each succeeding week. Since July 1st the price of Manitoba wheat flour has advanced forty cents, and local millers assert that if the quotations for wheat reach larger figures, flour is bound to go higher. The demand is fairly good, but many of the millers are short. The conditions previous to the first alarm sounds were so auspicious that they disposed of their holdings. Now they are buying in at a loss according to statements that have been made by prominent millers. The flour market is very interesting at present.

DIFFERENT FROM RED ALASKA.

The definition of what Sockeye salmon is in comparison to Red Alaska has created considerable discussion in Australia, according to Canadian Trade Commissioner, D. H. Ross. He says that in 1907 a difficulty arose in regard to the definition of the term 'Sockeye,' as applied to canned salmon imported into Australia from British Columbia and Puget Sound ports. As the result of data submitted by this office, the Commonwealth customs adopted a ruling which has, in the interval, been entirely satisfactory to Canadian exporters who continue to supply the bulk of the Australian importations of this high grade fish. Recently the question has been re-opened by representations made to the authorities in Melbourne—strongly supported by expert United States opinion—on behalf of Alaska packers, in which it was contended that Sockeyes and Red Alaska salmon were of the same species and permission was desired to apply the significant term 'Sockeye' to salmon packed in Alaska. As the ultimate decision was of almost vital importance to British Columbia packers interested in exporting salmon to Australia, an exhaustive report dealing with the subject—containing complete evidence of the disparity in quality and price of the two brands of fish—was submitted to the Commonwealth customs department by this office.

The decision was conveyed in a reply received on May 31, in which it was stated that the Commonwealth customs declined to permit the use of the term 'Sockeye,' on Alaska salmon upon the ground that it was considered such a definition would not be a proper trade description.

Bad accounts are responsible for the most of the troubles of the grocer. They, likewise, are the direct causes of not a few of the failures that are regularly reported.

An English grocer at Tredgar recently appeared in the bankruptcy court, and during his examination attributed his failure to bad debts, high prices of provisions, and damage to goods by rats. During his grocery career he managed to lose $2,500 in several locations.

Raspberries Now Leading the Fruit Market

Have Replaced Strawberries and are in Heavy Demand—Lemons Take Another Advance and Unless Weather Becomes Cooler Will Not Stop at Present Mark—Imported Tomatoes are Not Giving General Satisfaction—New Vegetables are Being Offered Freely—Trade in the Season's Fruits and Vegetables is Good.

Fruits are now claiming general attention. The trade is not only for the present but for the future. The storing away of preserved fruit for the coming winter is the feature that is responsible for the heavy demand. Throughout the length and breadth of the country reports emanate to the effect that trade is heavy and there is no doubt that the grocer is receiving his share in spite of the efforts of the street hawkers in places where they have full sway.

Raspberries are coming in and are dividing first honors on the market with cherries. The grocer who knows how to handle the new fruits profitably should not overlook the opportunity that is now presented. Lemons are at a high figure in some places being dearer than others. Continued warm weather will send them up still higher. Oranges are a little firmer and would be higher, but for the exceedingly heavy demand for plums, pears, etc. Shipments of deciduous fruits from California up to June 29th totalled 1,300 cars compared with 990 during the same period last year.

There is also a good demand for new vegetables, and as supplies are coming in freely business is good.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits.—Trade in green fruits has been exceptionally good in some lines. Those which have felt this the most are California deciduous, which are having their usual summer sale. Bartlett pears are expected some time this week, and will probably range about the $4 mark.

The strawberry season is slackening somewhat, and the grade of the late arrivals is very mediocre. Bananas are proving even more popular than usual this summer.

Vegetables.—There has been a good steady demand for standard lines of vegetables during the past few days, but it seems to be slightly less than at this time last year. Potatoes seem to be a little above the average, however. New ones are being quoted at $3. Cucumbers are now 40c to 50c per doz. Other lines are about the same as last week.

Fish.—The salmon season is about finished, and what sales are made are at increased prices.

Lake fish continue scarce, and the few arrivals are snapped up on sight. Few brook trout are to be had. Halibut and mackerel on the contrary seem to be coming in more freely, but so far have been taken up quickly.

Winter caught dore are scarce and are holding at higher prices. Demand is light for other lines of frozen.

Trade all through is only fair.

Green Fruits.—The demand was never greater in Western Canada than it is at present. The stock on all lines is the choicest and preserving is extensive. The trade is truly at its zenith just now and jobbers can scarcely fill orders. The following prices hold this week.

yet come to its best yet. There seems to be a strong opinion that raspberries will be a heavy crop. The recent general rains will be of great assistance and arrived at a most opportune time. It is only a matter of a few days or probably a week when raspberries will be reaching their heaviest production and grocers should watch the market carefully in order to get as much as possible out of it.

Lemons have gone even higher than last week. The $6.50 mark has been reached and the citric fruit from sunny Sicily in the opinion of some may reach $7. The weather will have the deciding effect. Should it continue warm the market should keep on rising. On the other hand a relapse to cooler conditions should relieve the demand and allow prices to return to former levels.

Bananas are somewhat stronger and even in the market, the range of prices is higher, extending to two dollars. The weather makes business risky to a certain extent and there is not the same heavy supplies. Canadian cherries are in good demand and at reasonable prices. Grocers have now the opportunity of handling these to advantage. California deciduous fruit is moving rapidly and is being received in larger quantities than ever. Pineapples are practically done. Peaches, pears and plums are in good demand. The whole fruit market is in a healthy condition and from all appearances is likely to continue so for some time.

Vegetables.—The new vegetable season is rapidly reaching its height. People generally are eagerly waiting for each vegetable as it arrives. The imported goods served for the time being, but there was something lacking—they were not home grown. Then radishes and onions arrived. Now beans and peas are being enjoyed with lettuce and cabbage. Carrots, beets, etc., are also finding places on the family board and potatoes, tomatoes, cucumbers and few others alone remain. With a natural craving for these articles existing among the buying public, no trouble should be met in disposing of them. Prices have taken a mighty slump in some lines. The difference between the prices for the imported vegetables and for those which our own soil is now producing was very appreciable, so much so that what a few months ago was only the rich man's delicacies are now finding their way into even the humblest home.

New potatoes are expected before long. The imported tomatoes are not giving the best of satisfaction according to some of the wholesalers. They are being received from Texas and Tennessee. The tendency is toward easier prices down the entire list. Old potatoes are almost "dirt" cheap, Ontario stock selling at from 20c to 30c per bag.

Fish.—Summer should be a good season for fish and it is a fact that there is a heavier demand for it on account of its qualities compared with meat, but during weather such as has been experienced of late there is some trouble in handling it. Trade is only fairly active. Supplies are not heavy and are readily picked up. There have been no changes in prices.

First Prize Essay on Meeting Outside Competition

Winner in the London, (Eng.), Grocers' Exhibition Lays Stress on Buying, Selling and Personality — Advises Prompt Payments and Judicious Advertising—Touches on Stale and Fresh Goods.

"How to meet the retail competition of limited companies and branch shops," was a subject on which competitors in the recent London (Eng.) Grocers'- Exhibition wrote. The first prize went to Samuel Snowcroft, who as some of the trade will remember, visited Canada about three years ago. It may be possible that he secured a few of his ideas here. His essay was as follows :

"First—Meet it with skillful buying.

"Some knowledge of goods—their grades, values, seasons, preparations, and uses—is indispensable.

"Intelligent study of newspaper market reports and trade papers makes an alert, up-to-the-minute, well-informed buyer.

"Remember, stale goods disappoint ; fresh goods win customers. Never overbuy. Well assorted stocks and prompt display of novelties win valuable reputation for up-to-dateness. Cover needs when market advances ; sit tight when it falls.

"Pay promptly, securing cash discounts and wholesaler's confidence—both are wanted.

Selling Important.

"Second—Meet it with enthusiastic selling.

"Have confidence in your goods, your assistants, yourself.

"Begin promptly, work systematically. Be clean and sunny, neatly attired, patient with customers, diplomatic with grumblers, courteous to all.

"Cast up accounts accurately—mistakes annoy. Parcel goods securely, enclosing neat, printed advertisement. A card of thanks for the purchase is always appreciated and brings customers again. Fulfil all promises conscientiously.

"Have outside and inside of shop scrupulously clean, stock attractively displayed, window tastefully dressed with choicest goods and leading lines ; change often, and ticket everything.

"Advertise judiciously. Tell your tale frankly without exaggeration, sentimentalism, or sensationalism. Back up every advertisement with a better-than-I-promised performance.

"Third—Meet it with an attractive personality.

"Keep well in front of your business. Your multi-shop competitors lack this personal element.

"Cultivate character. Shun liquors, gambling and gossip. Never display anger ; do not be disappointed ; be industrious, enterprising, persevering, tactful, sincere, resourceful, sunny. Pleasantness attracts ; sincerity convinces. Moral excellence is a powerful element in business.

"Whoever lacks these qualities may acquire them.

"Their possessor succeeds—always, everywhere."

Mr. Snowcroft was the winner of several other first prizes and more of his essays will appear later in The Canadian Grocer.

TOO MUCH WATER IN TOBACCO.

Co-operative Society Fined For Selling It—One Way of Swelling Profits.

An Old Country co-operative society has been fined for selling tobacco containing more moisture than the law allows. This may be one method used by these institutions to assist in the declaring of their dividends.

The story of the conviction and fine is as follows: "The Excise authorities charged the Bradford Co-operative Society at the City Court there with adding an excessive quantity of water to some tobacco. The tobacco referred to contained 33.7 per cent. of moisture, whereas according to law it should not at a heat of 212 degrees Fahrenheit have contained more than 32 per cent. The legal per centage was 35 formerly; it was reduced because it was found that tobacco containing that amount of moisture made burning impossible. According to defendants, the tobacco was obtained from the Rochdale Equitable Provident society, but samples taken from that company's stock were found to be in order. For the defendants, Sydney Neumann admitted the offence, while he alleged that the fault lay with the Rochdale Society, and that it had offered to refund the fine. Prosecutor pointed out that 1 per cent. of water above the maximum meant ½d per pound additional profit. Annually there were sold throughout the country 50,000,000 pounds of this tobacco; an addition of 1 per cent. moisture gave a super-profit of £100,000 per annum. The store manager spoke of the weekly sale of tobacco as 800 lbs.; some 50 lbs. of that was cut caked. The magistrates inflicted a fine of £10, including costs."

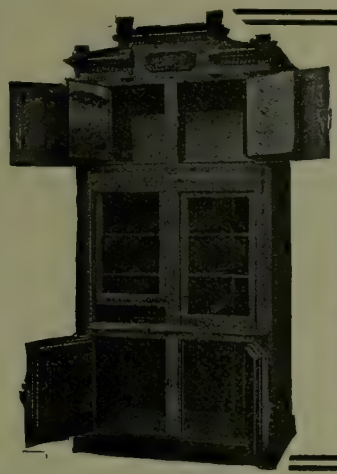
The system of selling all vegetables by weight is, according to the Lethbridge (Alta.) Herald, growing in Western Canada.

N.B. GUILD OFFICERS.

Canned Goods Agreement — Maritime Guild Meeting in Halifax.

St. John, N.B., July 13.—The New Brunswick Wholesale Grocers' Guild held their annual meeting in the office of the permanent secretary, S. A. Corbett, Prince William street, on Thursday, July 7, when the following officers were elected: R. F. Randolph, Fredericton, president; Thomas Gorman, St. John, vice-president; R. N. M. Robertson, St. John, treasurer; G. E. Barbour, W. L. Harding, Andrew Malcolm, St. John, and J. F. Edgett, Moncton, executive. The reports for the year were presented and routine business transacted. When the new quotations on canned goods are received, probably in a few days, the guild will have a fixed schedule of prices. For the last year or so there has been no working agreement.



There will be a larger attendance of members from St. John at the annual meeting of the Maritime Wholesale Grocers' Guild, which meets this year in Halifax, on July 21 and 22, than at any previous meeting. At least a dozen of the local merchants have signified their intention of going over. A special programme is being prepared and a number of papers will be read by local dealers, and discussion invited. It is expected that Hugh Blain, of Eby, Blain & Co., Toronto, will be present and address the meeting.

FRIENDS—NOT GROWLERS

RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes never comes back to you with growls from the housekeeper. It is always up to the same high standard maintained for forty years, and is always just right. That's why we have the thousands upon thousands of grocers pushing it everywhere. Grocers don't wish to run the risk of losing a good customer by passing out an inferior stove polish, which is wrong more often than it is right. RISING SUN makes friends for you and for us in every household where you put it.

MORSE BROS., Props. - Canton, Mass., U.S.A.

You Must Realize

that an article which has a huge amount of consumer advertising behind it to pull it through the stores, as has

2 in 1

The World's Best Shoe Polish

must be a profitable and quick-selling line to handle.

But in addition to this ad-pulling force, "2 in 1" has sterling merit behind it. It preserves the boots and makes them pliable; is waterproof; shines quickly and lasts a long time; does not soil the clothes or clog the brush, and is just now in increasing demand.

You can't afford to be without "2 in 1" on your shelves.

"Enterprise" Economy

An Enterprising grocer, who does things right uses an "Enterprise" Electrically-Driven Coffee Mill

The right way is also the cheapest way in the end. It always pays. Take the experience of the Philadelphia grocer who grinds 15,000 pounds of coffee a month with an "Enterprise" Mill electrically-driven at a cost for current of $3.00.

He bought the Mill as a great convenience—a time and labor saver, and an up-to-date attraction for his store. Its economy astonished him.

Look through our catalogue and you will find Mills of any capacity, any power required, for direct or alternating current. Your local power supply company will co-operate with advice and assistance.

The Mill illustrated here is No. 08712, fitted with ½ horse power motor for alternating current. Capacity of each iron hopper, 6 pounds of coffee. One Mill is fitted with grinders for granulating, the other for pulverizing. Granulates 2 pounds of coffee per minute, and can be regulated for fine or coarse grinding while mill is running. If you haven't the catalogue showing all our Mills, write for a copy to-day.

Frou-Frou is now being nationally advertised

This advertising is reaching your customers, amongst others, and it is to your advantage to stock Frou-Frou, because few articles show you such a handsome profit as does this Dutch Biscuit, the peer of all wafers.

Not only is the profit—under our price protection plan—such as to induce every grocer in the Dominion to stock Frou-Frou, but its sale is assured right from the start, and you will find the public ready and glad to pay a fair price—a few pennies more per lb.—for a wafer that soars so high in quality above all others.

The smooth, rich flavor of Frou-Frou is a revelation to those who only know the taste of the ordinary every-day filled wafer.

You owe the introduction of Frou-Frou to your customers, and to your own business.

Can It Be Done ?

Bowser Self Measuring Oil Tank

Just a word in explanation:
Evaporation alone reduces the oil kept in ordinary barrels from 5 to 25 per cent. per month. Overmeasure, spilling, leaking, dripping and overflow combine to eat up most, if not all, of what there may be left of your profits. The BOWSER outfit eliminates all these losses. It does more; it enables you to sell oil with as clean hands, as little trouble and as little time wasted as when you hand out a can of beans. Let us tell you why, and all about it.

A GREAT VICTORY for TOLEDO SCALES

DAYTON FAN-SHAPED AUTOMATIC PENDULUM SCALES DECLARED AN INFRINGEMENT

On May 16th, 1910, the United States Circuit Court at Chicago issued an injunction against the Moneyweight Scale Co., and all its agents and salesmen, ordering them to stop selling the Dayton Fan-shaped Scales, which the Court declared to infringe our patent.

$10.00 reward to anyone who will furnish proof of sale by them of any such scale after above date.

Dayton Barrel-Shaped Platform Spring Scales Now in Question

On June 18th, 1910, we filed a suit in the United States Circuit Court at Chicago against the Moneyweight Scale Co. for selling Dayton Barrel-shaped Spring-balance Platform Scales, which, we claim, infringe the Foundation Patent on Platform Cylinder Scales which we own.

WARNING

In view of the above, we advise you not to buy any Dayton-Moneyweight Barrel-shaped Platform Spring Scales without first consulting your lawyer; he will tell you that the user of an infringement is liable for damages, as well as the maker or seller, and may be sued by the patent owner at any time.

That Moss-Covered Dayton Suit that Hangs in the Court

The Dayton Company is now advertising a suit filed against us in Chicago, May 23rd, 1910, on the Cylinder Scale. The patents on which their suit is based are the same old patents on which they started suits in Toledo more than three years ago and never prosecuted.

In view of their present predicament, it is not surprising that they should now attempt to revive that old, moss-covered suit, if for no other effect than to save their faces in the eyes of their salesmen.

They started this suit in Chicago, realizing that the old suits in Toledo on the same patents had grown stale by age and worn threadbare by exploitation. A late date was needed for advertising purposes. It's pretty hard to put up a bluff on a three-year-old suit not prosecuted. If they had any confidence in their patents, why did they not prosecute the suits in Toledo, started, as above stated, more than three years ago?

Enlarging Profit Account in the Grocery Trade

Record of a Man Who is Making Money, But Who Might Make More With Closer Application to Some Details of His Business—The Different Results of Two Merchants—What a Grocery Business Should do in the Matter of Paying a Fair Profit as Well as Expenses.

By Paul Findlay for The Canadian Grocer.

I have run across a perfect gem of a record in retail grocery money-making. It vindicates all I have ever written about the theory of retailers' profits and "goes me one better" on several heads. There is room for improvement, and I am satisfied that this man can make the improvement; but, in view of what he has done, I hesitate even to mention anything better to him. One who has done so very well might almost claim exemption from the mention of his shortcomings were it not that, with the correction of such faults, he may do vastly better. Here is the brief outline:—

Turned Over Ten Times.

The stock of merchandise has averaged approximately $5,700 during the past four years; and the business done has averaged $57,446.08. Thus the stock has been turned just ten times annually. Four years ago the furniture and fixtures account was $2,123.29. In figuring results, that account has been discounted 10 per cent. annually, so that it now stands at $1,393.10. Yet the fixtures during the time have been kept practically intact, are really in excellent condition, and a new coffee mill and pulverizer, of the latest type, electrically driven, was added four years ago; and the horses are better, younger and more valuable to-day than at the beginning of the period. The capital account has been held at $14,000 all through the period, and on that account has been figured at 6 per cent. interest, which amount has been charged into expense. In passing, it will be noted that the entire capital has been turned upwards of 4 times annually. The earnings on sales, deducting every expense, including the 6 per cent. interest above referred to, and also the depreciation in F and F account, have been full 6 per cent., amounting to $3,452.75 per annum; which figures out at 24.66¼ per cent. on capital annually. The total expense account shows a ratio of 11.39 per cent.

Now, here are some points of interest. The manager who preceded this man in that business made a gross profit of upwards of 21 per cent. He was able to show 6 per cent. on the capitalization, but nothing more. Yet the average expenses were just the same. The gross profit made by the present manager is, as you have seen, 17.39 per cent., or 17 2-5 per cent. practically; and he shows not only 6 per cent. interest on capital, but 24 2-3 per cent. profit. Where lies the difference?

A Difference in Management.

The former man was surely the better buyer and likewise must have been the better seller; for he did the same amount of business on a margin about 4 per cent. greater. Yet the former man made no money, whereas this man makes money. The answer is, surely, that this man is the better manager. He gets more out of his stock.

This is a high-grade, strictly "city" store, where everything of "the best" is sold. There is a heavy sale of vegetables and fruits the year round. The present manager has always been a good buyer and handler of that kind of goods. His strong points are: attractive display at all times, and careful cleaning up of all stock. The first faculty is very valuable in that it leads to the sale of the fullest possible proportion of the goods at full prices, with the minimum to be "sacrificed" as odds and ends. The second faculty tells all over the business, of course, but naturally it tells most strongly in connection with all goods of a perishable character.

He Practices Economy.

The manager is a hard worker, doing more than anybody else in the store himself. He stops at nothing, but is ready for anything anywhere at any time. I know this is against theory, but here is where theory must stand aside for a practical demonstration. "By their fruits, etc." This man is also a saver in every way. I have often watched him save the paper from bundles coming in, and use it on the order counter to wrap vegetables. The saving never seemed worth while to me, and maybe it was not. But, like many other bits of old-fashioned thrift, this saving evidently is more valuable for what it teaches and the general economies it inculcates than for any other thing. You have heard of A. T. Stewart, the big New York merchant, picking up twine from the floor and tying it onto the counter supply. We were apt to think it was because twine was worth more those days than now. But that was not it: the answer is that habits of thrift are just as valuable now as at any time in the past, and the habit is worth as much as the tangible saving—or more.

Better Results From Buying.

The room for improvement in this man's management is here: He should study to increase his margin. This he can do, probably, by giving closer attention to his buying, for I found his selling prices as high as possible, competition and general conditions considered. But what his predecessor did, he can do; and, if he does that, if he adds that faculty to his other valuable talents, his record will be nothing short of marvelous. If we add 4 per cent. to his present net profits, he will show 10 per cent. net, or $5,700 over and above all expenses, depreciation and interest!

After having written on this matter of store management for upwards of nine years, it is gratifying to come across such a complete, tangible corroboration of my contentions. I have always held that the grocery business could be so conducted that it would pay every expense, including a correct and proper salary to the management, whether proprietor or not, pay a fair interest on the capital invested, carry depreciation charges, and then show a profit. I have contended that no business could be said to be profitable on any other basis. And here is the vindication of my position.

I will say, however, that my intimate acquaintance with grocery conditions has been confined to the United States. I have had the impression that Canadian grocery stores were conducted more scientifically than ours, due to the prevalence of the apprentice system. I shall be very greatly interested to have some figures from Canadian grocers to shed light on these problems. Needless to say that all communications will be confidential. You can give me the facts in care of The Canadian Grocer, and figures "straight," not a word, nor a name will get beyond my own desk.

TRADE NOTES.

K. H. Mann, of Salada Tea Co., Montreal, has returned from his trip to Europe.

P. Couture, formerly agent for Williams' sewing machines, has opened a neat grocery store on Van Horne Ave., Montreal.

How are Your Sales of These Seasonable Articles?

A Few Hints Offered the Prog ressive Grocer, Who in the Heat of Business may be Overlooking the Opportunities Presented to Him by the Demand for Summer Articles—Women are Fighting Shy of the Kitchen and the Stove — Is the Grocer Helping Her in this Respect and at the Same Time Clearing His Shelves of the Goods He Bought in Anticipation of This Trade?

Summer Drinks—Among the specialties of the season carried in practically every prominent grocery are summer drinks such as lime juice, lemon juice, root beer, raspberry vinegar, etc. They are all designed to find their way into the average home and in the most of cases they are worthy of public demand. Grocers no doubt recognize that they are essentially of the summer season and to get the best results from handling them they must be boomed during the hot weather months. The practical grocer has divers ways of doing this. He frequently arranges an attractive show window and in the interior of his store he has neat displays of these goods here and there; at times by other means tries to get as big a sale of this stock as possible. This should be his aim and more than that, it should be his duty. He has purchased the stock and any negligence to make it move rapidly will prove injurious to himself. Clerks and grocers should suggest to customers who are giving orders, something in the summer drink idea. People are nearly all the same and it is a rare home that is not well supplied with some of these summer beverages.

Fancy Biscuits Are Seasonable.

There is sometimes a vacancy in the summer evening meal that should be supplied by the grocer. The housewife is trying to keep away from fires and baking, but she does not forget to supply cakes of some kind. The grocer has the opportunity to get a large share of this business by making a special feature of the fancy cakes he carries.

Travelers have been around and he has followed their advice. Now it is his time at bat and if he is awake to the possibilities he will not regret having stocked up with fancy biscuits. There are many kinds included in this list according to the house that manufactures them. Water ice wafers, tarts, tea cakes and many other kinds are delicacies that appeal to everyone around the family board. They also find their way into picnic hampers, are popular with campers and summer resorts. Although they have a steady trade all the year round, the summer months afford a special chance that must not be lost sight of.

How to put new life into the trade? Well, advertise. That is one of the best ways. When the other grocers are overlooking cakes and biscuits let the people know you have them of the best quality and at prices that are the best. Show cards and price tickets in the store where you are displaying these goods will help considerably. The grocer should use any of the different methods by which he can reach the people. The main thing is to be alive to the possibility of increasing the sales of these goods; the plan of campaign will suggest itself afterwards.

Potted Meats and Fish.

There are many homes that are not using potted meats because they have not been educated to it. A woman will pass the goods in the store and desire to have them but—well she has never tried them before and she has yet to take the first step. The grocer who has these goods on his shelves should not forget that his good money has been exchanged for them and it now remains for him to get rid of them. Potted meats are mentioned here because they fall in the same category as the goods mentioned above. They are asked for all the year round, but the demand is increased during the summer. Let the grocer become acquainted with the various brands he is carrying by using them himself. He will then be in a position to tell his customers all about them.

Of course, those who are regular purchasers will not need educating but there is still a great deal of scope for progressive grocers. The list includes potted and jellied meats of which tongue and chicken are general favorites, together with other lines. There is also canned meats and fish.

Sardines should be especially considered in this connection. Make hay while the sun shines, is the motto of the farmer, so it is said, and sell goods in season should be the grocer's particular care. The women folks are strongly tempted these days to taboo the fire. Add to their comfort by showing goods that will enable them to keep cool and makes the day's work more comfortable.

COMPULSORY CLOSING.

Winston Churchill Introduces Bill in House of Commons—Stores to be Open 65 Hours a Week.

A bill has been introduced in the English House of Commons dealing with the hours shopkeepers shall remain open. It provides that shops might remain open 65 hours a week, but that assistants should not work more than 60 hours including time for meals. Associations are apparently in sympathy with the bill as it is held that nothing short of an Act of Parliament would compel shops to be closed. A grocer stated at a meeting that in what was recognized as a high-class locality, shops remained open from 80 to 90 hours a week or approximately 15 hours a day. The bill may be passed this year.

Things That Shouldn't Be

When a Clerk gets a "call" from his employer with two or three customers in the store it makes it disagreeable both for him and the customer. Such demonstrations, if necessary, should be left till later.

Visitor from Greece says Currants Will be Dear

He Claims That Crop Will be Reduced 20 Per Cent. — Disease Caused by Excessive Rains and Intermittent Heat Affecting the Vines—The Uprooting Law Spoken of.

Toronto, July 21.—The new currant crop in Greece is demanding widespread attention just now due largely to the character of the cable reports that have been received from time to time conveying intelligence to the effect that unfavorable weather has been responsible for considerable damage to the crop. This has been placed at various figures and it is estimated by Henry Wieler who paid a business visit to Toronto last week in the interests of his firm at Patras, Greece, that the new crop will be 20 per cent. smaller than that of last year. Indeed a catastrophe similar to those which marked the years 1900 and 1906 might have again resulted, but that the growers profited by that experience and are able to meet the disease which attacks the currant crop under certain conditions.

Cause of This Disease.

It is known as Peronospora and may be expected after a period of weather in which rain and heat are intermittent. This condition is particularly peculiar to Greece. Mr. Wieler explained to The Canadian Grocer that during one day, rain might fall several times and in the intervals the atmosphere would be very humid and the heat oppressive. Day after day of this weather ushers in peronospora which attacks the stems of the currant fruit which ultimately falls to the ground. Thus the crop is greatly reduced.

During the early part of this season the weather was wet and backward and it is due to this condition that a loss of 20 per cent. has already occurred. The position may take a critical turn in the near future as peronospora has attacked the greater part of the vines and the danger exists that with the fruit nearing maturity more or less serious damage may suddenly result. The quality so far promises to be good and if no rain falls during the drying period it will be all that could be desired. Mr. Wieler stated that peronospora is fought with copper sulphate, a method of resistance learned from the years of disaster, 1900 and 1906.

Prices Likely to be High.

Conditions seem to combine to affect the price of high grade currants this year. The districts of Patras, Gulf and Vostizza have suffered particularly and the probability is that high grade currants will be dear. Considering old stocks held and the retention which is levied on the new by chartered companies to prevent overproduction, the quantity remaining for the open market will not be much larger than the world's demand and possibly only just as large. Thereby a strong statistical position is established. Stocks abroad are much lighter than a year ago and there has been an increasing demand for currants, especially when Smyrna raisins are dear as they will be this year owing to a shortage in the crop. "For these reasons," said Mr. Wieler, "we look for high prices."

The Uprooting Law.

"Some members of companies foresaw," he continued, "that with the accumulation of stocks, due to home conditions, they could not endure the strain of heavy crops which would accumulate until business was ultimately smothered. They were able thus to persuade the shareholders of the companies, Athenian, British and French capitalists, that the only way to preserve their business and in fact to maintain their existence was to recur to the radical means of preventing over production, viz., uprooting the vines.

"For this purpose over $2,500,000 was raised to be distributed as premiums to those growers who would uproot their vineyards and grow something else. This money is intended as compensation to the growers. A bill was eventually passed sanctioning this idea, but it was too late to take effect this year as cultivation of the land had been proceeded with. It is calculated that within two years a reduction of from 20 to 25 p.c. of the crop will be arrived at.

"The National Bank of Greece, owners of extensive vineyards, have set a good example by uprooting part of the land held by them."

SUGGEST AN AGREEMENT.

Members of Toronto Retail Grocers' Association Want Definite Understanding With Wholesale Fruitmen.

The members of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association are not at all satisfied with an alleged condition in the wholesale fruit trade, which they have mentioned before, and not very long ago. They assert that the wholesalers—all, probably, are not included, at least, they were not all mentioned—should not sell to the consumer. Throughout the fruit market signs are tacked up stating that the dealers sell to the trade only, but the retailers assert that they have seen goods sold in small lots to people who put the baskets on their arms and walked away. The retailers consider that an agreement should be drawn up and that the wholesalers should sign it. If they are actually desirous of selling only to the trade, this should protect them, particularly if a small fine was imposed for any breach of the agreement. After considerable discussion it was decided that the committee appointed at the last meeting should wait upon President Thorpe of the Wholesale Fruit men's Association.

The question of amalgamating with the Grocers' branch of the R.M.A. was, on motion of D. Bell and R. Davis, deferred until the next regular meeting.

TRAVELERS' HOLIDAYS.

One feature of the grocery trade that has become a fixture, is the travelers' annual holidays. For some years past the wholesale trade have been trying to co-operate with the view of giving all their traveling representatives two weeks' vacation. To do this and to avoid the extra expense of temporary representatives, many firms have this year agreed to withdraw their travelers from the road for the two weeks commencing July 25 to Aug. 6 inclusive.

This holiday idea is rapidly gaining favor with both the wholesale and retail trade. This year more houses than ever are party to this arrangement, and the retail trade more generally are showing their sympathy with this agreement.

WESTERN WHEAT CROP.

General Statement From Winnipeg Regarding the Conditions Throughout the Wheat Belt.

(By our resident representative).

Winnipeg, July 21.—Crop in southern Manitoba practically a failure now and rain would not help much. In many places farmers are ploughing it up. Northern Manitoba is much better, some districts reporting about the best crop in their history. Dauphin district is particularly good. Central and northern Saskatchewan report good crops, but southern is poor. Northern Alberta is good, but south of Calgary the crop is reported a failure, except in irrigated districts. Conservative grain men estimate the total wheat crop at seventy-five million bushels. Very much, however, depends on weather conditions during next two weeks. A good rain now would put the yield over the above estimate. But if the present scorching weather continues it may drop as low as sixty millions. Grave anxiety is prevailing in business and banking circles.

FRUIT MARKET NOTES.

Brief Rerefences to Particular Features —Following the Crops—Oranges Are Firm.

A melon weighing 95 pounds has been grown at Ocala, Florida and is now on display.

The Canadian raspberry crop promises to be well up to the average.

There are some arrivals of new apples but the dealers are not saying much about them.

Potatoes are reported to have sold at 3 cents a bushel in northern Michigan a short time ago. Farmers are buying them at from 6 to 12 cents a bushel for feed. The market is glutted according to the report.

With fruit arriving in abundance there should be no difficulty among grocers to make extra capital. The most of them are pushing fruit.

While the weather creates a demand for the new fruit it has also a detrimental effect. Rush business is the keynote.

Oranges at a high price are market features just now. The demand is especially for those of best quality.

New apricots are about done. There were shipped from California this year 290 cars of this fruit.

Plums, peaches and pears are in good demand at fair prices.

Some of the growers near St. Catharines sent a couple of cars of strawberries to Winnipeg, receiving results that were highly satisfactory.

Tomatoes are progressing favorably and there is every reason to believe the crop will be well up to the average.

Montreal Grocers Forget Their Cares for a Day

Turn the Key in the Lock and —Spend the Usual Good Tim Friend—A Tug-of-War and So Bid Farewell to Sugar and Salt e and Unite as Competitor and me Grand Races.

Montreal, July 20.—Business cares forgotten: the grocery store closed; eight hundred Montreal grocers gave themselves up to the enjoyment contained in a day's outing on July 13.

It was the occasion of the annual picnic of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association. Needless to say, the event was a great success—it always is, you know.

President J. A. Dore was there, large as life and happy as a schoolboy at the beginning of his summer vacation.

Old friend Laniel, "the big fellow," attended, and helped to keep the ball a-rolling, as usual. Secretary Sarrazin was on hand, but his big valise was not. It made a hit a year ago, and its appearance was eagerly anticipated.

Of course, it's not necessary to remark that Lussier was there. That awful trumpet of a megaphone-nature informed the whole world that J. I. Lussier was at the Grocers' Picnic.

Anyway, getting down to the races and dancing, it was one more grand old picnic.

Uncertain Weather.

Opinions as to the probable state of the weather were certainly rife when the

MONTREAL GROCERS' PICNIC.
The Married Women's Race—An Event That is Always Looked Forward to by the Ladies.

grocers assembled at Bonaventure Station en route for Coney Island Park, where they were to hold the annual event. The storm of the previous night was truly not encouraging, but when Old Sol burst forth as the train steamed out there was a change from foreboding to general happiness.

The park was reached about 11.15, and, as usual, the crowd dispersed in different directions. The little groups scattering here and there lent a gay appearance to the enclosure, which is certainly picturesque, and ideally situated for a gathering of this sort.

"Chiefs" Lussier and Sarrazin, with their able "brigade" soon showed their anxiety to see if the athletic standard of the grocers had been maintained from the previous year. Consequently, a race-track was measured off, and substantial prizes were offered for competition in various events.

All through the programme there was great enthusiasm, and interest ran high.

Evidently the exercise behind the counter and around the stores has kept some of the older hands in good training, as witness L. Landreville, who had no difficulty in winning the "hundred" in good time.

The married women's race furnished quite an exciting finish. There seemed to be a dead heat, and consequently the likelihood of another race, but the judges decided that there was a margin between the first two.

Tug of War.

One would have thought a general fight was imminent about four o'clock when twenty of the strongest grocers present were seen taking off their coats. "Trumpeter" Lussier, however, quelled all fear by announcing a tug-of-war between East and West. This proved quite an interesting feature and resulted in a win for the West.

The banquet was, as usual, a feature, some interesting addresses being delivered by M. Labonte; the president, J. A. Dore, Napoleon Seguin, Armand Chaput, J. Ethier, Mr. Filion (Quebec), Mr. Bergeron, Mr. Maynard, J. A. Beaudry and A. Wood.

Briefiets.

"Poker" seems to be a strong favorite with the grocers. We believe it is a game of "bluff."

Some thought that "trumpeter" Lussier's voice sounded nicely on the megaphone. Oh! that "Last Post"!

"Tamilkande" did not go out in the "Travelers' Handicap," but was backed as a dead snip for the Judges' "hundred."

Nap. Seguin, M.P.P., has generally a "pull" at Quebec, but his pull in the Tug-of-War could not save the East from being pulled West.

M. Demers came to grief in his race, but he made a fine centrepiece for the tug-of-war. It looked like odds on a draw as the rope seemed stationary for some time.

The chief musical selection was, "Has Anybody Here Seen Sarrazin."

Hasn't friend Beaudry a lovely smile?

Longboat will have to go "some" if O. Fournier intends to start in the "Marathon" business.

Friend George Neill was missed very much. It took two of his sons to represent him.

As usual nothing seemed to trouble Armand Chaput. Have you ever seen "the smile that won't come off"?

J. Ethier was generous with his prize "cheques." They will be honored on the 27th July at 80 St. Denis St.

Who said that the "West" team was

STRIKE AT MONTREAL.

Business Has Already Been Tied Up To a Certain Extent—G.T.R. Carries Half The City's Supply.

Montreal, July 21.—Montreal is going to feel the effects of the Grand Trunk trouble to a very considerable degree, in the opinion of some of the best posted local provision men. Already several indication of what may be expected have shown up, the first being a shortage of milk this morning, and the other being the difficulty of a couple of fruit men have experienced in tracing a shipment of bananas. It is announced by the mayor that the city will take a hand in the affair if the milk supply does drop of to any extent. What those steps will be is not stated, but at any rate the food supply must be protected. The Grand Trunk lines furnish the transportation for fully half the city's supply, so it would be a very serious matter if any continued interruption were to take place.

Truck farmers along the G. T. R. will also have difficulty in shipping their wares to the city, unless the railroad authorities can obtain sufficient new men to thoroughly equip their trains. For some days, at any rate, there is sure to be a certain amount of confusion, and it is hard to say just how far-reaching the results will be. It is sincerely hoped that some solution of the difficulty will present itself before the strike has done much harm.

THE FLOUR MARKET.

With another advance in flour in consequence of the rising wheat market, the question has been asked as to how far this increase is likely to go. Flour men are loth to give an opinion upon this question, as they admit their inability to forecast the future, but the opinions expressed agree that further advances are highly probable. They advise those interested in flour to follow closely the wheat market, together with the most reliable reports upon western conditions. Manitoba first patents are now at $6.20, an advance of between 80 and 90 cents during the past month.

WILL CAMPBELLTON REPENT?

That the sympathy of the commercial interests of Canada is extended to the business men of Campbellton, N.B., in the serious loss they have sustained is evident from the practical nature of the assistance they are rendering.

It is said that it is an ill wind that does not do some good. Doubtless Campbellton will rise from its ashes, deep as these ashes are, better and stronger than ever.

But there is one thing which, it is to be hoped, has been burned and its ashes scattered beyond the possibility of recovery. We have reference to the narrow, anti-Canadian spirit which imposed an irritating tax upon the representatives of manufacturers and wholesalers from other parts of Canada. Unsophisticated commercial travelers have been known to be subject to even the indignity of arrest. There was no "winking with the other eye" by Campbellton's officials. The law was rigorously enforced.

While the business men in other parts of Canada are responding to Campbellton's Macedonian cry to come over and help them, it is to be hoped that at least the commercial interests will learn that the present attitude toward the outside world is both unpatriotic and unbusilike, and will lend their influence to prevent its being resurrected when the new town rises from the ashes of the old town.

If the men in the commercial centres who have been irritated by Campbellton's municipal narrow-mindedness can forget it when fire swept the town, and contribute to their necessities, surely it is good policy to see that the thing which caused it is not again permitted to obtrude.

THE G.T.R. STRIKE.

Differences between the Grand Trunk Railway company and its conductors, brakesmen, trainmen, etc., reached a crisis on Tuesday morning of this week when a strike was declared. Although only a few days have passed since the men walked out, business in many centres has been more or less embarassed and the question that is being asked by everyone connected with the grocery trade is—how long will it last? Grocers have doubtless learned through the daily papers that the G.T.R. freight service is at a standstill, and although the company promise to handle freight in a few days, the general opinion is that the makeshift service will not be adequate. Among the trade there is a hopeful feeling that this strike will be of short duration as the general public shrinks from contemplating what a protracted industrial war would entail particularly at this time of the year.

The G.T.R. touches a large number of towns in Ontario, thereby forming their only connection with the outer world. Others are so situated that they can drive to some point on another railway and haul their merchandise from that station. There is nothing to be gained by letting the imagination wander to what would happen if certain conditions prevail. The average individual fully appreciates the loss business sustains during industrial troubles of this kind and when it is a railway like the G.T.R. that is involved, the inconvenience and general financial loss reaches a seriousness in proportion to the business the company has been doing. A wholesale grocer stated that already they had to advise customers in many towns that they were unable to forward goods that had been ordered. The majority of retailers have asked that no action be taken regarding their orders until Saturday or Monday, hoping that the trouble would be over by that time. They also advised that, in the event of present conditions still existing then, the goods be shipped to some point nearby on the C. P. R. But there are towns that have apparently no other alternative, but to wait until the G. T. R. can assist them. The latter company have many what is called short hauls through Ontario, and they have extended their lines into territories in which they have no competition. It is in places of this kind that the greatest inconvenience or worse would be occasioned.

The grocers throughout the Dominion will follow the strike with interest for past experience has shown that in cases of this kind grocers who extended credit to the strikers were brought face to face with bills which were paid only after years or in cases were not paid at all.

It is sincerely hoped that this present strike will be of short duration.

KEEP THE STORE COOL.

Coolness is a great asset to a store during the summer season. With the sun blazing steadily on city walks and walls creating a heat that would do justice to a blast furnace, it is well for the grocer to atempt to keep the interior of his store cool. In the first place the contrast is so marked that a woman is scarcely within the door when she feels instant relief. And it is refreshing to find temporary escape from the heat these days. Windows partially drawn, water recently sprinkled on the floor, an electric fan or two, creating a delicious draft, these and other means all combine to secure that much sought for "coolness." One grocer carries a fairly large stock of flowers in a conspicuous part of his store, and while flowers are not groceries they certainly add a charm to that store. Some grocers in addition to awnings and top blinds have another that pulls up from the bottom. When the sun is reflected off the pavement, instead of dropping the one blind he raises the other about three feet, and effectively keeps out the glare, screen doors help to keep the flies on the outside—their proper place. In a cool store the grocer himself, and his assistants will have a greater desire to work. Rendering satisfaction is the corner stone of a good business, and this consideration for the comfort of the customers will not go unrewarded. It should be a part of the general scheme.

THE RASPBERRY CROP.

Experienced fruitmen assert that raspberries will be at their best during the early part of next week, that is about July 25th and 26th. Reports from those districts recognized as centres for small fruit, indicate strongly that the crop will be well up to the average. Some dealers feel that July 23rd will find the berries at their height, but the other opinion has more supporters. Grocers have been enquiring upon this point of late, as the average grocer is carrying more or less fruit at this season of the year.

Montreal, July 21.

Trade here has been very brisk in nearly all lines, though the effect of the warm weather is gradually making itself felt. There is also now a new factor in the situation, the Grand Trunk strike. Already this has resulted in the stalling of a large banana shipment, which as yet has not been forwarded from where the men left it standing when they went out. In addition to this there will undoubtedly be a falling off in trade in some sections, owing to so many men being idle. A milk shortage seems to be in prospect as fully half the milk for this city comes in over the G.T.R. and already this has been felt. Garden truck will also show the effect.

The situation in sugar is somewhat weaker as far as raws are concerned, but sales of refined are keeping up pretty well.

The weather continues fairly hot, but still not the stifling heat of some summers, and as a result people are buying heavier groceries than last year. Taken all through, conditions are very satisfactory. Retailers report a better business than for many summers past, and even collections show a decided improvement.

Sugar.—The raw market has shown a weaker feeling during the past few days, and that fact taken with a considerable falling off in the demand would seem to indicate the possibility of lower prices in case no change occurs. However, to offset the above, local jobbers report fine selling. The jobbing trade seems to have bought all they needed for the summer, which would explain the slackening of the refiners' trade. With present weather conditions there seems to be no reason against, and every reason for a fine retail sugar trade.

Syrups and Molasses.—In spite of the hot weather molasses trade continues very good. It is rather astonishing too that out of town orders are so numerous, when the fact of the risk of shipment in the hot weather is taken into account. Importers report that several large consignments are on the way from the West Indies, and that a fair demand is the best they can say for primary conditions.

Syrups are also having a brisk sale. The orders are not large but their number is sufficient to warrant the statement. Prices are unchanged.

Tea.—There is a better inquiry on the local tea market, more particularly for Japans, although the arrivals of new teas have so far been somewhat limited. Primary market prices are firm and trade passing is very good. The outlook, according to local authorities, is bright.

Harrisons & Crosfield, Ltd., in their last tea market report give the following: "Referring again to the prospects of diminished out-turn as the result of interplanting the tea estates with rubber, an interesting article recently appeared, in which the acreage at present under tea is given roughly at 390,000 acres, of these about 40,000 have been interplanted, and possibly by 1915 it is thought that the acreage of tea may have fallen to 340,000. And whilst this reduction of area may serve as a natural corrective to the evils of overproduction, it reassures its readers by reminding them that improved methods of cultivation, increased manuring, and fresh planting will go far to prevent any serious reduction in the export."

Coffee.—The coffee market is rather quiet at present, though a fair volume of trade is passing. Orders are small however, and the trade seem to have already filled their immediate requirements. Very little is doing in Rio and Santos, and stocks have been allowed to run rather low.

Dried Fruits.—A well balanced trade is passing in all lines, with the better grades of prunes selling perhaps best. However, currants and raisins are not far behind, and the situation looks promising. Prices on the new fig crop will be out early next month, and seem likely to be higher than last year.

New York dealers prophesy higher prices for currants in the near future but this conclusion is based on the probability of further crop damage.

Nuts.—Brazils are slightly easier, while Tarragonas and Marbots are ½c higher this week. A dispatch from a reliable source in France says that the damage to the walnut crop is general, and not confined to a small section as was at first reported. This should account for the present firmness, and if confirmed will certainly produce higher prices still.

Local stocks, as well as those in New York are low, and the present brisk demand is therefor apt to strengthen the market considerably.

Beans and Peas.—Peas are firmer in the primary market, and the higher grades are hard to obtain. Prices are unchanged to the retailer, but a further stiffening would be sure to be felt.

Beans have dropped off to $1.95 as a result of a very slack demand, and even that price is sagging somewhat. However there is a slight increase in export trade so the bad effect may be counteracted.

Rice and Tapioca.—The demand of late seems to be for the poorer grades of rice, and the trade passing in these lines is good just now. The better grades are somewhat dull, though a fair volume of trade is being done.

Tapioca is firm and selling well, particularly seed. It looks as if there would be no immediate change in prices, which are firm at present.

It is reported that sago is so scarce that it is a hard matter to fill requirements. The rubber boom seems to have taken a large number of the plantations formerly used for these products and left barely sufficient to supply the market, thus causing the present high prices.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.

Pea stocks are almost entirely depleted, the only ones on the local market being a few extra sifted. Until the new pack is on the market the situation will remain very firm.

Corn and tomatoes are also scarce, and prices are 90 and 95c respectively.

Reports from the canners are none too promising so far, and crops may be rather short in some lines. Of course, it is a little too early to say definitely just what lines will be most affected. It is a sure thing that the strawberry pack was disappointing, and as a result of this, prices in this line are very firm.

TORONTO.

Prices for canned peas, corn and tomatoes are expected to be out soon. Nothing definite seems to be held as to the extent of the new pack, but it is expected that there will be but little change. Peas and beans seem to have been plentiful enough. Up to the present, demand for canned tomatoes and corn has been fairly good, but the new peas and beans selling on home markets and from house to house have undoubtedly had an effect. Old Canned stocks are light anyway, and it will not require very heavy demand to wipe them out.

Regarding the B.C. salmon pack a report says:

"It is stated 56 canneries will be operated in 1910, of which 22 are located on Fraser River, 12 on Skeena River, 8 on Rivers Inlet, 4 on Naas River, and 10 in outlying districts. The pack of all kinds of salmon on the Fraser River this season is expected to range from 175,000 to 250,000 cases, the difference in the figures representing the different opinions of various canners. The pack of sockeyes on the Fraser is variously estimated at from 100,000 to 150,000 cases. The estimated pack of all kinds of salmon for British Columbia is between 500,000 and 600,000 cases. At the 22 canneries which will be operated on the Fraser River arrangements are being made now for the opening of the sockeye fishing season. Preparations are being made for establishment of two salmon hatcheries on the west coast of Vancouver Island."

A recent special from Vancouver is as follows:

"Fish Commissioner Babcock says that salmon runs on the Skeena River, which open several weeks earlier than on the Fraser River, are phenomenal. The pack in all the canneries is now more than double what it was this time last year, and the fish are larger and in better condition."

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Steady, good demand.

Shelled Nuts—Firm.

Tea—A steady market.

Toronto, July 21, 1910.

In grocery circles trade is confined largely to summer goods. Sugar is the particular exception. From every quarter the reports regarding the sugar trade are the same. Preserving is at its height and the consumption of sugar is reaching a large figure. In regard to prices it is anticipated that the present quotations will obtain until the new crop prices affect the market. This will not be until about October or the middle of September. It is expected that a decline will then be noted, but that in the meantime there will be no ground lost. There is also a heavy demand just now for articles that are essentially connected with summer trade. Wholesalers state that there is a good demand for lime juice and the other articles of that kind. The goods included in this list are numerous and while the weather continues as at present the demand will likely be heavy. While it has been stated that trade is of a "summery" character wholesalers are satisfied with the orders that are being filed. According to them general business is good. In dried fruits, currants and raisins are good demand and at firm prices. There is a good trade in tea and coffee. Nuts possess a firm tone, especially the shelled variety.

Sugar—There is a steady demand for sugar reported by both the retail and wholesale trade. Manufacturers also are doing good business and it may be truly said that sugar is one of the real features of the present grocery transactions. The good supply of fruits is creating the demand for sugar which should hold its present price until the new crop begins to affect the market about the middle of September.

Dried Fruits—There is fairly brisk trading in currants and raisins according to some of the wholesale men. Prices are firm in sympathy with the existing prices in the primary markets quoting for the new stocks. Otherwise this market is quiet under the effect of a strong green fruit trade.

A recent report says: "The position in Greece continues to be strongly maintained, with reports received during the week that the weather had again turned unfavorable. More serious damage than any that has been done thus far may still be seen until the fruit is dried and housed in good condition; the most critical period for the crop being from the present time until about the middle of August. According to latest information, the new crop is estimated to produce about 140,000 tons of fruit against about 175,000 tons last year, and while the demand for spot fruit in Greece is unusually good for this season of the year, there will undoubtedly be some old fruit carried into the new crop which will in some measure make up for the deficiency of new goods."

Teas—A good steady business is reported in teas. In fact, the reports generally have a most satisfactory tone. Dealing with the world's supply of tea and its consumption a recent article states: "At a rough estimate the world's total production of tea is about 1,200,000,000 lbs. annually, of which one-half is grown in China, a little more than one-third in the British Empire (India, Ceylon and Natal), and something under one-sixth in other countries, of which Japan, Java, Formosa and the Caucasas are the principal. In regard to Chinese tea the estimate of 600,000,000 lbs., is largely conjectural, being consumed locally. As to importing countries the United Kingdom takes first place with 256,112,000 lbs., equal to 6.02 lbs. per head; followed by Russia, with 126,000,000 lbs., or 1.25 lbs. per head; the United States with 81,000,000 or 1.30 lbs. per head, and then Holland, Australia, Canada, Germany, and New Zealand. Australia, t is to be noted, consumes the largest amount of tea per head in the world, to the extent of as much as 7.1 lbs. or nearly a pound more than the quantity consumed in the United Kingdom.

Coffee—There is a steady demand for coffee but the market itself has not changed in any particular. It is reported that while the production of Brazil coffee during the year just closed was about 2,400,000 bags larger than last year, it was only about 800,000 bags larger than the world used of this kind of coffee. The Rio and Santos crop, taking the receipts at Rio and Santos during the fiscal year, amounted to 14,944,000 bags, about 200,000 bags more than their estimates of December 1 last year.

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS—
Prunes and Evaporated Apples—Higher.
Sugar—Strong demand.
Rolled Oats—Firmer.

Winnipeg, July 21, 1910.

Markets are all firmer this week, and the general tendency is for higher prices. This is caused by the heavy demand for certain lines, the short crop prospects in foreign centres, and also the prospects of a light cereal crop in the west. This latter condition affects the rolled oats market, and the market is believed to be on the advance; however, last week's strong prices rule to-day. There has been a sharp advance in wheat recently, and all flour has been advanced. Local bakers have, as a consequence, raised the price of bread. The recent unfavorable reports from the country that the wheat yield would be light have caused this change.

In southern Manitoba, and, indeed, the southern parts of all three provinces, will suffer with a wheat crop shortage of more or less extent. Saskatchewan, however, is more fortunate than the other provinces in this regard. Merchants in these centres are buying light, and some wholesalers have withdrawn their travelers from these territories. There is little cause for alarm in the general decrease of the crop yield. The west as a whole will have plenty of returns to save her from any such "hard times" as she has on several occasions experienced. The farmers that will suffer most are those who are the most prosperous. Should the shortage come to the northern and newly-settled districts, where the tide of immigration is flowing, the situation would be more serious. The condition is only more unsatisfactory when it is known that the merchants who have been "carrying" the agriculturalists for two, three, or more years, will have the day of settlement only extended farther into the future. Should the merchant get his cash, as he could do when the goods are delivered, his trade would be more secure, the farmer would not have debts to worry him, and the general trade of the country would not be impeded.

Sugar—There is no change in the list prices of sugar, but if it is possible for the demand to regulate prices on this commodity, the values may be expected to advance. The preserving season is on everywhere in this country, and the trade as a consequence is heavy. There is a noted heavy demand for all icing and powdered sugars. This is exceptional, and the future of the fine sugar market is uncertain.

Foreign Dried Fruits—The effort to boost prices in the western States is becoming more and more intense. At present the work is all concentrated on prunes, and an importer describes the packers as "crazy" just now in the plunge for higher prices. The California prune crop is the only one that is good, and packers are taking advantage of this to control stocks and prices. Prunes here are quoted ½c and 1c up. All other lines are firm, and the raisin market is getting stronger. Pears, peaches and apricots are normal. All goods from Greece will likely be higher.

Syrup and Molasses—The output is dull and weak prices rule. Retailers stocked well and they can satisfy the demand by ordering light. Wholesalers are getting inquiries as to prices for future buying. The reports that they receive are that no lower prices are forthcoming, and before many weeks stronger prices are sure to rule. Molasses trade is fair and the output has recently been increased.

Nuts—Almonds and walnuts, shelled, are described as fair at present, and the general tone is better. The summer sale is as good as usual, and this means that the output is heavier. Peanuts have a good sale everywhere. The quality is good and the 13c price controls the majority of stocks.

Pearl tapioca, per lb	0 05½ 0 06
Sago, per lb	0 05 0 05½

Beans—For many weeks westerners have not been assured as to the prospects of the Ontario bean crop. Latest word is that the crop will be heavy and large shipments are to be brought west. What the market will be is uncertain, but a reduction of 5c has been made by some houses. We quote these prices:

3-lb. picker, per bushel	2 20
Hand picked, per bushel	2 30

Evaporated Apples—The market is greatly improved and there is ½c advance this week. Stocks are getting low and all grades are good quality, since the poor quality has been pushed off at sacrifice prices. 8½c to 9c is the quotation to-day.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, N.S., July 21, 1910.

Wholesale grocers report business fully up to the average for this season. The orders coming in from outside points are good and cover general lines. The sales of sugar are reported to be quite heavy.

Fresh eggs were scarce this week. The receipts were small and the price has advanced to 21c per dozen. The demand is fairly good. The commission houses are rushed with orders, particularly from outside points. There is a heavy demand from the country towns for bananas and oranges, and the shipments are large.

The strawberry season is drawing to a close, and the receipts of berries are falling off. Thousands of crates were handled here this season, but the price did not go below 8c. There was an unusually heavy demand from the sections that do not grow berries.

According to reports coming to hand the apple crop prospects in the Annapolis valley are not so promising now as earlier in the season. The crop of apples will be much smaller than usual. The heavy frosts killed many of the early varieties of fruit in the valley, and it is said that there will be a marked scarcity of Gravensteins.

Butter continues in good supply and the price is unchanged. The dealers are watching the flour markets closely. The rapid advance in prices has not been received very favorably by the trade.

Pork is a little firmer, but not yet sufficiently so to warrant any change in market quotations.

Beef, on the other hand, seems to be even scarcer than when last reported, and another advance of $1 per barrel.

Stocks of 1909 canned goods are pretty well exhausted. Peas are almost entirely cleared up and no new stocks have arrived yet, but should be on the market about the first week in August. Corn has advanced about 5c per dozen, and is very scarce. Every case on the market will be used up before any new stock can arrive.

The raw sugar market rules very strong (with, however, no change so far in Canada) in sympathy with the advance of 10c per cwt. in New York. There may, however, be an advance here at any moment without further notice.

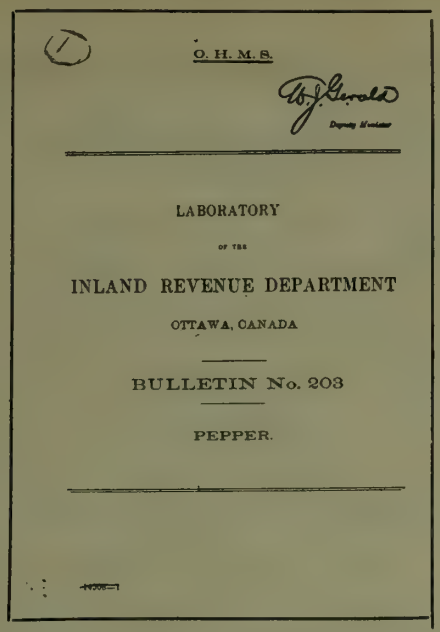
NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.



St. John, N.B., July 20, 1910.

Advices were received here Friday last, announcing another advance of 20c in the price of Manitoba flour. This is about the only change that has taken place in the markets. Strawberries are now at their height and have been selling at 5½ to 6½ cents by the crate.

The Campbellton disaster has overshadowed all else during the past week. All the wholesalers have contributed large shipments of supplies for the stricken people. Two local firms lost heavily, Baird & Peters, and Jones & Schofield. Both had large distributing warehouses in Campbellton, which were completely destroyed. Representatives of the firms have been in Campbellton looking after their interests, and it is altogether likely that they will rebuild. W. E. Anderson, secretary of the St. John Board of Trade, went to the stricken town the day after the fire, and superintended the distribution of a car of provisions, contributed by the local merchants. It is the general opinion that the town will be rebuilt.

Why Waste Your Energy Selling 25c. Tea?

You can sell more 40c. tea than you can 25c. tea, because it will bring your customers back for "more of that tea." Forty cent tea means more business, larger profit, better satisfied customers. No other 40c. tea in Canada compares with 40c. Red Rose Tea in quality—flavor and strength. It is always worth the price.

GROCERS HAVE STRONG TEAM.

Are Making a Good Showing in Merchants' Baseball League, London, Ont.—Address and Presentation To Pitcher Wm. Hamilton.

London, Ont., July 21.—The retail grocers have a strong team in the Merchants' Baseball League this season. They have not lost a game so far. The shoe men, last year's champions, were defeated in last week's game at Springbank Park. It was a hot contest, the grocers winning by 7 to 4. Billy Hamilton, the grocers' pitcher, struck out ten men. Secretary Hayes, of the Grocers' Association, pulled down a three bagger; Ernie Shaw, son of ex-president Shaw, drove in four runs with two two-base hits. Every Wednesday afternoon there are two games of baseball at Springbank and there will always be found Harry Ranahan, Tom Shaw, Bob Ross, Jim Haskett, Ed. Ryan and Dick Donaghy, rooting for the Grocers.

At the conclusion of last week's game, on Wednesday, pitcher William Hamilton, of the grocers, was the recipient of a suitcase and umbrella from the Retail Merchants' Association. Mr. Hamilton, who has been employed at Mullin's grocery store, is leaving in a short time for Detroit. He has been a valuable member of the association and of the baseball league, doing good work for the grocers in the pitching department. The address accompanying the presentation was read by E. J. Ryan, and the presentation was made by Thos. Shaw, both ex-presidents of the association.

INCREASING ATTENDANCE.

In order to increase the attendance at meetings, the St. Joseph, Mo., Retail Merchants' Association is to serve a dinner at six o'clock each meeting night, following which a business session will be held. This plan has proved a great success with a number of associations. As one man puts it, "To get out a crowd at an association meeting, the thing to do is to have a feed."

Dealers Report Heavy Losses in Egg Stocks

Weather Has Bad Effect and Wholesalers Receive Supplies Which in Many Cases are Half Waste—Production of Butter, Cheese and Eggs is Maintained and Prices are, if Anything, Slightly Firmer—Export Demand for Cheese is Brighter—Trade is Normal but Uneventful.

The production of butter, cheese and eggs has apparently not suffered during the past week and the figures that were reached some time ago are still in sight. At the same time there is a slightly stronger feeling in regard to these three articles. Increased export demand for cheese has helped that market considerably, although it seems to have been confined particularly to last week. It is believed, however, export trade will be improved. Butter production is steady, but in the west pastures are in danger of suffering from continued drought. Waste is a general condition in the egg trade and the reduction of in many cases 50 per cent. of the stocks is having a tendency to bolster the price. The demand for certain pork products continues good, cooked meats being outstanding in this regard. In the west lard is quoted at lower prices, owing to heavy supplies. The past week seems to have been a little quieter than usual, although there has been no reported diminishing of trade.

MONTREAL.

Provisions—There is a scarcity of both live and dressed hogs, owing to the fact that the farmers are too busy just now to bring their hogs in. This has caused an advance of 50c in both lines. Trade in general is very fair, considering the prevailing hot weather. No price changes are reported in other lines.

Butter—Butter is higher in the country. In spite of this, receipts are keeping up well. The tendency has also been to firm up local prices, though there has been no change as yet to the retailer. This has also been added to by a slight increase in export trade. While very small, it is certainly encouraging to see even a portion of our former trade in this line returning. Receipts for the week are 20,874 packages, as against 17,763 packages same week last year. For the season they are 187,803 packages, as against 157,974 packages same season last year.

Eggs—The worst feature of this year's egg market is the enormous percentage of rotten stock which is finding its way to the market. In one shipment received here over 50 per cent. had to be thrown away. Other than that, the outlook is bright, as receipts are dropping off, and prices are again firming up. The large receipts at present prices have been a source of continual worry to egg men locally, and this change is a welcome one. Receipts for the week are 4,415 cases, as against 4,884 cases same week last year. For the season they are 106,190 cases, as against 109,727 cases same season last year.

Cheese—Reports from London say that never has so much cheese been in sight there. As a result there is an over-supply, and the future prospects are very poor. The market has been flooded with New Zealand stock, as well as Canadian. Receipts for the week are very large, almost 12,000 boxes over the same week last year, 102,476 as against 91,110 boxes same week last year. For the season they also show an increase, 677,308 boxes, as against 674,538 boxes same season last year.

Honey—Trade is rather dull at present. A local dealer recently received an inquiry from Jamaica inquiring what were the chances for placing their honey on the market here. As there is plenty of our own stock to fill all requirements, it will be a hard matter to break into the market, however.

WINNIPEG.

Lard—The market is again reduced and the trade is weaker altogether. The summer output is always light, and this summer the demand seems lighter than ever. Butter of all grades is abundant and this has tended to cut off the lard demand.

Compound, 20-lb. pails, per pail	2 60
" 5-lb. tins, 60-lb. cases	8 60

Butter—There is a strong possibility of the butter supply diminishing, due to the parching of the pastures. At present the supply is very heavy and the demand good locally, and in the east, where shipments are continually being sent, jobbers are asking 82c for creamery and 20c for the dairy. The dairy price is strong and firm since it is this product that is being shipped out of the province.

Eggs—The 20-cent market prevails on all eggs this week. The supply is abundant and lots are going to the coast province.

Cheese—The demand is good for all cheese. The supply of local stuff is greater and it is fast superseding the Ontario product. Manitoba stuff is 12c and Ontario cheese 13½c to-day.

TORONTO.

Provisions—There is a steadiness to this market just now with demand converging to cooked hams and smoked bacon. Dealers are hoping that the G. T. R. strike will be of very short duration, otherwise difficulties are bound to arise and prices are likely to be affected. The past week has witnessed nothing out of the ordinary in this market.

Sharp Advances in Price of Flour to $6.20

Influenced by Wheat Market's Upward Movement, Flour was Necessarily Affected—Some Millers Believe That Even Higher Quotations Will be Reached—Future Movement, of Course, Depends Upon Wheat Market—Rolled Oats are Also Quoted at Higher Prices.

Still another appreciable advance in the price of Manitoba flour! A month or more ago the first signs of trouble were scented in the west, reports of drought and suffering crops. At first it was generally accepted that these were but the usual stories that find their way into market news and gossip. They were repeated from time to time and received certain substantiation. The market stirred slightly, strengthened after a decided lapse, and started back over the ground it had lost. This week it has been put up to $6.20, a price higher than any this year. In addition, there is a feeling among millers that the top price has not yet been reached, and it seems to be based on reasonable ground. The stagnant condition of the British flour markets should do much to neutralize the bullish effect upon wheat prices of a shortage in the crops. Last year at this time the demand from millers was one of the strongest factors of the grain trade, but so far this season reports from local and export dealers in both Manitoba and Ontario flour have been lifeless and discouraging. In fact, for weeks past there has been no export demand. Ontario crops are reported to be in splendid condition and there is every likelihood of a big yield.

On another page of this issue will be found a report from a representative of The Grocer, who is now in western Canada. It will be seen that he is hopeful for a crop that will about reach the average.

MONTREAL.

Flour—Manitoba spring wheat patents have taken a still farther rise of 20c, being now quoted at $6.10; bakers' at $5.60. At the high prices now prevailing in the flour market there is not so much new business being done, as jobbers and the large bakers loaded up at the first signs of a rising market. Deliveries of former orders is now occupying the greater part of the local millers' time. There is a small export demand, but nothing to be greatly taken into account.

Rolled Oats—Oatmeals are up 22½c this week. This is the result of a very heavy increase in demand, combined with the activity evinced by the oat market itself. Local millers are very busy in this line, and pronounce the situation very satisfactory. Cornmeal prices are also active, being slightly higher than last week. Trade passing in these lines is very heavy for this time of year, though the higher price may act as a brake.

TORONTO.

Flour—Influenced by western crop reports, flour advanced twice during the past week and Manitoba 1st patents are quoted now at $6.20, although it is stated that some mills even named $6.40. The other, however, is the price that is generally accepted. A prominent miller stated that there was not a great deal of buying at present, owing to the unsettled condition of the market. The feeling that the quotations are speculative holds to a certain extent. Locally, business is reported fair and it is believed by some that the market will go to a higher figure than that at which it now stands. Recent purchasings have been made largely on that idea.

Buying is reported to have been rather heavy of late, in view of an expected advance in prices. Give me more than I expect and I'll pay you more than you expect

AND, Brother Grocer, that's what they all say.

Boss to bossee, manager to employee, farmer to hired help, grocer to clerk.

"Give me more, and I'll give YOU more."

Consciously or unconsciously, we all sing the same tune.

Buyers—sellers—consumers.

For, you see, you can't get more out of a bucket than you put into it.

If we increase your profits, Brother Grocer, can't you afford to increase our pay?

If we give you more flour value than you expect, much more than you've ever known, won't you pay us more than you expected to pay—if you expected to purchase stingy quality?

We think so!

We'll give you more flour quality, more strength, more nutrition; we'll give you better attention, better service, better packing, prompter delivery, courtesy, as between gentlemen.

We will deal square with you, Brother Grocer, for we want to do business with you, not once, but always and all ways.

We'll guarantee every pound of FIVE ROSES, every shipment, every bag and barrel, every package, every container.

The makers of FIVE ROSES get more than others expect because they make better flour. They are satisfied workers. They work in healthy surroundings, a sanitary plant, a water-power mill. Good pay and good health make better makers of better stuff.

More money is spent—invested—in wheat buying, more money in modern machinery, brains, methods.

And this "Give More" policy means More Quality, More Steadfastness, More Pride of Workmanship.

With FIVE ROSES we give YOU better satisfaction—a pleased custom, a flour happiness that stands all tests to-day, to-morrow and all the other to-morrows.

For, you see, every pound of FIVE ROSES is wrapped in floury satisfaction, and in every pound is the germ of a re-order.

More of everything that makes a flour desirable—selling value, more sales, more profits.

More of everything the housewife yearns for—she'll pay you more, and Jen tells Jennie every time.

If we give you more than you expect, won't you pay us more?

We want you to sell more flour, better flour than your neighbor.

We want YOU to sell FIVE ROSES, Brother Grocer.

Will you?

General Berry Crop is Reported to be Heavy

And Canadian Market Will Reach Its Zenith During the Coming Week—Lemons Remain Quite Firm — Oranges and Cantaloupes are Higher—Market is Most Satisfactory, Abundance Being a Feature—Quality is Also Good — Bananas are Slightly Firmer—Vegetables Like Fruit are in Heavy Demand.

Imported and homegrown fruits and vegetables are dividing a heavy trade and from enquiries that have been made among retailers and wholesalers, the predominant feeling is one of satisfaction. Raspberries, peaches, watermelons and lemons are probably leading a big field for general demand, but in the second division there is a large assortment that is finding plenty of room on the market. Up to the present the season is well up to expectations, although it is admitted that strawberries were somewhat disappointing. Lemons are firm before a steady market. It has been stated that the losses that have been occasioned this year and the high price of lemons are due to the shipping conditions, the stocks often arriving in bad condition. It is held that improved transportation facilities will go a long way to improving the trade in more ways than one. Bananas are slightly higher. Cantaloupes took a big jump recently, warm weather and light shipments being the cause of the trouble.

Oranges have bestirred themselves of late, and particularly in the case of Valencias there is a good demand and a high price is being paid. The supply is none too plentiful. An authority on oranges stated recently that he had never seen such a range of prices as at present. This was due to the many varieties that could be obtained. Raspberries are coming towards the market's spotlight, and those who are in close touch with conditions state that the raspberry will be at its best during the early part of next week.

Blueberries are also being offered now. Gooseberries are said to be plentiful. The market is receiving a veritable cornucopia of the season's fruit and as long as the demand remains firm those who are handling it will welcome the plentitude.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits—Lemons continue to soar and this week oranges seem to be taking a flight of their own. Lemons are now selling at from $6 to $7, and are none too plentiful at these prices. In oranges, California late Valencias are selling at from $4 to $5, with prospects being for at least a continuation of those prices, and a distinct possibility of a still further rise.

Raspberries, blueberries and gooseberries are now coming on the market in quantity, and appear to be of very fine quality. Currants are also plentiful.

Grape fruit are very scarce and are now up to $9. Apples are practically done. Demand for cocoanuts is very light and the price seems to be weakening slightly.

Pineapples are very scarce, selling at $5.50.

Vegetables—Last year's vegetables with the exception of potatoes are about done, and large quantities of the new are finding their way to the local market. Prices are lowering almost daily, owing to a lack of buyers for present quantities.

Mushrooms are very hard to obtain, owing to the hot weather prevailing. New carrots are very plentiful, and are selling as low as 15c doz. Other lines are very low as well and in spite of the large volume of business passing dealers complain there is hardly a living profit in it at present quotations.

Fish—Fish trade is quiet as usual at this time of year, though some large future orders are reported. The volume of business, however, somewhat larger than last year, is considered to be in a very healthy state. Production in general has been fair, though in some lines such as mackerel, the catch is far below the last one.

Gaspe salmon has been in good supply, and prices have maintained a good level right along.

Brook trout is scarce and at higher prices, also salmon and frogs. Most lines of lake fish are scarce.

Green Fruits—This market might well claim to be the centre of attraction just now, sharing first honors with vegetables. Some of the new fruits blaze forth for about two weeks and then are forgotten until midwinter when they are brought forth from cellars and storerooms in the form of preserves. Strawberries are practically off the market, having given place to raspberries. The latter have been arriving in fairly large quantities but the heavy shipments are still to come. The price has been hovering around 13 to 14 cents with some of the dealers getting 15 cents at times. A substantial reduction is expected by the trade, however, when the shipments are heaviest. Cherries, red and blackberries, gooseberries, etc., are all finding many buyers and as the stocks are generally good, business is entirely satisfactory. Blueberries are just beginning to come and while reports regarding the crop seem to be rather contradictory, the general opinion is a hopeful one. Wholesalers also claim that the crop of raspberries is well up to the average.

Imported fruits are also proving favorites with the public. Georgia peaches, Bartlett pears, plums, green gages, etc., are in good demand. Watermelons and cantaloupes are enjoying a good trade, but the condition of the latter upon arrival has at times been for a large part rather soggy. Lemons are firm, bananas are slightly higher and there is good business being done in oranges in spite of the supply of other fruit. The range in prices of the latter is exceptional, and the best quality stock is bringing a good figure.

Vegetables—Canadian stocks are coming in more plentifully every day, and although the demand seems to steadily increase, prices are somewhat easier. Tomatoes are more plentiful, although they have not yet crowded the imported variety off the market. Canadian tomatoes are reported doing well and a good harvest of them is expected. The garden crop has hardly got under way yet, but they will be received in a short time. Peas and beans are in good demand and likewise new potatoes. The latter have not yet reached their period of heavy production. The vegetable market is flourishing at present and there are no reports of waste stocks.

INSPECTION OF CANNED GOODS.

Provision Made For This When Goods Are For Export Or From One Province to Another.

Ottawa, July 21.—An order in Council was passed last week bringing into force regulations governing the inspection of preserved fruits, vegetables and milk under the meat and canned foods act. The regulations apply only to the inspection of canned foods for export from Canada, or from one province to another. They are similar to regulations now in force governing cleanliness and sanitary conditions in factories and slaughter houses handling meat for export trade.

It is provided that all operations in connection with the preparation or packing of products in establishments coming within the scope of the act shall be carried on with the strictest regard for cleanliness and public health. All fruits, vegetables, milk or other articles used for canning purposes must be in a wholesome condition, buildings must be kept clean and well lighted, no injurious drug, dye or preservative may be used, and all employes must be free from tuberculosis or any other communicable disease. All cans must have labels giving the name of the packer, the date of packing, and a true and corect description of the contents.

IMPORTANCE OF THE RETAILER.

"It seems pretty clear to-day, more than ever, that the individual retail grocer is the man of the future. Croakers say that his time is past, but careful observers reply that even in the face of huge monopolies, unscrupulous practices, and hustling methods, the individual grocer who makes a careful study of the needs of his customers, of the local conditions, and of the new opportunities for business, holds his own." The above is from the address of James Cooper, President of the Federation of Grocers' Association of the United Kingdom, at the recent twentieth annual conference.

Newfoundland's Trade and Her Great Possibilities

Special Representative of The Canadian Grocer Travels Over the Island—A Peep Into Her Vast Fishing and Other Industries—Big Importer of Flour and Possibilities for Canadian Millers.

By David Williams.

Newfoundland, Britain's oldest colony, the tenth largest island in the world, situated in the Gulf of St. Lawrence is sixty miles from the nearest point of Cape Breton and only sixteen hundred and forty miles from Ireland.

It is in the direct track of the great Atlantic liners between Europe and America; some of the steamers taking to the north of the island and some to the south.

This great country containing as it does 42,000 square miles and, as said above, Britain's oldest colony, is but sparely settled; the inhabited portion being almost all around the rugged and ragged coast with a few settlements at points along the rivers where lumbering and pulp and paper industries are carried on. The total population is estimated at 240,000 of whom nearly 90 per cent. gain their livelihood directly or indirectly by fishing.

The revenue of the country for government purposes for the current year is estimated at $3,200,000 and the public debt is about $88 per head of the population. This is about $22 higher than that of Canada but is low compared with some of its sister colonies. Although the progress of the country has been comparatively slow in comparison with that of her neighbor, Canada, much has been accomplished during recent years. There is a fine railway line running from St. John's on the eastern coast to a port on the west, 542 miles in length with branch lines to Harbor Grace and Corbonier and another to Placentia, a quaint old town on Placentia Bay and the ancient French capital of the island.

Has a Busy Capital.

St. John's, the present capital of Newfoundland is for its size one of the busiest places in America. Here the great bulk of the trade of the island is done. The chief exports are fish and the product of the seal catch with pulp and paper looming up in great proportion, while iron ore is exported in large quantities to Canada and the United States.

The great iron mines on the little island of Belle Island in Conception Bay, about three miles from the coast of Newfoundland and twelve miles from St. John's, are represented to be unsurpassed by anything in America. One million tons of iron ore are annually taken out of those mines by the Dominion Coal and Iron Co., and the Nova Scotia Iron and Steel Co., and it is estimated, on the best authority, there is a sufficient supply at that rate to last one hundred years.

Newfoundland not being as yet to any great extent an agricultural country, the bulk of her food supplies, outside of fish, are imported. Large quantities of dry goods and clothing are also imported, chiefly from England as are also the bulk of the groceries.

Flour Chief Among Imports.

Provisions, flour, oats, corn, hay and etc., are furnished by the United States and Canada. During the last year the colony imported $940,000 worth of hams, bacon and pork and $1,776,000 worth of flour. Of this a very large proportion comes from the United States that should be supplied by Canadian millers. In many lines of manufacture, such as canned goods, condensed milk and cream, cereals and prepared foods, Canadian exporters and manufacturers are left behind in the race, United States exporters getting a very large share of the trade.

Some of the reasons given by Newfoundland importers for this are, that U.S. shippers are more prompt in filling orders leaving supplies at the points of shipment by sea; another reason which appeared to apply chiefly to canned goods was that Canadian exporters refused to ship in small quantities while the U.S. competitor would send them whatever they required and in the quantities required. Another complaint sometimes heard from Newfoundland importers was the slowness of carriage by Canadian railways and steamboat lines after goods were shipped.

The policy of the government of the island is high tariff protection, 40 per cent. being the minimum figure on manufactured goods. Considering the growing market and trade of Newfoundland it would undoubtedly be a paying venture for some Canadian industries to establish branch factories there.

Has Brilliant Future.

That this comparatively little known country will develop into great proportions in the near future is beyond a doubt, there being a great tract of agricultural land as yet unbroken near the western coast. While timber and pulp wood exists in abundance in the interior, it is anticipated that minerals in extensive quantities will also be found there.

Any description of Newfoundland, however slight would be very incomplete without some reference to the great paper industry at Grand Falls about midway between the Atlantic and Gulf of St. Lawrence. This huge concern has established one of the largest pulp and paper mills in the world, employing thousands of men and are producing paper for the London Daily News, London Times and the other journals. The company also own about fifty miles of railway on the island over which trains are regularly run. They own a number of steamers plying between Newfoundland and British ports carrying the paper to London and bringing out supplies for their army of employes and their families. Grand Falls, where the mills are established, is growing in a manner that rivals any western town; whole rows of houses and stores have been erected to accommodate the rapidly increasing population.

Randall's Grape Juice

Search history back through the dim, bygone ages, and ever will be found mention of grapes, and the preserved juice of grapes—wine. Even primitive man recognized the tonic, invigorating properties of the grape, but to him, and until now, the art of preserving its juice without alcoholic fermentation was unknown. So that, through all time, to get the benefit of the life-giving nectar contained in the fruit, man has been obliged to poison his system with alcohol. By the Randall process all this is changed. To-day you can offer to your customers, at a very moderate price, THE PURE JUICE OF THE CANADIAN CONCORD GRAPE, SIMPLY PRESERVED BY STERILIZATION, and ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM ALCOHOL OR ANY ADULTERATION WHATEVER.

Randall's Grape Juice

in bouquet and flavour rivals the rarest vintages of wine.

TASTE THE TASTE OF FROU-FROU

Frou-Frou is now being nationally advertised

This advertising is reaching your customers, amongst others, and it is to your advantage to stock Frou-Frou, because few articles show you such a handsome profit as does this Dutch Biscuit, the peer of all wafers.

Not only is the profit—under our price protection plan—such as to induce every grocer in the Dominion to stock Frou-Frou, but its sale is assured right from the start, and you will find the public ready and glad to pay a fair price—a few pennies more per lb.—for a wafer that soars so high in quality above all others.

The smooth, rich flavor of Frou-Frou is a revelation to those who only know the taste of the ordinary every-day filled wafer.

You owe the introduction of Frou-Frou to your customers, and to your own business.

FREE OFFER

We will furnish you, free of charge, with absolute proof of our claim that Frou-Frou is the most delicious, tempting morsel of goodness that ever left a baker's hands, by sending you, upon receipt of your name and address, a sample of this Dutch Wafer of indescribable charm.

What Constitutes Expense in a Retail Business?

Successful Merchant of 32 Years' Standing Points Out the Items to be Considered Supposing a Start Was Made With $10,000 Capital—The Five Cardinal Accounts and the Three to be Watched Closely—Interest on Investment, Proprietor's and Employes' Salaries, Rent, Fixtures, Advertising, Light, Heat, etc., Included in Expense Account.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

I am asked to write on a "Method to be Followed in Cutting Down Expenses," and am frank to say I do not know any. There is no known method—no sustem which can be set running and be trusted to work automatically. Cutting expenses is "eternal vigilance"—that's all. But we can start right, through knowing our business; and a discussion of what expenses are, with a little introduction, will probably be interesting and instructive.

There are five accounts in our business which may properly be likened to "working capital" in that they are constantly active. There are about eight accounts which are fundamental, or "cardinal," without which no systematic record of a business can be kept, but the five I speak of are "on the job" every working day and we surely must take pains to know about them or they will give pains to us. These are cash, merchandise, expense, owing and being owed.

The Three to be Watched.

And of these five, three demand our daily watchfulness. Those are expense, owing and being owed. If we handle these three right, we may rest comparatively easy about the others. In fact, cash and merchandise will almost get along all right if we watch the "Big Three." Of course, if we waste our cash in "riotous living" we will not have it; and if we pay too much for our goods we cannot make money—no matter how careful we may be of the Big Three. But the man who can successfully handle the Big Three is not apt to be careless in what he spends; nor is he likely to pay too long prices.

The aforesaid Big Three may therefore be said to be pretty nearly the law and the profits of the grocery business.

It is not possible to run a business successfully by giving attention to some parts of it. The work must be all round in character. Yet neither can any man study the whole of any business at one time, no matter how familiar he may be with it. He must divide it into sections, subjects, subheads, etc., and attack each portion separately, working over it until he masters it, else he will get nowhere. Hence, while I cannot say that one of the Big Three is more important than either of the others, I am going to begin with expense, the great primary drain of every business, great or small.

I once saw a man rise to speak on expense at a grocers' convention. He was asked what it cost him to do business and he replied: "Eleven and sixtenths." He said it crisply, definitely, as if he knew what he was talking about. His audience muttered, as they nodded to each other, knowingly: "Huh, huh; just about right"; but I knew, and you know, that very, very few—if in fact, a single one—in that crowd actually did know what his own expense account would figure if prorated on his sales. Further than that: You know, as I also know, that probably not a single one of those merchants was doing business on any such expense as 11 6-10 p.c. In my long experience, which covers 32 years to date, only once have I seen this equalled.

What is Included in Expense.

Now, obviously, if we would cut expenses, we must do several preliminary things. We must know the true nature of expenses; then we must ascertain what our expenses are, facing the music boldly, being watchful not to fool ourselves; then let us study what our expenses can be without danger—then what they should be to admit of our making a fair profit; lastly, we must set about trimming here and there, skillfully pruning off a penny where we can, until we work the limits down to the correct ratio.

To find what constitutes expense we must begin at the beginning. Let us say a merchant has $10,000 which he puts into a business. He might loan that anywhere at 6 p.c., hence it is worth 6 p.c. and must naturally cost 6 p.c. Thus, his primary item of expense is $600 a year for interest. He buys furniture, fixtures, wagons and other equipment; and, being a prudent, careful man, he confines that investment to $1,250—a truly moderate figure, as things go nowadays. The fixtures, etc., will shrink 10 p.c. per annum, to be on the safe side, so that item on an investment of $600, will show $60 a year for depreciation. The horses and wagons will last five years on the average, hence must be shrunk 20 p.c. per annum, which, on the amount of $650, gives us another item of $130 per year to add to expense. Then there is the manager, whose salary must be paid—it matters not whether he is proprietor, he must get his money. He is a valuable man, of wide experience in his line, who could get a good position elsewhere. So he is worth the money to his own business.

Figuring on a business of $60,000, which is about the limit for the capital, and allowing 2½ p.c. for the manager, we have another item of $1,500 to add to the annual expense. The premises in which the business is to be conducted may be owned by the proprietor; no matter about that. They are rentable and they must be charged up to the business at the going rental. Let us estimate $100 per month, $1,200 per annum, or 2 p.c. on sales. Next comes the mooted question of salary and wages expense. It is said to be as low as 6½ p.c. total in some places, and I know it is up to 10 p.c. in some others. But 6½ to 8 p.c. is said to be the proper range, so let us take 7½ p.c.—mainly because, to be frank about it, I cannot figure it down lower! This will give us 5 p.c., or $3,000 per year for wages expenses.

Our deliveries may be heavy or light, depending on location. Let us place a medium figure on them, say 2 p.c., giving us another $1,200 per year. Being wide-awake, we must advertise, and about 1 p.c. or $600 will do for the present, though that is very moderate. Then there are incidentals, like insurance, light, heat, ice, stationery, etc., for which all of 2 p.c. must be allowed, adding another $1,200 and giving us a grand total of $9,490 or 15.81 p.c.

Now, let me premise by what will occur to you, namely, that no man would start out just this way. He would begin small and work up to that point. But, the idea is that any merchant who, at the end of one year finds himself with around $10,000 total capital in his business and who decides that the business is large enough to continue the employment of $10,000, is in precisely the position I have indicated, and he must figure things just this way. What he can do if he decides that he does not need all the capital he finds invested is another question, which we shall take up another time.

You will say that this expense account is too high. Truly, it is. Yet I can point out to you many successful merchants who are carrying just such a load as I have indicated; and the question is are you carrying a load like it? That is where you come in.

Based on Actual Conditions.

In this paper I have not drawn a fantastical condition, but one based on conditions prevailing in many a grocery store. I do not say that the owner always knows his condition. Fact is he often does not know it. That is why I have set it before you; maybe it will help you to find some weak spots. When the spots are found the remedy will often be found also. Thus, in looking for any "method" such as was suggested at the beginning of this article, think first of finding the actual conditions prevailing in your business; and the remedy will follow almost automatically.

If you have an actual or suppositious problem, suppose you write me about it. Nothing will be divulged as to your identity unless you specially desire it; so we can talk freely, of intimate concerns in this family circle, and benefit each and all accordingly. Let me have your views.

R.M.A. Convention Endorse the Minimum Fee of $5

Quebec Provincial and Dominion Board Conventions Held in Montreal Last Week—Believe in Retailers Handling Pure Goods —Officers of Both Provincial and Dominion Associations Elected.

Montreal, July 27.—Last week was a busy one for the members of the Retail Merchants' Association who gathered in Montreal. Delegates from all over Quebec were there primarily for their own convention, which was held Wednesday and Thursday of last week, July 20th and 21st. After the local convention was held the Federal was attended by members and delegates from other sections of Canada. Among these were President B. W. Ziemann, Preston, Ont., Secretary, E. M. Trowern, Toronto; A. M. Patterson, 2nd vice-pres., Brockville; John J. Boyce, President Grocers' section of Quebec, and many others.

JOHN J. BOYCE.
President Merchant Grocers' Assn. Quebec City and Vice-Pres. Retail Merchants' Assn., Quebec City.

Little beyond registration and reports of committees took place during the morning. In closing, however, Arthur Leger, the President of the provincial branch, gave an address of welcome to the assembled delegates. He said that meetings such as these served as a means to bring men in different sections and in different lines of trade together with the one object in view—to promote the best interests of all. With common interests, and united effort it was astonishing what could be accomplished.

After Mr. Leger several addresses of welcome with responses, brought the session to a close.

After lunch the time was pretty much devoted to receiving reports. The evening session was devoted to committee reports.

Thursday morning was given up to the election and installation of officers. W. U. Boivin, dry goods merchant, was elected president; P. J. Cote, dry goods merchant, Quebec, first vice-president; A. Laniel, grocer, Montreal, 2nd vice-pres.; P. E. Beaudoin. Thetford Mines, treasurer, and J. A. Beaudry, Montreal, secretary. These five were also appointed to represent the province in the 6th annual Federal Convention on the two following days.

THE DOMINION CONVENTION.
Changes to Constitution.

On Friday morning at ten, with the president, B. W. Ziemann in the chair, the following gentlemen assembled at headquarters, corner of St. Denis and Lagauchetiere Sts., Montreal, E. M. Trownern, Sec.; C. W. Kelly, Guelph: J. A. Beaudry, Treas.; W. U. Boivin, J. A. Dore, J. S. Watson and others. In all about twelve attended.

Changes to the constitution were the first important things to come before the meeting. Many weak points were declared to have developed during the time the present constitution has been in force, and steps to eradicate such mistakes had, it was claimed, become essential. Some of these were merely minor changes, but in some instances the whole article was cut out.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—B. W. Ziemann, merchant tailor, Preston, Ont.

1st Vice—P. J. Cote, dry goods merchant, Quebec City.

2nd Vice—A. M. Patterson, dry goods merchant, Brockville, Ont.

Secretary—E. M. Trowern, Toronto.

Treasurer—J. A. Beaudry, Montreal.

Auditor—J. S. Watson, boot and shoe merchant, Montreal.

The election of each of these was unanimous. The delegates were royally entertained by J. A. Beaudry at the Canadian Club, at luncheon.

Minimum Fee at $5.

At a few minutes after two the afternoon proceedings began. The main details to be completed were the receiving and passing of resolutions.

A resolution was passed endorsing the action of the Dominion Board in making the minimum fee $5. Another placed the meeting on record as strongly opposed to the Co-operative Societies Bill recently before the Dominion House. Another endorsed the recent Secret Commissions Act, passed by the Ottawa Government, and contained a request that the provisions of the act should be made known to all members and their clerks.

Are Opposed to Free Gifts.

Resolution No. 8 speaks for itself, and is herewith given:

"That we again place ourselves on record as being strongly opposed to all such schemes as free gifts or coupons with the purchase of goods, prizes in packages, or any device that will act in the form of a bribe to customers in the purchasing of goods, and we request that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Dominion Board asking them to place a copy of this resolution in the hands of all manufacturers or dealers who adopt this practice."

Considerable discussion followed the bringing up of this old question, but the majority favored the resolution.

Resolution No. 16 reads:

"That this Board endorse the recommendation of the Grocers' Section of the Ontario Provincial Board of our Association, and print cards for distribution among our members as follows:

1910 Member. 1910
The Retail Merchants Association of Canada, (Incorporated)
GROCERS' SECTION.
All goods sold here are guaranteed to conform with the
PURE FOOD LAW.
The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, incorporated by special act of the Dominion Parliament, stands for full weight, careful service and business principle.

May Invade Maritimes.

Much of the time of the delegates was taken up with a varied program of entertainment provided by the local men. An invitation to inspect the harbor as guests of the Harbor Commission was only prevented by rain, but notwithstanding a few trifles missed, the delegates thoroughly enjoying themselves. Much of the entertainment program was due to the hand of the the Dominion treasurer, J. A. Beaudry.

During the whole of the proceedings the members seemed to be most optimistic and from hints dropped, the Association may invade the Maritimes before any great time has gone by.

Saturday was hardly necessary to complete the work, and many left Friday or early Saturday.

Thousands Visit Falls with Hamilton Grocers

More Than 1,500 Gallons of Beverages Consumed—A Hundred Coaches Necessary to Carry the Crowds—Baseball Game in Which Grocers are Victorious—Many Other Humorous Events —The Officers in Charge.

Hamilton, July 27.

200 gallons milk.
400 gallons coffee.
400 gallons tea.
150 gallons lemonade.
400 pounds sugar.

No, this is not an extract from the requisition of the commissary department of a regiment going into camp for a couple of weeks. It merely represents a few items from the bill of fare of the Hamilton Retail Grocers on their annual picnic to Niagara Falls.

It takes a lot of good healthy people to consume such a quantity of drinkables. As usual, this event attracted nearly five thousand from the Ambitious City alone, and the supplies were not at all excessive.

The figures above give some idea of the magnitude of the picnic, which, to Hamilton, long ago attained the dignity of an institution. For thousands of citizens it is the big event of the year.

The strike of Grand Trunk trainmen made it necessary, at almost the last minute, for the committee in charge of transportation, to cancel an order given that road for several trains, and secure extra accommodation from the T., H. & B. Five heavy trains were run, and, unfortunately, it was necessary to crowd them rather uncomfortably. However, all of the excursionists understood the circumstances and felt that the committee had managed excellently in the face of considerable difficulty.

Several things combine to make this picnic an immense success. The most important is, of course, the splendid enjoyment assured by the large and varied programme of amusements. Then there is the place where it is held—an exceedingly beautiful park overlooking the majestic cataract of Niagara. The conditions are pretty nearly ideal.

For twenty-one years the Hamilton grocers have been holding this picnic, and it is worth noting that only on one occasion have they had other than real fine weather.

Financing the Big Picnic.

Grocers throughout Canada will be interested in knowing how the affair is financed. There has never been any desire to have a surplus, but several times the attendance has been so large that quite a neat sum remained in the treasury after all expenses were paid. This money has always been devoted to charity or some other laudable purpose. One year $100 was given to the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, and another year $150 was spent in furnishing a reception room for the Young Women's Christian Association at Hamilton.

President of Hamilton Grocers' Assn.

The total expense runs up to about $1,200, which includes $200 for music. An annual programme is issued, and a profit of about $500 is generally realized on the advertising space. Then there is a commission of 15 cents on every ticket sold. This year the commission would run up to over $700.

One of the most interesting features of the picnic is the refreshment department, which serves tea, coffee, milk and lemonade free of charge to the excursionists. When you consider the number of people attending, this is no simple task, and a great deal of credit is due to the committee in charge, of which A. G. Bain is chairman, for the excellence of the arrangements. This department has been in Mr. Bain's charge for the past twelve years. When he first took it over an ordinary wash boiler constituted the equipment. As the picnic grew, until one hundred, instead of ten coaches, were required to accommodate the crowd, the committee invested in big kettles, holding 40 gallons apiece, each having its own separate furnace. These are supplied with three faucets, so that no time is lost in serving. Twenty men are required to wait on the people, who are admitted at one door in single file and go out by another. By a splendid system confusion is reduced to a minimum.

Tea, coffee, milk and lemonade are carried away in paper pails, five thousand of which are supplied by various manufacturers.

Grocers are Baseball Champions.

To get back to the programme. In the morning a baseball match was played between teams representing the grocers and travelers. The score was 18—12 in favor of the former. The teams were:

Grocers—Cummings, ss; Hobson, c; Williamson, 1b; Foote, rf; Smith, p; Cochrane, cf; Lavis, 2b; Cann, lf; Knox, 3b.

Travelers—Morton, c; O'Neil, 3b; Beasley, rf; Norman, ss; Lumsden, lf; Geiger, 1b; Little, cf; Plater, 2b; Wilson, p.

Umpire—D. M. Barton.

In the afternoon there were daylight fireworks, pigeon race, guessing contest, baby show, fat man's race, rabbit-catching contest, and many other interesting events, some of them containing touches of novelty that added, of course, to their enjoyment.

Splendid music was furnished by the 13th Regiment band, and a rube band in grotesque costumes was on hand as a comic feature.

The Men in Charge.

The officers of the Hamilton association are as follows:

President, J. A. McIntosh; 1st vice-president, Ed. Hazel; 2nd vice-president, J. M. Semmens; treasurer, Jas, Main; secretary, M. R. Hill; executive, John O. Carpenter (chairman), A, Lavis, J. L. Brown, A. G. Bain and W. Smye, Jr.

General Merchant Turns Over Stock 3 Times a Year

Annual Turnover Amounts to $36,000 — Method He Uses to Promote Cash Sales—Has Only One Price to All—An Incident Showing How He Nailed Fast a Customer Who Threatened to Leave Him—Places Limit on Credit Customers.

Tamworth, Ont., July 28.—Every merchant should keep close tab on the quantity of stock he carries, the annual turnover and the number of times the stock is turned over during the year.

This is the opinion of A. B. Carscallen, of A. B. Carscallen & Co., of this place. He can tell at any time what stock he is carrying and he knows the profit he is making because he has only one price to all.

Mr. Carscallen values his stock at about $12,000. He turns this over three times a year, making an annual turnover of $36,000. His stock consists of general merchandise.

He does both a credit and cash business and aims to encourage the latter as much as possible. To do this he gives a coupon with every 25 cent purchase, which is later redeemed in dishes, etc., in his own store. This he considers to be the same as a cash discount.

Places a Credit Limit.

But when he does give credit he gives it with his eyes open. Tamworth is a small town with a population of about 1,000 and Mr. Carscallen knows practically everybody and what amount they are good for.

When a man comes into his store he knows his limit, whether it is $2, $4 or $10. When that amount of goods is purchased no further credit is granted until the account is paid in full. This prevents any debtor getting far into his books and curtails his losses through bad debts a great deal.

Never Duns a Farmer.

In respect to collecting accounts he has made it a rule never to mail a "dunner" to a debtor where there was any possibility of making a personal collection. He is more than usually particular about farmers.

"A farmer," he says, "never likes to get a "dunner" through the mail; it seems to injure his personal pride and he will often steer clear of your store afterwards as much as possible.

"But when you get him into your store, you can easily side-track him to a corner and hand him his account saying that you would be glad if he could settle it as soon as possible.

"Strange to say he considers this method on an altogether different basis and usually settles; then you have him in your store and can observe what effect the presentation of the account will have on him."

Mr. Carscallen does not close his accounts at regular periods, but only from time to time when he deems it advisable.

Has Only One Price.

Another method which he adopted and one which he claims is working well, was his decision to stick to one price. The population of Tamworth are educated to this and when a customer comes to his store he or she knows that only one price will be quoted.

Mr. Carscallen cites an instance showing that sometimes trouble arises but that it is best not to give in.

Not long ago a farmer called one Saturday night to buy a pair of boots. He was inclined to be somewhat cranky. He was shown a pair of boots at $2.80, but he wanted them for $2.75. It was pointed that if Mr. Carscallen reduced the price he would be disarranging his whole system of doing business. He argued that while 5 cents didn't make any difference one way or another to either of them that it meant he would be setting up a precedent that would change his entire method. He also pointed out that it didn't matter who asked for a reduced price—all were treated alike.

This did not convince his customer who declared he would go somewhere else and get the boots. While Mr. Carscallen was sorry to lose him, he was forced to allow him to go elsewhere.

But this is not the end of the story. The wife of this farmer dealt with Mr. Carscallen. The time to go home came around and the farmer called for his wife at the store. The merchant assisted the woman into the buggy with her parcels but avoided making any reference about the boots—in fact he kept as far away from the subject as possible at the same time knowing that the farmer was itching to talk about it.

Just as the latter was picking up the lines to drive off he remarked: "Well, I got those boots all right."

Farmer Lost on the Deal.

He was asked in a kindly manner to show them, which he did. They were exactly the same as Mr. Carscallen had been selling for $2.50 and not nearly as good a boot as the one he had shown him for $2.80. He pointed this out at the same time driving home the point that because he had only one price he could afford to sell cheaper in such cases.

The result was this farmer came back to deal with him regularly and he has never since had any difficulty over his prices.

"Had I submitted to him in the first place," says Mr. Carscallen, "he would have demanded concessions always and eventually would have been the cause of breaking up my entire system of doing business."

Must Deliver Net Weights to Their Customers

The Uniform Tares Committee of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association of the United States is sending out a notice to members warning them to avoid violations of the law by delivering net weight to their customers. The letter reads in part as follows:

"Your attention is called to the subject of 'Buying merchandise gross weights for net.'

"For a great many years the jobber, being an intermediate dealer, has accepted bulk goods sold by weight or measure as they came to him from producers and turned them out to customers at the same weights he received them. Very naturally he was not particularly concerned as to whether the weights were gross or net. Since the advent of modern methods and legal regulations it has become a burning question and absolutely necessary for a dealer to know that when he invoices a certain number of pounds, that amount so mentioned must be there, or he must be held to account. When such articles as rice, beans, cereals, flour, dried fruit, etc., are handled on the basis of the avoirdupois pound as a unit, it is a violation of law in reference to weights to represent that a package contains 100 pounds of the commodity, for instance, when in fact it contains 99 pounds net. The amount stated in the invoice would be considered a declaration of weight of contents.

"By reason of the foregoing, jobbers desiring to avoid violations of the law should deliver net weight to their customers.

"Every dealer should insist on net deliveries and where same are not given carefully make a record of shortages and deduct such shortages from invoices.

"In the event that conditions are such that it is not practicable to deduct, then make claim and render invoice to seller, demanding settlement."

Old Country grocers claim that figs and muscatels are not packed satisfactorily and have passed resolutions urging the necessity of better packing and better grading of these fruits.

NO TRAVELER'S TAX AT CAMPBELLTON.

We are advised by D. Murray, mayor of Campbellton, N.B., that no tax is imposed by his town on commercial travelers.

Correction is therefore cheerfully given to a paragraph which appeared in The Grocer last week stating the contrary.

Some years ago a representative of The Grocer was taken in charge by a police official in Campbellton because he was canvassing for subscriptions without a license, and we were not aware that the tax no longer existed.

THE CROP AT PRESENT.

It is quite evident now that the crops in southern Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have been considerably injured by the excessive heat and lack of moisture. However in the northern belt they are well up to the average. This much is certain, that much harm has been done, but to what extent is difficult to estimate with any degree of accuracy.

In many respects the failure of the wheat crop in Western Canada will be a blessing in disguise to some farmers.

A representative of The Canadian Grocer now in the west states that there is often a wonderful difference between crops on opposite sides of the railway line. One farmer sowed wheat practically on the stubble, while the other cultivated his soil as a farmer should, and even in an extra dry district the latter will have something for his trouble. It all goes to show the value of scientific farming.

In Ontario the grain crops are excellent. Another representative of The Grocer traveled through Central and Eastern Ontario last week, and reports fall wheat, oats and peas in splendid condition. In fact farmers declare they have never had a better crop in years. Timothy and clover hay were both heavy, and are now under shelter. Fall wheat cutting is under way and from 30 to 40 bushels will be realized. Peas are ripening rapidly and oats are turning. Sunday's rains assisted both to fill out where they had not already matured.

Retailers in Ontario will welcome these conditions because they tend to make the farmer freer with his money and more prompt in his payments.

STRIKE AFFECTING TRADE.

Correspondents and representatives of The Canadian Grocer in Quebec and Ontario tell of many drawbacks to trade owing to the strike of G.T.R. trainmen.

Freight in many instances has been delayed, particularly where the Grand Trunk is the only means whereby it can be moved, and merchants are suffering for lack of supplies. Express rates on sugar, etc., have had to be paid on necessary shipments, and this has left little profit. Fruits, and provisions such as pork products, butter and eggs have also been neglected.

Merchants in the tourist sections reached by the G.T.R. only are much handicapped. Tourists do not care to take any chances and are either cancelling their proposed trips or going elsewhere by another route.

The trade is therefore anxious to see a settlement and when matters are again adjusted there will be a considerable relief and better business in the parts affected.

HONEY LIKELY TO BE DEAR.

From all accounts Ontario honey will be scarce and high this year.

While the bees wintered in splendid condition and while prospects for a good yield were bright up to the middle of April, the weather conditions since that time have not been conducive to good results.

From April 20 to May 24 and later the weather was cold and damp. At the latter date when the bees should have been gathering a surplus from the fruit bloom they were practically starving and in many instances had to be fed. But in spite of this stimulant they became less in numbers or strength and were weak to begin on clover which is the principal honey flower.

Dry weather then set in and large bee-keepers say that only about one-half an average crop of honey will be realized.

If this is the case prices will likely advance and will probably be about 11 to 12½c wholesale.

A CHANCE FOR INFERIOR GOODS.

As noted in one of our news columns last week an order-in-council has been issued by the Dominion Government authorities at Ottawa, enforcing regulations with respect to the inspection of canned goods under the Canned Foods Act.

It will be observed from this that this inspection only applies to goods preserved for "export or from one province to another." These regulations are similar to those respecting sanitary conditions in factories and slaughter houses handling meats for export trade.

What is the purport of this? It simply means that a manufacturer who packs goods for consumption in the province in which he is established is exempt from a rigid inspection.

Going a step further, a manufacturer who sells his goods only in his own province, since he is exempt from this inspection, may palm off almost any kind of goods on the retailer and consumer. If he is honest and careful in his work he will not do this, but there is always the way open for him to make an inferior article, to neglect to come up to the regulations, to cut prices and undersell his honest competitor and possibly to injure the healths of the people of the province who purchase his goods.

Such legislation is unfair to the retailers and consumers of every province in which there are canned goods manufacturers selling exclusively within the province.

It is something that shouldn't be. If one manufacturer spreads sufficiently to export his goods or sell to another province, he should not be subject to a heavy inspection expense, which a competitor in his own province does not have to bear.

The same argument applies to the inspection of abattoirs. It leaves the way open for the manufacturers who export, to sell an inferior article in their own province and send out their best. Why this should be is difficult to ascertain.

Sprinkle the floor with water several times daily during this hot weather. If it does not actually cool the store it creates a feeling of coolness and at any rate it keeps down the dust.

People may sometimes forget where they have been well served, but never where they have been "done."

The Aims of the Institute of Certified Grocers

It Recognizes that Business Conditions are Constantly Changing—Greater Ability Necessary to Keep in the Front Rank---"Automatic Machines" in the Grocery Business Discountenanced.

The Institute of Certified Grocers!

Readers will probably recall a previous reference to this organization, which a short time ago held its annual examinations for members, and concerning which a brief note appeared in these columns. It was organized in England, some time ago, and the results thus far obtained have so greatly exceeded the expectations of the originators that the idea is rapidly gaining ground and spreading throughout the United Kingdom.

Technical education is to-day demanding greater attention than ever Governments and prominent educationists are beginning to realize the merit of the claims advanced by the pioneers of technical training and in the near future Canada will, it is believed, witness great advancement in this regard. The Institute of Certified Grocers provides a technical training for grocers and their assistants.

The grocery world has of late been closely following the career of the Institute, and there is now a feeling in the United States that the idea is a practical one, and is worth adopting.

It is an association of qualified members of the grocery trade, including representative grocers, grocers' managers and grocers' assistants. It recognizes that the conditions of business life are constantly changing, and while ability in one's profession is more important than ever, the opportunities to acquire it are, in the present rush of business life, few and far between. It starts out in its great mission, therefore, by linking up such members of the trade as have proved themselves, either by their past business career or by test examinations, qualified to call themselves grocers, as distinct from automatic machines.

The institute aims at efficiency in all the branches of the general grocery trade. The secretary states that the abnormal number of failures in the trade in England proves that without knowledge, a grocer cuts a very sorry figure, and the Institute has organized special classes so that the grocers and assistants or clerks may acquire this knowledge, and urges the members of the trade, particularly the younger members to attend these classes and acquire a thorough knowledge of their calling.

If there is one class of grocers whom wholesalers and successful retailers hold up to scorn, it is the boilermaker or machinist who, having saved a tiny pile, opens a grocery store under the impression that all that is required of him is to take in money and hand out goods. This idea prevails right up to the present moment, but not in the same measure as heretofore, the number of failures having moved to caution retired farmers, etc., who had been contemplating a similar step.

After having carefully discussed the advisability of forming an organization those who were behind the movement reached a determination to proceed with it and launched the Institute on November 1, 1909. Examinations were held simultaneously throughout England in April of this year, and following these local examinations the successful students assembled in London in May, to try the national examination of the Institute, the examination being of the most searching character. The successful students should have a most valuable knowledge after the course of studies they have followed. Equipped as they now are there should be very few failures among the class that graduates yearly from the Institute of Certified Grocers.

TOO MANY CHANGES BAD.

Frequent change either of employers or lines is the most serious mistake any salesman can make. On the road to-day are many men who might be earning twice what they are if they had stuck to one line; but they allowed a slight increase in salary to tempt them to change, and have lived to rue the day. Acquaintance in a given territory, familiarity with some high-grade line, and the confidence of the trade are a salesman's greatest assets, and every change lessens their value.

Of course, times will come when changes are necessary, but they should be made only after the most careful deliberation and with a view to establishing a connection that will be permanent. In making a change the salesman will consider carefully the standing of firms, how they treat their customers, if their goods are well known, and how much advertising they are doing. No salary should be large enough to tempt him to take out, through a territory where he is known, a line of unreliable goods and thus destroy the confidence of his old customers in his good faith. It is better to stay where you are unless you can make a change that will result in your permanent betterment.

Having considered carefully the advisability of a change, every effort should be made to find a new position before resigning his present one. In the eyes of almost every employer the man at work has a value at least 25 per cent. higher than the one out of a job. To be able to say, "I am now employed and am giving satisfaction," supplementing this with good reasons for desiring a change, has proved the open sesame to many a first-class opportunity.

Through their wide acquaintanceship salesmen are in a better position to hear of opportunities than perhaps any other class of men. Then, too, they have open to them firms handling the same line as their own. Sales managers are always glad to consider men in the employ of their competitors; and if your work has been above the average, you may be surprised to see how much they know about you.

The man who can stand up and be cheerful under adverse circumstances will have the sympathy of people and their help to a greater extent than the man who goes to pieces the minute a piece of ill-luck looks over the fence at him.

At this time of year the man in the store needs to get out of the store at every opportunity and store up as much as possible of the sunshine that will help carry him through the winter.

If you think that you can be pleasant with people inside of the store and look over the tops of their heads when you meet them on the street and still get their business, guess again.

A SERIES OF ARTICLES ON BUSINESS MANAGEMENT.

The attention of readers is directed to a series of articles beginning in this week's issue from the pen of Henry Johnson, Jr. These articles are written exclusively for The Canadian Grocer by Mr. Johnson, who has spent 32 years in the retail trade and who knows exactly what he is talking about. They will deal with Business Management in the store including expense of doing business, accounts owing and owed and the knowledge which ought to be possessed by the merchant who is anxious to become a successful business man.

Mr. Johnson does not talk from hearsay, but from actual experiences. He invites correspondence and any sent through The Canadian Grocer will be considered strictly confidential and forwarded on receipt to him.

Thinks Guild Should Work for Benefit of Members

Letter to the Trade From New President of The Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild—His Ideas on Quantity Price, Wholesalers' Relation With Retail Trade and Mode of Distribution—Cost of the Guild Suit.

Hugh Blain, of Eby, Blain, Ltd., Toronto, who was recently elected president of The Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, is sending out a letter to the trade in Canada bearing on his opinions with respect to existing conditions.

In it he says: "In assuming the office, it is gratifying to know that never in the history of the trade have conditions been so favorable for placing the grocery business on an honest and satisfactory basis. The general public recognise, to an extent which they never did before, the importance of the grocery trade as a vital factor in the health of the people; and, with the proposed legislation by the Dominion Government, the trade will be able to guarantee the consumer a purer article of food. Recent legislation, making secret rebating criminal, together with the decision of the courts, has also fortified the trade and placed it in a position to take a stand in forcing a rigid adherence to a high standard of business morals. The enthusiastic support of the entire trade of the Dominion is pledged to the observance of absolutely honest methods in the transaction of business.

"The 'Manufacturers' Selling Contract' with the voluntary declaration to insure its enforcement, has been approved and adopted by the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild as a crowning deliverance on behalf of the whole trade of Canada, and it now becomes the duty of the officers and members to see that every piece of machinery we have is kept constantly in motion to secure to the fullest measure the benefits to be derived from this unique protective plan. The honest man will welcome its rigid enforcement, while the dishonest man will sooner or later become the object of its just punishment. I earnestly solicit the active cooperation of every member of the guild in a sincere endeavor to place the grocery business on a satisfactory and an honest basis.

Cost of the Guild Suit.

"I would like to point out the enormous expenditure of time and money which it cost the members of the guild to place the grocery business in the position it occupies to-day, and put forward the claim that there should be special advantages for guild members only. In addition to the preparation and revision of the equalized sugar books twice a year for the last twelve years at an expense of several thousand dollars (as well as all other incidental expenses, necessary to a proper organization) the recent suit against the guild cost over $12,000, to prove to the public that our methods were just and honorable and necessary in the interests of the trade. With such an experience, while I would gladly serve every person in the business alike and with equal pleasure, I cannot realize or admit that I should work for those who have not contributed one cent towards this expense, and who appear to be so absolutely indifferent to our interests as members of the trade.

"As distributors of the manufacturer's products, it is proper that we should justify our existence. We often hear ignorant people say "Do away with the middleman, and save his profits." To the superficial observer this sounds well and, looking at it from an isolated case, he concludes that the whole subject has been settled in favor of his opinion. Some manufacturer has sold a large quantity of his goods to a special retailer at a cut price. This retailer has probably also cut the price to the consumer, who thus gets the goods cheaper than the regular price. Our Socialistic Anti-Middleman individual without further knowledge rushes to the conclusion that the consumer is buying cheaper because the manufacturer sells direct to the retail man. Let us put the telescope of experience before the eyes of this narrow-minded, short-sighted individual and ask him to look beyond the small circle of his own restricted vision and take a larger and clearer view of the situation. He will see this same manufacturer's representative (at a daily expense for traveling of three, four, or five dollars, and a still larger expense for salary) selling these same goods to the retail merchants all over the country at the regular prices. Suppose there are one hundred such travelers, each selling his own line of goods, and you will readily see the enormous expense this involves; and (as the law of average must apply on the manufacturer's prices, if he is to succeed, as well as to all other matters in life) while the special buyer and his customer gets the goods at less than the average or proper price, the retail trade generally and the general consumer must pay more than the average price. This is invariably the way it works out when you eliminate the so-called middleman.

Distribution Through Wholesaler.

"Look now at the same goods distributed through the regular channels. The goods are assembled in large quantities in the wholesale warehouse, at the least possible expense to the manufacturer and frequently at car-load freight rates. They are then sold by one wholesale traveler instead of by travelers representing one hundred manufacturers at practically the same expense as the expense of one of the hundred. There are, of course, more than one jobbers' traveler selling these one hundred lines but, as a rule, it requires many more than one traveler to handle the output of a factory, if sold direct to the retail trade. As a matter of fact it requires less travelers to distribute goods to the retail trade through wholesale houses than it does by the manufacturer selling direct to the retail trade. I think I am within the mark when I express the belief that goods can be distributed to the retail merchant by the jobber at from one-third to one-half less than by the manufacturer, and with greater satisfaction to the retailer.

Would Bring Commercial Chaos.

"This selling at lower prices to a retailer at less than to the retail trade generally is always indulged in by the manufacturer when he sells direct to the retail trade, and is unfair to the great majority of the retail merchants. It is always a mistaken policy on the part of the manufacturer. It degrades the business standing of the average retail man, and withdraws his interest and loyal support from the sale of the goods. No matter how large the retailer may be in a business way, he is merely an incident of trade conditions, and if he were wiped out of existence the business of the country would go on as usual; but, if the retail trade generally were wiped out, it would bring about commercial chaos. Human existence would become intolerable until business again resumed definite channels, and these channels would, I am satisfied, be found to be exactly as they are to-day. The manufacturer, the wholesaler, and the retailer, are the natural branches of trade.

"It is as natural for the wholesaler to assemble the manufacturer's goods, so the retailer can, with facility, get his assortment, as it is for the retailer to assemble his goods so that the consumer can get what he wants at one convenient place without having to go possibly hundreds of miles for what he requires. Think for a moment how a retailer could ever commence business if he had not the wholesale house to go to, where all the goods he requires are assembled, and from which he can select his stock. I have attempted to make it clear that our existence is, as a necessary branch of business, justified. If, however, further evidence is required, we have the overwhelming testimony of both the manufacturer and the retail merchant.

"Having satisfied ourselves that we, as well as the retail trade are necessary it becomes important that we should work in harmony with the other branches. Much has been done in this direction during the past year. Conditions existing between the manufacturer and the wholesale trade have been much improved. Dozens of contracts on the protective plan with the manufacturers have been made, with the right to call for a declaration if a violation of the contract is suspected, and has been found to work well. This has established a much closer community of interest between these two branches. The manufacturer realizes and admits the advantage of distributing his products through the wholesale jobber, as the cheapest and best methods of distribution, and I believe many manufacturers are now realizing the necessity of a more liberal compensation for the services of the wholesaler as his distributor.

Relations With Retail Trade.

"Equally satisfactory advances have been made with the retail trade, and it is with unmixed pleasure and satisfaction that I see the relations between them and ourselves becoming daily more cordial. Not one retail man in one hundred wants a secret rebate on the price of goods if he is sure that his competitor does not get it. He does, however, want a fair field and no favors. He wants to know that his neighbor does not get advantages in buying that will enable his neighbor to undersell him. He wants to be able to say to his customers "I know I buy my goods right, and I can, therefore, sell you as cheaply as any one in the business." It is the wholesaler's imperative duty, and it should afford him his greatest pleasure, to keep constantly in view the interests of his retail customers. When a manufacturer puts an article on the market, the wholesaler should join the retailer, and they should insist that the retailer gets a proper margin of profit.

"They should also insist that proprietary articles should be sold to all retailers at the same price and on the same terms. In Ontario the Wholesale Guild appointed a committee and the Retail Association appointed a committee, and these two committees are to form a joint committee, and I hope to see the trade, both wholesale and retail, so support, endorse, and uphold this committee that, if a manufacturer refuses to provide for a reasonable profit, the trade, both wholesale and retail, will absolutely refuse to handle the goods. It is unthinkable that a man, because he is in the grocery business, should be forced to sell his services to the manufacturer for less than cost. It is getting less than cost that causes ninety per cent of all the dishonesty in the world to-day. From an ethical point of view, it is worse than slavery; because, it not only binds you to do work for another, but compels you to do it for less than a living. It forces men from corner to corner until it drives the moral fibre from the human conscience. It rejoices me to know that there will be such a co-operation between the wholesale and retail trade as will in due time remove this disgrace from our business record. If any one doubts this coming cordiality and co-operation between these two branches of business, let him study the address of E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, delivered at the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild, during their annual convention held in Toronto.

"Let me repeat my determination to work exclusively for the benefit of the Guild members. Every association works, and should work, for the benefit of those associated together—The Law Society for the Lawyer; the Medical Council, for the Doctor; the Ministerial Association, for the Preacher; and so on through every walk of life. Why then should not the Guild work for the benefit of its own members?

"If any member has an idea or plan in view that he thinks would be of advantage to our members, I would ask you to write me and I will see that it is properly considered. Remember that to accomplish satisfactory results, we must have individual action combined with associated effort."

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

A Neat Method of Displaying Bottled Pickles Used by Winnipeg Grocers—Toledo Grocers Must Cover Fruit With Netting—No Saturday Night Delivery by Barrie Grocers—Montreal Grocer Attributes His Success to the Attention and Care he Gave the Business While he Was an Assistant.

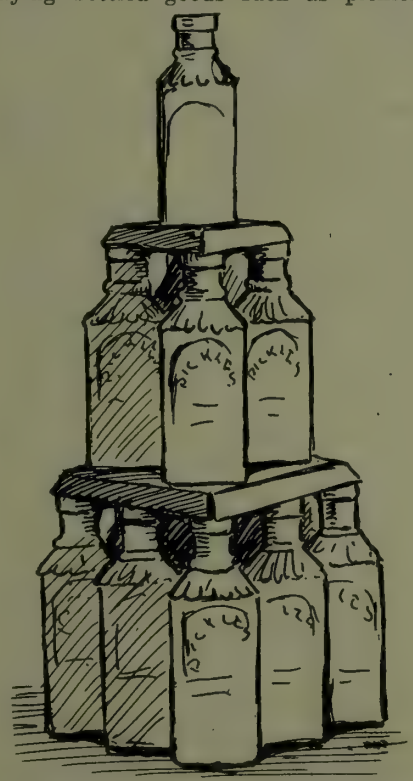
Must Use Netting on Fruit.

Toledo, O., July 28.—A campaign to exterminate the fly has been inaugurated in Toledo and the grocers and fruit dealers have been the first to be approached regarding it. At a recent meeting of the executive, the medical health officer addressed the officers stating that all vegetables, fruits, etc., must be covered by a screen or mosquito metting.

A heated discussion arose, some of the members expressing their opinions that when any movement is agitated or any reform is undertaken by the health department, it has always seen fit to make the grocers the first victims. At length, it was decided that all who handle fruit must cover it with a netting and included in the list is grocer, vendor, huckster or banana stand holder.

No Saturday Night Delivery.

Bracebridge, July 28.—The example set by the grocers of this town in refusing to deliver goods on Saturday night is being followed by other places in the district. Barrie grocers have not only adopted this idea, but they are also giving a weekly half holiday during July and August.



Gooseberries are going to be a big crop here, but blueberries are, according to reliable farmers, practically a total failure.

A Good Business Beginning.

Montreal, July 28.—"From the time I first commenced business for myself, I never had the slightest fear of not making a success of it," said a young grocer of this city recently during a casual conversation. In making an explanation he continued—"while I was working as an assistant I took as much interest in the business as if it had been my own. I always tried to please customers just in order to acquire that ability. Then the time came when I had a chance to launch out in business for myself. I did not go far from that district and a large number of the old customers followed me to my new store. With those as a nucleus it was not long before others joined them. That in itself was a great encouragement and I was never in difficulty. I attribute whatever success I may have achieved to the diligence and care that I gave my employer's business."

Making a Pickle Display.

Winnipeg, July 28.—Some Winnipeg grocers have a neat method for displaying bottled goods such as pickles, catsups, lime and lemon juices, etc. The accompanying illustration explains it plainly. A square of bottles is placed on the counter or floor and the tops covered over with a neat, nicely varnished square board. On top of this is a smaller square of bottles covered with another board and so on. Sometimes these pyramid shaped piles are in 5, 6 and even 7 sections and where a store is large a couple of these displays set off the interior nicely.

A little care is necessary in erecting the bottles and there will be no danger of them falling. The labels on the bottles should, of course, be turned out to obtain the best appearance.

Cutting in Sugar Continues.

Vancouver, B.C., July 26.—The local Retail Grocers' Association is discussing what action might be taken against the B. C. Sugar Refinery Co. and the wholesalers who are alleged to be supplying a local departmental store with sugar. This store is still selling the product of the local refinery at $5 a hundred, when the wholesale price is $5.90, less one per cent. for cash. It is maintained that because of cash and big purchase the big store is granted a special rate, but this is denied. Then it is argued by the retailers that the price ought to be protected, and the threat is that the local association will import sugar from China. Some of the latest shipments from the department are said to be not in the regular bags of the local refinery, but in paper bags, and this has given rise to the suspicion that Chinese sugar is being sold there. Even so, the cost of this article is $5.40 to $5.50, so there would also be a loss in selling at five cents per pound.

At any rate the cutting of prices to get customers to the big store is causing dissatisfaction among the local grocers, and there is more talk than ever of the establishment of a retailers' exchange, which would act as a large central wholesale distribution place, and thus take the business away from those wholesalers who for momentary benefit are accused of acting against the interests of the smaller dealer.

The Markets—Strike Affects the Grocery Trade

Has Put Wholesalers and Retailers to a Great Deal of Inconvenience — Prices Have Not Been in Any Way Influenced, Only Where Express Rates Had to be Paid—Sugar Market is Steady—Canned Goods Promise to be Higher in Several Lines—Past Week has Been Rather Quiet—Travelers are off the Road and Grocers are Deep in the Fruit Business.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS.

Sugar—Firm.

Ginger and Mace—Scarce and high in primary.

Coffee—Firm.

Montreal, July 28, 1910.

The principal topic of trade conversation here is still the strike on the G.T.R. and its effect on local and national conditions. There is no doubt that there has been a very serious loss to perishable goods en route, and not only that, but there is still a shortage in milk supplies. However, conditions seem to be improving, and the Grand Trunk officials promise good service from now on. It is still a recognized fact that the service could be largely improved, but under the circumstances good work is being done.

The sugar situation seems to be puzzling local jobbers. All signs seem to point to higher prices, and yet prices are already at a very high level for the refined article in comparison to last year. The outcome is awaited with interest.

Trade in general is good, and all the jobbers report good country trade coming in. Collections are none too good, but during the holiday season, this is not unexpected.

Sugar—A recent communication from Cuba indicates that there is going to be a much smaller output than was at first expected. This, if true, will have a serious effect on raw prices all over, as the Java crop is none too large, and United States refiners have been expecting to fill up on the later Cuban arrivals. This will vindicate the European quotations, which have been consistently higher than either New York or here, and will send up the price of the refined article still further.

Sales of refined are still dropping off to a certain extent, and so far very little preserving seems to have been done.

Syrups and Molasses—Both syrups and molasses are selling exceptionally well considering the time of year, also taking into account the hot weather now prevailing. Several large lots of West India molasses have been disposed of recently at fair prices, and on the whole the market is in a satisfactory condition.

From the jobbers' point of view the market is particularly gratifying as sales are good at good prices, and the stocks were bought in at a fairly low figure.

Tea—Except for the newly arrived Japans the tea market is quiet just now. These, however, are selling well as far as they go, but supplies are none too plentiful as yet. Other cargoes are on the water, and it will not be long before the main supplies for Canada arrive. The market is firm, though no changes have taken place this week.

Coffee—Coffee prices are firm, but the market itself seems to be dull. For this month there is usually little moving, and this year seems to be no exception, but after the first of September there will undoubtedly be a change. At present coffee men are content to hold up the prices to their present level, even if sales are slow.

Spices—Mace and ginger are high and firm in the primary market. This is due to the undoubted scarcity of these two items. In fact there is a feeling of firmness all through the spice market. This has had a tendency to stimulate buying, and in spite of the hot weather there has been a considerable increase in demand for the standard lines.

Reports from New York show the same situation prevailing.

Dried Fruits—There are too many cheap fresh fruits on the market at present to allow of any great demand for the dried. However, it is fully up to what it was last year, and is all that dealers have hoped for.

Prunes seem to present the feature. The large sizes are scarce and on the upgrade as far as price goes. Other lines are practically the same as last week.

Nuts—Recent letters from France and Spain tend to confirm the rumors heard from time to time, that the nut crop of these two countries had suffered from frost to such an extent that there would likely be a bad shortage of high grade stock in both almonds and walnuts. There seems to be little doubt that the damage is serious, and local dealers prophesy a strong market for the new crop, with prices soaring.

Nut trade locally is good. Summer seems to have brought with it a desire for nuts of all kinds, for peanuts are by no means the only ones to have a large sale .

Evaporated Apples — This week has marked a falling off of sales, even for export, which so far have been sufficient to uphold the local. However, there is a ray of sunshine in all this, and that is that there is little high grade stock left on the market. For this reason there will probably be no change in quotations due to slack demand.

Beans and Peas—There is a good demand passing for beans, which is somewhat of a surprise to local men, considering the time of year. This has kept prices from sagging any further, and in fact has given a certain amount of prospect of a slight advance.

Peas are quiet, though prices continue firm.

Rice and Tapioca—From the jobbers' point of view there is little doing in either line. This is accounted for by the fact that during the hot weather it is too much to expect people to cook articles, which take as long as do the above. However, from the importers' point of view, matters are not so bad. Local prices are firm and the prospects are for a large fall trade. In fact, many orders for tapiocas have been booked already.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—Peas continue to have a demand fully up to all the market can supply. In fact there is a decided shortage in all except the extra sifteds.

The condition of the entire market shows very firm prices, and a tendency toward higher levels. It would only take a little more of this feeling to send prices up another notch.

In meats there has been a substantial increase in demand at former prices.

Sardines also are in greatly increased demand, owing to the large demand for camping and hunting parties.

TORONTO.—The summer season is a good time to sell salmon. The demand is naturally heavier than usually, some believing that it is the best season. The fact that there is no trouble in preparing it for the table is a strong point in its favor and it finds demand from other sources. It was estimated by one dealer that there were no more than 100 cases of horseshoe salmon in the country. Reports of the salmon catches on the various rivers in British Columbia are given in another column, and apparently it is fairly good, although the Fraser River returns have been somewhat disappointing. However, the pack has not been put away yet and until that time there is an opportunity for many changes. One local broker stated that he expected to see only half the pack of last year. "We are only getting half our orders," he stated, "and dealers may be thankful if they receive that much." This refers to futures.

The prices of the new vegetable pack are expected to be given out at any moment now. Peas are said to be only half a pack and corn and tomatoes are beginning to receive attention. Higher corn markets of late in the United States may have a systematic effect on this side of the line, and in regard to tomatoes, reports are received from sources to the effect that the crop is not going to be up to the average. However, with the recent copious rains these half gloomy reports are not expected to be substantiated in full. It might be said that canned goods promise to be good property.

Toronto, July 28, 1910.

If there is any feature to the general grocery market this week it is a feeling of quietness. This may be attributed in some measure to the volume of business that is being transacted in the fruit market. The grocer is apparently focusing his attention largely upon fruits, of course not overlooking his general groceries. But the opportunity of selling fruit is at hand and the retailer is apparently not letting any chances of an extra profit slip by.

The strike has caused considerable inconvenience. The trade would not call it anything else. There has been a loss inasmuch as the total amount of goods handled has been curtailed. As one prominent wholesaler said, "The company may announce that they have broken the strike, but the fact remains that our goods have been in some cases standing now for ten days and have not yet been moved." When the first day or two had passed the trade began to meet the new conditions. They arranged for other railways to carry their goods and for boats to take a certain amount. Many instances are reported of retailers who had to team the deliveries distances of from 15 to 25 miles from the nearest point on the C.P.R., or other line, to the home town. Some of the trade express the opinion that the people should not be put to such inconvenience as results from strikes. Trade in sugar remains steady and in some varieties of dried fruits there is fair business, but otherwise conditions are on the quiet side, while the grocers devote their best efforts to the new fruits.

Sugar—The demand for sugar keeps up at a high figure and prices have not shown any tendency to change. If anything may be said regarding the local situation it is that an advance is not expected and the tendency is slightly in the other direction.

Dried Fruits—Currants are enjoying their usual good demand and there is some business in raisins. In other respects this market is inclined to quietness. The reports received by local offices from Spain regarding future raisins do not entirely agree. One is more hopeful than the majority of those received. It states that the crop will be about the same as last year, but that was much below the average. Another letter from Denia, Spain, states that the first shipments of the new fruit will be about August 25, and that the crop is going to be much below that of last year. The demand for prunes is not heavy.

MANITOBA MARKETS

Advanced—Prunes and evaporated apples.

Firm—Sugar.

Weaker—Sago.

Reduced—Seeded raisins.

Winnipeg, July 28, 1910.

Last week was a slack one for many of the wholesalers, due to the travelers all being assembled for the exhibition. Merchants, however, from many parts of the west visited the city during the fair, and called on the local jobbers. Many large orders were listed, but the bulk of ordering was, in the main, disappointing. Wholesalers were anxious to learn of the wheat crop prospects, and the visitors from the southern parts of the three provinces had many woeful stories to relate of wide expanses of wheat areas which were practically ruined by drought and heat. The increased acreage this year may keep up the average yield set by former years, and the great northern plains will yield a bumper crop.

As yet the crop condition in wheat has not affected the markets of the west, and it is not expected that any changes will occur on this account. Importations and local wholesale stocks may be slightly restricted.

The oat crop will not be heavy, and the cereal market is being held strong, although no change over the recent advance has been made this week.

Sugar—Heavy shipments are continually leaving the city, and it is evident that there is a considerable amount of preserving being done everywhere in the west. Powdered and lump stuff is going out well, and the entire market is strong. Were it not that quotations are chiefly controlled by United States sugar men, the western market would certainly go up.

Foreign Dried Fruit—Prunes lead the list in the demand just now, although all lines are moving freely in spite of competition in fresh fruit. Further advances may be made shortly, as California buyers are intent on boosting the market in all lines. California raisins have been reduced by the local houses. The stock is old and efforts are being made to make room for new goods. The quality is unmarred.

Syrup and Molasses — Late reports show that starch goods have been reduced, thus creating a double weakness in the syrup market. Evaporated Apples—The revival in the evaporated apple market has come to stay, judging from present indications. Reports from the States are that frost has injured the apple crop, and it was due to this in part that the price was put at 9½ cents recently. This is an advance of 1 cent over that of last week.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, July 28, 1910.—Flour is still in the ascendant, and this week the price is $7.10, with the prospect of higher quotations. Reports from the wheat producing country are that the crop will generally be light, and quite a failure in many places. Enterprising as the flour millers are, they will not wait to see but are quick to act on rumor and have put the price up. It will come down, though, only after they have been doubly assured, either this year or next, that there is plenty of wheat. The price of the wheat out of which the present flour is made was not sufficient to warrant the increase, but the fact that sometime it might be high is enough to start the price soaring.

Heat, too, is damaging the melon crop,

Winnipeg Industrial Exhibition Bigger than Ever

Extended Ten Days This Year—Exhibits Show the Importance of the Western Metropolis As Distributing Centre—Many Foodstuffs on Display—Ontario and British Columbia Fruit Attract Attention.

Winnipeg, July 27.—The greatest fair in Western Canada, known as the Winnipeg Industrial Exhibition, closed on July 23, after ten successful days. This year the fair period was extended to almost double the length of time given to any previous exhibition. This is significant with the rapid growth of the city, and the country as a whole. It further bears out the fact that although Winnipeg has many industrial rivals in the other progressive cities in the west, yet she retains a commanding position from the standpoint of her numerical and industrial expansion.

Judgment or criticism can be best passed upon the Winnipeg exhibition when it is estimated in comparison with other great Canadian fairs. The Canadian National Exhibition is, of course, the greatest annual fair. The exhibitions in both centres are the best that those centres can produce.

Great Distributing Centre.

Winnipeg cannot yet be counted a very great manufacturing centre, although it no doubt will be before many years. It is not strictly an agricultural centre, since in this regard it is superseded by many other western centres. It is, however, a great distributing centre of a wide range of merchandise, and this fact could be brought out by a general survey of the exhibition. Most of the exhibits were of goods that are distributed, and not manufactured in this centre. Whether it is that many of the local manufacturers are satisfied with their trade, it was evident that they did not take advantage of the exhibit features. Every great fair depends much upon the support of local manufacturers, and so long as the Winnipeg factories decline to show their goods, so long will the fair be held in check. Should the fair be deprived of the agricultural displays, the outside manufacturers' exhibits in the halls, and the vaudeville stunts before the grand stand, there would be little left upon which to base a great fair. It is unwholesome, however, to take this sort of view, and it is better to believe that that which was was best.

There were several displays of grocery stocks dispersed throughout the three manufacturers' buildings.

Ontario Fruit.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture occupied more space in the fruit building than any other single outside corporation at the exhibition. The entire east end of the building was utilized for the exhibit of fruits from different parts of the province. It was unfortunate that the season was rather inopportune for a perfect exhibit of the wide range of high-class goods that come from that province. As a consequence the range of goods was limited, and all the apples on hand were last year's cold storage stock. The apples were in excellent condition and showed plainly that they had good preservative qualities. The pears, peaches and plums were all bottled, and this display, arranged in banks at the rear, was effective. There was a large quantity of currants on display, and these won admiration, many boxes being given away to the passersby. The large booth was covered with green and white cloth, and "Ontario" was lettered in green on an arch in the centre. T. B. Revett, of the Horticultural Department of Ontario, was in charge of the exhibit.

Honey Exhibit.

Although honey production is being indulged in more and more in this province, the exhibition of this product was not large. There were only two exhibitors. It is believed that it was due to the fact that honey producers can easily find an eager market for their goods, that more of them did not take advantage of the opportunity to make an exhibit.

B. C. Fruit.

The British Columbia government exhibit of fruit covered a range including cherries, currants, tomatoes, raspberries and peaches. All the stock was well preserved in spite of the fact that it traveled 1,600 miles. The tomatoes were particularly attractive and firm in quality. Most of the stuff came from Nelson and Mission Junction districts. The few peaches on hand were picked early and did not fairly represent the quality of the B.C. peaches. The crop is said to be heavy this year. All other fruits from the coast province were shown in preservatives, and the display of the tiered glasses was exceedingly fine.

Varied Crop Conditions in Western Canada

Southern Parts of Manitoba and Alberta Have Suffered From Lack of Rain, But Northern Districts in These Provinces Present More Hopeful Outlook—The Western Provinces as Seen by an Easterner—Loss Seems to Have Been Heaviest in the Lethbridge District—Rain is Badly Needed in Manitoba.

By Staff Representative

Indian Head, Sask., July 23—Throughout the whole west varied reports of the crop situation may be heard in each locality. Each place that has any crop at all seems to be boosting its particular locality. On the south branch of the C.P.R., from Pincher to Medicine Hat, the situation in some places is very acute just now, only four inches of rain having fallen since last fall. At Pincher an old resident farmer told the writer that while his crops were not up to standard by any means, yet he would have enough to pay for his labor. He seemed reasonable in that he said that the country must look for an occasional bad year. This, he told me, was the worst in fifteen years. Rain would still help them here if it came within ten days.

At Macleod the writer was driven through the surrounding country, and while everything was very dry, yet some very fair crops were seen. In other parts of the same immediate district the crops were in much better shape, but, of course, in need of rain. The wheat in many instances was quite well headed, but much shorter than usual. There was much evidence of careless farming and in a great many cases the farmer himself is largely to blame, and this year will be a good lesson to him. He had sown the wheat on top of stubble, and in other cases had merely scratched the ground and dropping the seed, not giving it any depth. The oat crop in this district is very poor. The banks are inclined to tighten a little, but have not as yet received specific instructions to that effect. One manager told me he expected instructions in every mail. A local machine representative said that up to the present farmers had made all their payments, but he expected there would be a few this fall whom he would have to carry over.

This District Suffered.

The worst evidence of crop failure in Alberta was found in the Lethbridge district, where they have almost no crop at all. Travelers visiting Lethbridge see this when calling on customers. Real estate firms, for instance, are doing almost nothing, and some are closing up. In the Cardston district, southwest of Lethbridge, conditions are much better.

Conditions around Medicine Hat are much the same as at Lethbridge.

As you near Moose Jaw the wheat begins to look much better, and a fair crop is looked for. This whole district as far as Regina and Indian Head is in good shape. At the latter place the writer was told that the crop outlook was never better. This can be relied on, as it was received from reliable sources. A splendid downpour of rain on the 15th inst. helped the situation materially, although they were not suffering from need of it. Some very fine samples of wheat were seen at Regina. They were grown at a point fifteen miles north, and the heads were long and well filled out. The Saskatoon district is also said to be in good condition.

Crops all through the northern part of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are known to be in good shape.

FRESH EGG CIRCLES EXPLAINED.

Chatham, Ont., July 26.—Chatham is the second place where co-operative egg circles have been explained. At a recent meeting here addresses were given on the subject by Prof. F. C. Elford, of Macdonald College, Quebec, H. C. Duff, of the Farmers' Co-operative Association, Peterboro, Ont., Prof. Graham, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, John A. Gunn and John I. Brown, Montreal.

The object of the movement as explained by these men is to handle only guaranteed fresh eggs, for which the highest price will be secured. Egg circles are formed among the poultry raisers and egg producers; eggs are collected every week and taken at once to a central station, where they are tested by the buyers. Every egg is numbered by the producer so that in the event of any dissatisfaction the trouble can be traced up to the producer. Eggs are to be gathered by the circles at least once a week; no eggs are to be delivered from found nests, and any eggs that do not meet the buyer's tests are to be accounted for by the producer. The membership fee is $1.

Provision is made for excluding badly shaped, small or discolored eggs, and for collections at least twice a week in the summer months. No organization work was done at the meeting, which was held largely for educative purposes. This system is now in operation in Peterboro county.

TRADE NOTES.

Goderich, Ont., grocers are among the number who take the weekly half-holiday during the summer months.

Kamloops, B.C. is endeavoring to secure jobbing rates from the C.P.R. Before when an application of this kind was made, the reply was that until a wholesale house was established the rate could not be given. Now, however, a merchant has started in the wholesale business and cheaper freight rates are being asked so that goods may be distributed from Kamloops. The board of trade is acting in the matter.

Increased Prices in Some Pork Product Lines

Curtailment of Supplies From Country Points Created a Certain Scarcity—Butter, Eggs and Cheese Have Not Changed in Prices—Poultry and Old Honey are Quoted at Reduced Figures—Railway Difficulty has Caused Considerable Inconvenience to the Trade.

Trade in these markets was considerably inconvenienced last week as the result of the railway labor difficulty. This is to be expected from the fact that the provision men obtain their supplies in almost every case from country points and at least half, if not more, of these were dependent upon the G.T.R. The trade were not expecting the strike and were caught off their guard so to speak. However, they quickly sought to readjust matters, arranged to ship by some other means, and also sought for new sources of supply. So well have they handled business that only in the case of pork products have prices been affected.

There have been a few other advances, but they cannot be attributed in the same measure to the strike. Dealers, however, do not appreciate the present conditions, and they are all hoping for a settlement. They anticipate results that will be felt for some time, even after any settlement that may be arrived at.

Butter and eggs that are held any length of time quickly deteriorate, and the dealers in these goods know that stocks are being held on account of poor shipping facilities. If these are shipped at a later date there will be a general loss, they say, and it is with a unanimous accord that they refer to the loss and inconvenience that the strike is entailing.

Supplies of hogs have been curtailed somewhat and prices took quite a jump during the week. Butter and eggs have not changed much in any particular, but poultry and old honey are quoted at reduced prices. Cheese is holding its own at former prices.

MONTREAL.

Provisions—Prices are too high at present to be conducive to a brisk demand for this class of goods. Prices, however, in some lines were raised today, notably compound lards. This has caused a feeling of uncertainty as to which way the cat would jump next, and as a result trade is slightly better. Weather conditions are against any heavy trade, and until the cool weather there is expected to be little further change.

Butter—Receipts are falling off considerably, though it may prove to be only a temporary respite. The market remains steady, at last week's figures, and with a good trade passing. Cheese—There is no excitement in the cheese market this week. Receipts are falling off to a considerable degree, and there seems to be a likelihood of a continuation. Many of the factories are reducing their output, and it looks as if there would be a stronger market in the near future. Receipts for the week are 80,993 boxes, as against 102,415 boxes same week last year. For the season they are 758,301 boxes, as against 776,973 same season last year.

Eggs—The feature of this week's trade is that storage eggs are beginning to come on the market to a certain extent. This is partly due to strike conditions here, as some of the bases of supply are cut off. Dealers are well satisfied to see a diminution of receipts, however, as they have been coming in too freely to be taken care of properly. Receipts for the week are 6,901 cases, as against 3,749 same week last year. For the season they are 113,091, as against 113,745 cases same season last year.

Butter.—The market on all butter is held strong and heavy shipments are leaving the city for the east. The price of creamery is 24 cents to-day. Dairy has a good market and the price is stronger at 21 cents just now.

Eggs.—The heavy western shipment has sent eggs up and the figure ranges from 20 to 21 cents this week. The stock is all candled, and the supply from the province has not dropped off in the least.

Cheese.—The cheese market is becoming stronger. Local factory stuff is gaining prestige on this market and supplies are jobbing at 12 to 12½ cents. The Ontario product is up ½ a cent this week, and the importation has dropped off somewhat. The price is stiff at 14 cents.

Honey.—Indications are that the yield will be fairly heavy this year. No new stock has been received by the trade, but samples from the east are expected soon. The Manitoba stuff will be of good quality and will arrive earlier than usual. The demand is not good, however, and there is little activity in the market.

Provisions—A scarcity in the primary market has boosted prices during the past week. In other words, there has been a scarcity of hogs, and, of necessity, pork products have been affected. It is not that the supply has become exhausted, but those in touch with conditions assert that some of the large abattoirs have been affected by the strike insomuch as some of the places from which they receive regular supplies have been cut off by the strike. They have had to look in other quarters to try to meet the deficiency. The result has been to send up the price of live hogs, and some of the leading lines of pork products have also been affected. In regard to the future, of course, we cannot offer anything but surmises. The trade is looking for an early conclusion of the present difficulty.

Butter—Local dealers state that there has been but little change in the butter market. Supplies at first were almost cut off when communication with particular shipping points was stopped, but arrangements were quickly made to secure stocks from other places. The price of butter has not been affected, but in regard to supplies it is believed that there has been a little decrease. In some places farmers were drawing the butter as far as sixteen miles or more, and under such conditions it could scarcely escape deterioration to some extent. Dealers arranged for shorter hauls and the inconvenience which was felt in the first week of the strike has been largely overcome. Still, on all sides provision houses are hoping for an early settlement of the strike.

Cheese—The cheese market has not been seriously affected by the strike. New makes at country points have either been stored away for later shipments, or in places where it was possible they were drawn to another road. Reports are received from some quarters that production is decreasing, but this is to be expected at this season. However, pastures are said to be in good condition yet and the make of cheese may be expected to be fairly large for some time.

Getting a Sure Profit on Sale of Cooked Meats

Some Grocers Aim to Sell Whole Hams To Make Sure of No Shrinkage or Loss by Waste Ends—Others Get Their Profit on the Best Parts and Sell Shanks at a Loss.

Does the grocer who is interested in the provision line secure a profit on the smoked hams he handles?

A branch manager of one of the largest provision dealers in Canada remarked recently in a rather odd way. "There doesn't seem to be much to this business from the layman's standpoint but when you get into it you begin to open your eyes."

After slicing it down, a half pound to Jones and a pound to Smith, until but the shank is left or what is termed the shank, has the grocer made a profit on the whole transaction and what was the extent of it?

In the old days the corner store grocer took no chances on a loss. He bought the ham and he sold it just as it was. There was no slicing and no loss.

As the result of hanging in the store the ham had shrunk in weight and had become to a certain extent dry. The consumer, however, had to bear with this. There are some retailers who are carrying on a ham business in much the same manner to-day and they are confident of their profits.

Whole Hams Bought.

At this particular time of the year the grocer should endeavor to conform his trade to this plan. During the warm weather the average housewife likes to buy a smoked ham, take it home, boil it and serve it cold for various meals. It lasts for several days or perhaps a week. It offers a release from the stove and places the good wife on the promenade deck instead of down in the engine room.

It has been stated by some retailers that the safest and probably the best way to build up a good business in hams is to sell them whole, if possible. But this can only be done at certain times.

It is not every grocer who sells a couple of hams a day and when he is getting down to the small end of one the customer soon lets him know about it and he has to cut into another. To guard against allowing these shanks to collect is preserving a caution that will help the profits. In summer particularly this meat dries rapidly and the average customer will have none of it.

It becomes a question of selling the whole ham at 20 cents a pound or slicing it at from 23 to 25 cents a pound. If the grocer to please his customers decides to slice the ham he should pay close attention to just what he is doing. There is no element of business in working on an uncertain basis. The grocer paid for these shanks and it should be his business to get his money back and in addition, a fair profit.

Sells Shanks at a Loss.

One grocer's method is to sell the slices at a good profit and when he is nearing the shank to offer it to some customer at a much reduced price. This he believes is sufficiently safeguarding his interests. For instance, he sells the slices at 26 cents and offers the shank when it had been well reduced, at 15 cents.

Dealing in ham is one example of numerous sidelines the grocer handles. He should know exactly what margin he is realizing. A thorough knowledge of his business is its best invigorator. There is no groping in the dark, the grocer having an intelligent grasp of just what he is doing. He should be able to tell before hand what his profit is going to be and then follow his sales for a time until he is sure that he is working on a safe and profitable basis.

During the summer months of the year, at any rate a good business can be built up in handling hams and the grocer should endeavor to get the most out of the opportunities presented to him.

Another Advance in Price of Flour at Montreal

This Movement in Sympathy With Western Crop Conditions—Confidence in the New Crop has Been Restored to Some Extent by Recent Rains—Reports are Satisfactory From Many Districts—Ontario Fields Have Never Shown Better Grain and a Big Yield is Anticipated.

About the early part of the present week there was an easier tone to the wheat markets in Winnipeg and Chicago. This easiness was represented by a close at the end of one day of about two cents below the opening price. This was partly in the form of a reaction following the rapid advances of late, but was mostly due to the feeling produced by the recent general rains throughout the west. They arrived at an opportune time, for some districts, but they were too late for others.

However, there was a reclaiming of some of the lost confidence. The estimate of the western crop about two months ago was placed at 150 million bushels. Drought has cut that figure in two and some houses are placing the figure at 75 million. The more sanguine of the trade, however, are looking for eighty or more. The country is undergoing a scrutiny by experts, but even at the best it will be some time yet before a definite idea of the yield will be obtained.

MONTREAL.

Flour—Flour prices have taken another 20c jump, owing to the western wheat situation, and the report is that they are very apt to stay at least is high as they are now, if not going still higher. At least, there seems to be no immediate likelihood of any weakening. The G.T.R. strike has not helped matters any, and if long continued might influence the market materially. Trade passing is rather light, owing to the fact that dealers have already laid in most of their supplies. Still, in view of the present state of the market, trade is certainly fair.

Rolled Oats—The market is firm at the recent advance, and trade passing seems to be on the increase, although nothing as yet to boast of. Some export demand seems to have been found, but buyers seem to be waiting for a drop to take place. At present there is little to lead one to think that any such change was in prospect.

TORONTO.

Flour—Locally the trade is quite encouraging. Interest is pretty well divided between the Ontario and western crops. The former are unusually promising. From all parts of the province reports are being received which would indicate a harvest such as has not been garnered in many years. This report is not confined to any one grain, but to practically all. Wheat is in splendid condition, and reliable estimates place the crop at forty bushels an acre in many localities, while it is expected that the average will reach more than 25 bus. to the acre.

Some of those who are following the crop conditions state that they expect Ontario to yield about 25,000,000 bus. Not only is the crop a good one, but the farmers of the province have in latter years been receiving prices that have encouraged them to extend their planting of wheat, and the result is that in addition to a good yield per acre there is a considerable increase in the total acreage.

FREEDOM FROM FLIES.

A successful grocer describes the following method which he uses to dispose of flies. About fly season time he takes a narrow strip of wood and tacks it at the ceiling at the edge of the shelf, to this strip he tacks mosquito netting, which extends to the floor. These strips of netting over-lap each other from 8 to 12 inches so that in taking the goods from the shelves the over-lap will not leave space between the drops. In order to keep the netting in place little loads of lead are tied at the bottom. The front windows about once a week are emptied and the whole store is darkened, a little light is left in one window, where the flies will gather. At this point fly paper or fly buttons is used in sufficient quantity. In the course of half a day the store is well rid of flies.

Lest You Forget

ALL we are going to tell you to-day, Brother Grocer, is this:

We have never used Cheap Wheat in the milling of FIVE ROSES flour, nor "doctored" wheat, nor anything else that's poor.

Out in the western prairie land we have over 80 elevators sifting the topmost cream of the Hard Spring Wheat upon which has been built the grand reputation of the Manitoba growers.

The least rust, or speck, or stain on the amber-colored berries warrants immediate rejection beyond recall.

There is nothing off-color, off-grade, off-quality, in the wheat that makes FIVE ROSES.

It's the pure extract of the pure kernel, needing NO BLEACHING, Brother Grocer.

A pure Manitoba flour is FIVE ROSES, from the ripe, red grain.

No admixture of soft wheats to reduce the strength, the lightness, the quantity of breadstuffs.

Often we pay a premium over the market price in order to secure the coveted crop of a particularly favored district.

Because, you see, the FIVE ROSES case is rested finally not upon FIVE ROSES salesmanship or upon FIVE ROSES advertising—good as we want these to be—but upon FIVE ROSES FLOUR, the product of 21 years of fidelity to specifc, standard quality ideals in Wheat Buying, in the Milling and Marketing of Flour.

Is this assurance worth anything to you, Brother Grocer?

Then we give it in all Sincerity.

Strike Has Seriously Affected Fruit Business

There Has Been a Quietness That is Getting Upon the Dealer's Nerves—All Hoping for an Early Conclusion of the Present Condition in G. T. R. Freight Circles—Lemons and Oranges are Firm—Certain Amount of Waste has Been Reported in Recent Receipts of Some Varieties.

It is next to impossible to estimate the exact effects of the present railway difficulty upon the fruit markets particularly of eastern Canada. With the fruit season reaching its zenith and from the fact that the G.T.R. twists its way in and out through the Eastern provinces providing the sole communication for many of the smaller towns and villages and considering that practically no freight has been carried for almost two weeks, looking at these facts it is apparent to even the outsider that the fruit trade must have been considerably curtailed during that time. One instance might be cited of a lakeshore town on the G.T.R. No other road passed through the place, but fortunately goods could be carried from Toronto by boat. Had the town been farther inland there would have been no alternative but to wait until the railway could serve them again.

As the summer passes on, the various fruits and vegetables are coming and going, opening at a high price and gradually sliding down the scale until they are struck off the lists. Raspberries and cherries are waning and will soon be gone, but there has been a good business in each case. Oranges and lemons are quite firm and in good demand. Imported peaches, pears and plums are also going rapidly. On account of the abundance of almost every variety of fruit the strike is all the more annoying to those who were looking forward to a good season unhampered by extra difficulties in obtaining the fruit. On every side the men in the fruit business are hoping for some signs of peace and a restoration of the old order.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruit—One or two dealers report a slight break in the lemon situation, due to new arrivals, but the majority say that prices are higher still, quotations now ranging from $7 to $7.50.

California late Valencias are still scarce, and there is a still further advance in price, some selling as high as $5.50. The Grand Trunk strike has had a decided influence on the receipts of perishable fruits, and several shipments have been delayed until they will be only fit for the dump when they arrive. As yet prices have not been affected to any appreciable extent.

Cherries are scarce and locally are about done. Those on sale are very mediocre quality, and are higher in price.

Vegetables—With the exception of carrots and turnips, which are slightly higher, vegetables in general show weakness. Beans are now selling at $1 and even less in scattered instances.

Mushrooms are practically done, and tomatoes are showing a decided scarcity. Celery is also about done.

Trade in general is brisk, but dealers complain of the prices they have to sell for in comparison with the buying prices and the waste due to the prevailing hot weather. Still there seems to be no doubt that business is good, such as it is.

Fish—Mackerel are scarce and are selling now at 15c, an advance of 5c over last week. Another run is expected in August, and it is to be hoped that it will be above the average, or there will be a bad situation in this market.

Lake and river fish are also scarce, owing to the fact that it is the close season for a great many varieties.

Gaspe salmon are higher, owing to scarcity.

Large sales of halibut are reported at good prices, and receipts of this fish are coming in freely from the Pacific coast.

Oysters are selling slowly just now, because of the hot weather.

A feature of the week is the arrival of a 400-lb. sturgeon, caught down near the gulf.

Fish—The catch of fresh fish in Manitoba waters has reached the limit stated by the law, and as the trade warrants a greater supply, local jobbers are endeavoring to bring in fresh whitefish and halibut from other provinces. Next week a shipment is expected from Edmonton. The continuance of hot weather has tended to weaken the meat trade and stimulate the use of fish. Prices have varied little.

TORONTO.

Green Fruits—In spite of the strike the local fruitmen are doing considerable business, but it has been under certain inconveniences. That there has been a falling off in trade is substantiated by the fact that the usual amount of goods is not being received. The shippers would not take a risk under present conditions; the wholesalers were in the same boat fearing to order goods under the possibility of delayed deliveries and the commission men concluded that adopting the same protective policy was good enough for them. Of course, there has been fruit brought in, but for the most part there has been a noticeable quietness which was not even thought of during the week previous. Express charges are practically prohibitive when a consignment of fruit has to be moved and the C.P.R. is reported to have as much as it can handle.

Lemons have been arriving more plentifully than for some time past. They are of good quality and are bringing a good figure. The price of 300's is firm but in the 360 class they may be cheaper and may have a weakening effect on the others. This latter is really not expected although it is a possibility.

Oranges are firm and are quoted at higher prices. Lemons are bringing more money in the United States than on this side of the line. Watermelons and peaches have been showing an amount of waste of late that has been discouraging. A day's delay with fruit of this kind means dollars, hence the dealers do not feel disposed to take chances of that kind. Bananas have arrived just about ripe, others have been in good condition. The fruitmen are not at all pleased with the first week of the railway trouble. The season is just at its height and fruit dealers are not the class of men who relish business unless it is just about "hitting the high spots".

Raspberries have dropped in price, as have also blueberries. Receipts are fairly liberal, but there is room for much improvement. Pears and peaches are a little cheaper but the rest of the market is remaining firm at former figures.

Vegetables—Home grown vegetables are becoming cheaper under increased production. Beans, cabbage, cucumbers, tomatoes and a few others are easier and enjoying good business. Regarding the potato market there seems to be an unsettled feeling depending upon the extent of the new crop. The receipts of the latter have begun to come in although in limited quantities. The general feeling is that the crop is going to be up to the average but in some districts the reports are unfavorable. The old stock is going a-begging for buyers and farmers are actually giving it away.

Fish—There have been no changes in the fish market during the past week. Newspapers have reported advances in fish as the result of the failure of the delivery, but the wholesale people do not bear them out. Halibut, white fish and trout remain the best sellers.

SELLS ALL YEAR ROUND

Knox Gelatine is a steady, all-year-round, "never stop" seller. There are two reasons : first, we do the steady, all-year-round, "never stop" kind of advertising ; second, Knox Gelatine is so satisfactory that people who buy it once always buy it. Knox Gelatine makes a pint to a quart more gelatine to the package than any other. We'll refund the purchase price if it fails to please your customers for any reason. Push Knox Gelatine for these reasons and because it sells at 15 cents a package, paying you a good profit.

Dear Sir:

Would you please send us by Express, one dozen Brand's Essence of Beef in tin, same as we had before.

There is a growing demand for it. Two new customers are waiting for this lot to arrive.

The case of one man with the worst type of Anaemia has been a great advertiser. It has been a great thing for him, and all his friends are talking about it, so it has a good start now.

You will find enclosed Express Order in payment of last lot.

Your kind attention will oblige,

Simplicity No Waste of Time No Waste of Money with the Keith System Protection

Why? Because—

1. One simple writing does all the work—takes the order in duplicate or triplicate, gives customer itemized bill of purchase, showing total amount owing to date, and posts the account up-to-the-minute—no further work—no further worry.

2. The slips being numbered in duplicate or triplicate from 1 to 50 in each book, and the past account being carried forward with each order, protects you against forgotten charges, disputes, and the losing or manipulation of slips.

3. It protects your records against fire. No risk to run —customers claim it pays for itself in a few months only.

Handsome Interior View of O. Carignon & Fils' Grocery Store, at Three Rivers, Quebec.

Where System Reduces Expense of Retail Grocers

A Business Turnover of $150,000, With Only Nine Employes, Three of Whom are Delivery Men—Latest Fixtures and Store Equipment Lessens the Cost of Service—Make Turnover Almost Every Month—A Fine Example of a Well-built and Attractive Store.

Three Rivers, Que., Aug. 4.—Selling at retail by sample; making sales over the telephone; eliminating the wooden counter; concentrating and systematizing stock storage—these are dreams of the future for many grocers.

Yet they are actualities, simple everyday facts, in the store of O. Carignon & Fils, Three Rivers, Que.

When the disastrous fire of two years ago wiped out the business section of Three Rivers the former store of this firm was a total loss. Instead of being discouraged, the owners took advantage of the situation to build what they considered to be the finest block in the city. This block consisted of four stores, one of which is devoted to jewelry, a second to crockery and china, a third to boots and shoes, and last, but by no means least, the store occupied by the owners, the Brothers Carignan. These two young men, P. Lucien and Emile D., are sons of the original proprietor, O. Carignan.

An Old-established Business.

O. Carignan started a grocery store in Three Rivers as long ago as 1865. He was successful, both in business and in gaining the friendship of his associates. This popularity resulted in his election to Parliament at Ottawa.

In 1891 the older son, Lucien, was taken into partnership, and in 1895 Emile also was taken in. Since that date the management has been almost entirely in their hands.

The new store consists of one main floor, a four-storey storehouse, and a roomy barn and stable. The main store, of which the accompanying cut gives some idea, is one of the most beautiful interiors in any Canadian grocery. The floor is of blue and white mosaic. The woodwork is Flemish oak throughout, which gives a rich tone to the entire store. Even the spice, etc., receptacles are finished in the same way. Mirrors are scattered between the tiers of shelving. The show cases are handsome pieces of furniture, some of them being equipped with a refrigerating compartment. This enables butter and cheese to be displayed without any danger of deterioration.

Even the ceilings are beautifully decorated, and the whole effect is one of artistic and inviting cleanliness.

Store Kept Cool in Summer.

Electric fans keep the interior always cool, even in the hottest summer weather, and the presence of ice in the show cases undoubtedly helps considerably in this direction.

As bases for all the show cases, onyx slabs are used, and this stone is used in many places throughout the store. The counters are polished red granite, and add greatly to the general effect.

The receptacles for groceries are the latest improved drops, with a glass front sample compartment. Throughout the store a generous use of mosquito netting keeps the goods free from flies and similar summer pests.

Even the two large central electric chandeliers add to the artistic appearance. They are of unique design and set off the whole store when lighted.

Modern Fixtures Installed.

As to store equipment, it is as modern and complete as money can buy. No effort has been spared to have every modern business aid available, and it is a pleasure to the employes, as well as the customers, to see the economy of labor in every department.

As to the stock distribution in the store, the same systematic work shows. In front is the confectionery and biscuit section, with display shelves of staple groceries on either side. The biscuit receptacle system is complete, and displays the biscuits, etc., to the best advantage. Liquors and tobaccos occupy the back section, also having shelves of staples behind them.

Back of the store proper is the office. This is raised a few feet above the store level, thus enabling a directing eye to be kept on operations in front without leaving the office.

Parcel Wrappers Save Time.

Still further back is the shipping department. Here all packages are done up, whether for delivery by wagon or to a customer in the store. In this way the work is systematized so that all the clerks in front have to do is to find out the wants of the customer and communicate them to the wrapping section. In this way there is a great economy of time and help, as an expert wrapper, with nothing else to do, can fill a great many orders in the course of a day. Also the clerks can wait on almost double the number of customers. For this reason no one ever sees the rush and bustle so prevalent in retail grocery stores. In fact, it seems hard to realize that so much business can be, and is, done in the course of a day's business, and yet have so little noise and bustle.

Give Fine Telephone Service.

The telephone orders now form the bulk of their trade. This has been encouraged by every possible means. Special clerks are assigned to answer the three phones, and special attention is paid to the filling and delivering of these orders. Often fully three-fourths of the day's business is done in this way. When you see a grocer whose customers feel they can depend on a phone order receiving just as much attention, or even more, than if they came to the store themselves, it speaks louder than words as to what kind of a business he is conducting.

Turnover Nearly Every Month.

O. Carignan & Fils last year did a business of over $150,000, with almost a monthly stock turnover. Remember, too, that this was all handled by the two members of the firm and but nine employes, three of which drove delivery wagons, thus showing how economically a systematic grocery business can be conducted.

Among the later improvements added are new stables, complete in every way, a new shed for their three wagons, an elevator in the store room, large enough to drive a wagon on, and thus simplifying unloading, silent salesmen of the newest type, and lastly, but far from least, the four-storey store room itself.

The storeroom is a fine fireproof building, designed to give systematic and sanitary housing to any and every kind of goods necessary to the retail grocer. Even a bonded warehouse for liquors has been added. Taken in connection with the fine concrete cellars, the storing accommodation is as complete as could well be possible. System shows in everything. The size of the various rooms, their position, lighting, etc., all go to show with what care the plans were drawn up.

Taken as a whole, the store is both a delight to the eye and to the man who believes in the future of the grocery business. Taking the size of the city—for Three Rivers has only about 14,000 people—the amount of business done is astonishing, and only goes to show that people do appreciate the man who does all in his power to serve the right goods in the right way and delivers at the right time.

Victoria Grocers Enjoy their Annual Picnic

Grocers, Wholesale and Retail, of a Pacific Coast City Spend a Delightful Day at Sidney—Not the Slightest Hitch Occurred to Mar a Thoroughly Delightful Day—Committee Provided a Merry Whirl of Amusement—There was Something Doing all the Time and Everybody Co-operated—A Resume of the Day's Events.

Victoria, B.C., August 2.—Last year's outing to Sidney proved such a success that the grocers, at their preliminary meeting, unanimously decided to again visit that charming spot. Energetic committees, with A. Brockhurst, president, held many meetings arranging the details of the outing, which proved the most successful in many years.. The weather was all that could be desired, a sea breeze tempering the steady heat with delightful effect. All the arrangements at the picnic grounds were complete and were thoroughly appreciated, plenty of hot and cold water was supplied free to those who wanted it.

Practically two thousand railway tickets were sold; a large number of Victoria citizens motored and drove to the grounds, while the residents of Sidney and neighborhood attended en masse. No accident occurred, and nothing but praise for the efficient work of the committee was heard.

The Bicycle Race.

Only those who went out by the 8 o'clock train were in time to see the finish of the bicycle race, Victoria to Sidney. It was won by Tommy Peden, last year's winner of the same event, in 62 minutes, 2½ minutes ahead of the second, Douglas North, and five minutes later, Johnny Peden, a younger brother of Tommy's.

By again winning the race, Tommy becomes the possessor of the $20 cup presented by the merchants of Sidney. The second prize was a $10 gold medal, presented by D. H. Roos & Co., grocers.

A baseball game was then played between teams representing the wholesale and retail grocers, which was won by the former.

The retail grocers came back strong in the afternoon and won the tug-of-war, having altogether too much pull for the wholesale men. There were eight men to each team, the personnel of which were as follows:

Wholesalers — Peden (captain), R. Gordon, Cruikshanks, Hueston, H. Hurst, Sherwood, Shanks and Wilson.

Retailers—W. A. Smith (captain), H. O. Kirkham, A. Poole, E. B. Jones, Jeffree, Slater, Hansow and Liddle.

The Baby Show.

The baby show was a feature that was in a class all by itself. R. Toneri, J. D. Jay and W. H. Smith took their lives into their hands when they consented to act as judges. However, their worst fears were not realized, and they have now cast off the vigilance they assumed after announcing their decisions. Mrs. Dan Peden was the proud mother of the baby girl to whom first honors were given, and the baby boy was the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Cudlip.

Among the races that should be chronicled are the following:

Fat men's race for grocers—1, Jeffree; 2, E. P. Jones; 3, W. A. Smith.

220 yards, retail grocery clerks—1, Blake; 2, Wilson; 3, Strachen.

Travelers, 100 yards—1, Shanks; 2, Gray; 3, Stan. Okell.

Retail grocers' drivers race—1, A. Kersey; 2, Medwa; 3, Cowan.

100 yards, employers and managers of retail grocers—1, A. Pool; 2, Bayley; 3, H. O. Kirkham.

100 yards, wholesale grocers' emp'oyers—1, Robt. Brentchley; 2, W. Peden; 3, Gibbs.

The afternoon ball game between the Sidney nine and the Capitals, of Victoria, went eleven innings, with a win counting for the former team.

A Chinese Race.

On resuming the sports after lunch, a race between Chinamen was suggested, as quite a number were present. Five dollars, and three, were named as first and second prizes, but "John," with his usual habit, tried to raise the figure. Eventually, when convinced that that would be the amount, and satisfied that they would "catch'em money quick when finishee little run," a half-dozen peeled off their coats and boots, "all samee white man," tied up their pig tails, and toed the line for 100 yards' run.

There was much chatter and some trouble to get a proper start. They ran fairly well, evidently doing their best. An effort to learn the winners, and hold them still for a photo, did not meet with success; they broke away, and fled as though the camera had been a gun.

Only two entered the contest for the "most comical and best sustained character on the grounds." Mrs. Medina, who represented an ancient-looking colored lady, in torn and shattered garments, won the first prize of $20.

The tombola was a feature in which much interest was taken. The drawing took place at 5.30, under the direction of the committee, 375 prizes being drawn for, ranging from $25 dinner sets, sacks of flour, tea, coffee, wines and spirits, hams and sides of bacon, "big horn" shirts, to bottles of mucilage.

Well-deserved thanks are due T. Lea, manager of the Saunders Grocery Co., for undertaking to receive and distribute these articles.

A goodly number remained for the dance, which was given in the large hall in the Sidney park. The last train landed them in Victoria about midnight, some tired, but all enthusiastic over the good time they had had.

The Committee in Charge.

Those who were responsible for the successful outing were the following:

President, A. Brockhurst; vice-president, J. D. Jay; secretary, S. H. Carteret; treasurer, R. Toneri; judges, R. Brenchley, T. Redding, H. O. Kirkham, J. P. Young, A. Pool, P. Cudlip; officials, A. Peden, starter; H. McKelvie, announcer.

Committee in Charge of the Victoria, B. C., Grocers Picnic and the Judges —Pres. A. Brockhurst is No. 6 From the Left in the Top Row.

FARRINGTON PHILOSOPHY.

Never yield to the temptation to sell a customer poor goods for the sake of the large immediate profit, unless you are running one of the here-to-day-and-gone-to-morrow kind of stores.

It is very important that the clerks appear neat and cleanly while on duty, but it is not so important that they can be allowed to complete their toilets while on duty.

If you haven't been in business long enough to see children grow up to be of customer age, you will have to take my word for it that they soon do it; and on that account, if on no other, they should be treated right.

When a clerk makes a blunder, go over the circumstances carefully in your own mind and see if there is not some link lacking in your protective system against mistakes.

DEATH OF ANDREW GUNN.

Expired Suddenly in a Train Returning From Port Dover.

Toronto, Aug. 4.—Andrew Gunn, president of Gunns, Ltd., died suddenly on Monday morning on the train coming from Port Dover where he had been spending the week-end.

He was born at Beaverton, 52 years ago.

He lived for some time at Woodville, being engaged in the drug business there. Some twenty-three years ago he removed to Toronto, becoming junior partner in the packing firm of D. Gunn, Flavelle & Co., which subsequently, on J. W. Flavelle leaving to become managing director of the Wm. Davies Co., became known as Gunns, Limited. After the death of his brother, Donald Gunn, the president, through an accident last December, he stepped from the vice-presidency to the head position.

John Gunn, Montreal, vice-president of Gunns, Limited, and director and secretary-Treasurer of Gunn, Langlois & Co., Limited, of that city, of which the late Mr. Gunn was vice-president, is a nephew.

Another Drummers' Snack Outing Belongs to Past

Pretty Oakville the Scene of the Big Attraction — Good-Fellowship and Fun Abounds as Usual—Travelers at Home Whether on the Road, the Stage or the Athletic Field—A Few of the Many Amusing Incidents Chronicled—Back to Oakville in 1911.

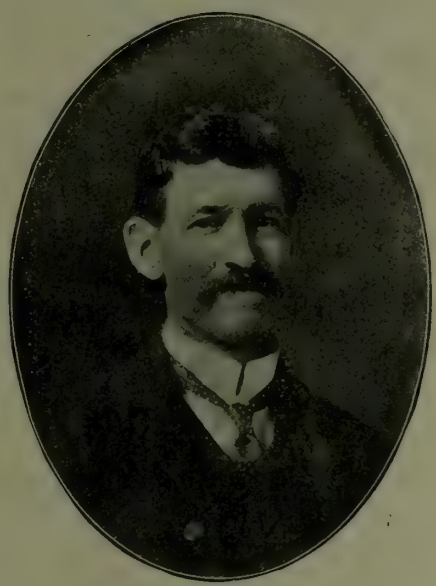
Staff Correspondence.

Oakville, Ont., Aug. 3.—"Live, love, laugh and do things worth while" is evidently the motto of the Drummers' Snack Club when they hold their annual outings.

This year Oakville was their Mecca, and men of the grip from Hamilton, Toronto and points in central and western Ontario joined hands again at this pretty spot and made it their home for a night and a day. This mid-summer pilgrimage was first born several years ago at Alton; it has now grown to be a sturdy youth of eighteen summers and more popular than ever. It will soon be old enough to vote.

For the man on the outside to realize just what the Drummers' Snack Club outing really is, he will have to attend one. At it events follow in such quick succession that it is impossible to describe them all—and these are all great events, too. To the uninitiated it is much like the small boy attending the big circus for the first time—he has considerable difficulty watching the three rings at the one time, and yet he wants to "take in" everything.

So with the Drummers' Snack. The Goddess of Pleasure spread her Epicurean wings over the happy throng on the first night and all went merry as a marriage bell. There was something new every minute, and an individual would necessarily have to be a whole crowd in himself—if that were possible—to properly assimilate what occurred and what was said.



The Snack was new for Oakville. Last year Erin was the destination, and prior to that it was Alton—the home of the founder, Wm. Algie. So that Oakville citizens scarcely knew what was coming, because there is no other known outing exactly like that of the Snack. Some were at first dubious; but when they discovered that Jas. L. Hewson, J. C. Ford, Friend Dean and the Chief of Police sanctioned it, they entered into the fun with the rest, and after the last scene was enacted on Saturday evening last pronounced the knights of the grip all good fellows who enjoyed clean, fair and square and orderly sport.

Their Smiles Were Warm.

The weather looked doubtful for a time on Friday afternoon, but Providence was kind, and when the clouds drifted away, after a nice shower, the smiles of the officials of the Snack almost split the paint on the Agricultural Hall in the Oakville exhibition grounds, where the events all happened.

The then president, Bay Hill, of Hamilton, was an early bird on the scene; so was Jack Wildfong, the new president, from Toronto. In fact, there were drummers here almost all week erecting a stage, the footlings, theatre wings and pews—and a desk or table or manger, or whatever you care to call it, in the Cyclone Cellar. This was once the office of the secretary of the Agricultural Society, but was made really useful by the advance guard of the Snack for themselves later on, and those who followed.

Nobody thinks of troubles, or cares, or sales that might have been, at this outing. Troubles, of course, that do not happen worry one more than those which do, so the drummers and their friends forget the past and live within the present. Hundreds of people from the village and from the countryside dropped in to see the fun. Those who heard the concert came again the next day because the service was good. Any idiot can be waited on, but it takes intelligence and skill to serve, and the men on the road are skillful when it comes to serving out amusements.

BAY HILL, Hamilton,
Past President of the Drummers' Snack,
Actor, Inventor, Orator,
Senator, Etc.

The Big Concert Opens.

The first item of importance was the concert. For this Michael Morrison again sold tickets, and Sol Walters, with a window-blind on his lapel, along with Billy Meen, robbed you of them half a minute later.

The Agricultural Hall has a balcony. Billy Cross wanted to know if that was where the folks were fed hay, but Robt. Algie enlightened him on this point. When the concert began everybody else saw that the bands were stationed there.

"Senator" Bay Hill, traveler, orator, inventor, actor, et al, turned on the switch. He appeared in the regulation garb—white trousers, black tie, etc.—and in a powerful address told the thousand or more people assembled that the time had arrived when things must happen. He was given as big an ovation as a ball player who makes a home run or a one-hand catch that ordinarily needs a step-ladder.

The object of the club was the promotion of good fellowship among its members; the outing permitted the drummers to get away for a night and a day from the hum-drum of business cares, to forget competitive business worries and to be boys once again. He complimented Oakville citizens for the interest they had shown and the merchants who had decorated their stores so nicely.

Bay Hill then retired from the stage to make room for the majestic figure of Colonel Stoneman who announced the various items on the program. The "Senator," said the Colonel, could do this work better than he, but later in the course of events it was made evident that Bay wanted to show the boys his prowess as an actor.

"Hello, you Grandpa!" greeted the Colonel, as he climbed behind the footlights. His duty, he said, was to make those who were slated to appear to come to time.

The concert in general was really a remarkable one. Many Oakville folk say they never attended better. There was professional talent there and talent from the ranks of the commercial men which an outsider would swear to be professional. Everything was good, which proves that the Snack does things worth while.

Mayor of Hamilton Talks.

The Oakville Citizens' brass band received many complimentary bouquets from the musically inclined from a distance. The Oddfellows brass band was here from Hamilton. It too was greatly appreciated but, as Wallace Weese, one of its representatives, remarked at the annual meeting it didn't get enough to do. Mayor McLaren, of Hamilton, related some reminiscenses of bygone days with the scene of the plots at Oakville, but he admitted that so far as oratory was concerned he was a has-been compared with Col. Stoneman, "Senator" Hill or Michael Malone.

"The wedding of Sandy McNab," "My Bonnie Daisy" and other Harry Lauder songs were sung by Harry M.

Bennett and fell on attentive ears—encores in every case.

Billy Dore bears a reputation as an imitator and in "The Upheaval of Chinatown," he acted the part—to get your laundry you must have check-e, as Bill Johnson discovered. Dore's confreres were Messrs. Wilson, Noble and Hatch.

Dore's theatrical tendencies were further emulated in his imitation songs,

JUDGE JACK WILDFONG,

The New President Who Was a Busy Man at the Famous Outing.

"I'm the softest of the family," and "The boy who stuttered and the girl who lisped."

Margaret Park Wilson, a Toronto contralto was also a favorite. Her solos were in unison with the hearts of the audience and she was recalled on both occasions.

Talent Among the Drummers.

Then followed a funny turn by Harry Ekstein, J. B. Mundie and W. Pringle entitled—so the program said—"The Mocking Bird, Thrush and Bull Frog," but nobody would have thought it. Harry Ekstein would have made an ideal daughter for Dr. Crippen had the famous doctor wanted a daughter instead of a son on his Atlantic voyage—or had he been a woman.

Bert Harvey is, of course, always a shining light at the Snack concerts. He is an honorary member. Among his numbers were "What's the matter with Heinz," "Yip-I-Addie-I-Aye," or it sounded like that, and a humorous descriptive song about the boarding-house fare, all of which captured the audience.

Jack Wildfong, who produced such a hit at Erin a year ago in the role of the school-master "put on" a monologue stunt "The Judge" which was very clever. Col. Denison and a docket of prisoners couldn't have been more original and entertaining.

Unlike Jeffries, He Came Back.

A silvery solo by M. B. Tufford, the reappearance of Harry Bennett and a selection by the Oddfellows' band of Hamilton, brought the audience to the "big fight." This was a burlesque between a "negro" named Geo. Smye, alias Jack Johnson, and an "Irishman" one Charley Smye, both from the Ambitious City. Each wore grotesque costumes and had a full complement of seconds the most conspicuous of whom were Sol. Walters and Jack Wildfong.

Tex. Rickard (Eddie Dore) announced the great event to the thousands who sat before the grandstand and W. J. Robson handled the watch and bell.

The moment the fight began the vast audience rose like a single man and held its breath. The suspense was intense. The dark man had but few admirers, outside of his seconds. The son of Erin's sod had many. The former was tall and Patrick, his antipodes in height but a game fighter.

"Would he 'come back?'" was on the lips of every supporter of the favorite.

The telegraphic despatches sent out to the expecting world were: "They rush—quickly break away; Jack makes mighty swing with right for head but opponent gauges height correctly and air fanned.

"This is mode of champion; finally he lands one that takes effect and Irishman falls;—1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9—but he is on feet again, and so endeth first round. Seconds work fast to revive him. Sol. Walters, human siphon, does trick," and so on read the despatches.

To make a long story short, Pat did 'come back,' unlike J. J. J. In the third the 'negro' was counted out and—well the rafters and roof spread out like elastic before the deafening cheers. A stiff punch over the solar plexus ended the suspense and there was nothing too good for the Irish. The defeated pugilist entered a protest against the timekeeper whom he declared was a tenth of a second too rapid in his counting-out calculations.

Romeo and Juliet in burlesque was still another of the funny stunts. For it M. B. Tufford, Harry Ekstein, Mr. Nelligan and M. R. Hill were responsible. No. 2 took the feminine role and played it so cleverly that all the Oakville boys moved up to the front seats to "get onto those eyes." They really looked disconsolate when "she" removed the wig. Past President Bay Hill, as every one knows, is ordinarily funny, but multiply that by a hundred and you have him in this 'stunt.'

Brilliant Fire-Works.

With the bands playing "God Save the King," the assemblage dispersed near the midnight hour. But the end was not yet. The drummers had something more up their sleeves and next came the fireworks outside the Agricultural building. When the last sky-rocket had died away in the refreshing night air it was bed time—for some. Others of course, are accustomed to retire several hours sooner and still others later.

The good folk at Oakville kindly threw open their doors for the tired drummers and sweet slumbers soon crept over the majority of the visitors.

But on occasions of this nature some have no interest in sleep and there were pyjamas parades to the lake shore, midnight oratory, disturbed slumbers and cold spots on bodies—for the dew was falling fast. But it was all in the fun and everything was taken in the proper spirit. Finally, the night-hawks, too, retired and the Chief of Police slept.

SATURDAY'S OCCURRENCES.

The Annual Meeting.

When the morning of the sixth day arrived, Oakville and its visitors were early astir. It was the big day of the Snack because it included the annual meeting, two ball games, a score of sports and the hundred incidentals which always happen whether billed or not.

After the breaking of the fast came the first order of business—the annual meeting with President M. R. Hill in the chair.

There were letters of regret read by Secretary Robt. Algie from sorrowing members who were not able to attend.

COL. STONEMAN AND COL. COCHRANE,

Who Were Wrecked off the Coast of Oakville 50 Years Ago.

Among these were Billy Colville, J. W. Charles, S. Males, Bill Algie, P. McIntosh, J. M. Gibson, Pres. C. T. A., and R. H. Asher. It was a pleasant surprize, however, when sometime later Bob Asher appeared on the scene in an automobile with his family. He was more than a thousand miles away at the time he wrote the letter, but what is that to a Drummer?

A suggestion by Col. Stoneman that such letters as were read from absentees be filed in a scrap book by the secretary for future reference was adopted.

The new officers are:

President—J. H. Wildfong, Toronto.

Vice-President—Geo. Smye, Hamilton.

Sec.-Treasurer—Robt. Algie, Toronto.

Hamilton Sec.—Chas. Smye.

Toronto Sec.—Wm. Meen.

Oakville Sec.—Jas. L. Hewson.

Hamilton Executive — W. Pringle, Wm. Dore, P. A. Somerville, H. Ekstein, Chas. Wilson, R. E. Smith, Col. John Stoneman, M. B. Tufford, S. Male. J. Wilder.

Toronto Executive—W. H. Cross, Sol. Walters, W. J. Mills, Bert Groskurth, W. Madill, G. Campbell, Ed. Colwell, Walter Scott, Chas. Silver, Thos. Glouster.

Executive at Large—W. Irwin, Owen Sound; Mike Matthews, Barrie; C. C. Weese, Lindsay.

Back to Oakville in 1911.

The Drummers' Snack decided on a new departure—they are to have a constitution and by-laws to be governed by. The committee to look after this is composed of President Wildfong, Vice-Pres. Geo. Smye, M. Malone, Chas. Smye, P. McIntosh, Chas Silver, R. Algie, W. R. Madill and P. A. Somerville.

At the annual meeting it was unanimously decided to make Oakville the stamping ground again for 1911.

Ellis Trophy Sticks to Hamilton.

The P. W. Ellis Trophy Cup, emblematic of the baseball championship between the travelers of Hamilton and Toronto, remains in the former city for another year. The game was the feature event of Saturday morning and was snappy and sharply contested as may be judged from the score, 7 to 5.

It was a case of too much "Hanna" for the Toronto boys. Billie Dore who "Joe Kelleyed" the Hamilton nine found his team incomplete, and called in some Oakville boys to fill the vacancies. They proved to be a good battery and while they played the field for several innings they finished the game for Hamilton. It was a hard game to lose. Toronto lead until the fourth innings when Hamilton put over five runs, while Toronto was unable to do anything with Roy Hanna's "left-paw" delivery. Wiley pitched good ball for the losing side and with better support would have won his game. Algie, Tommy Glouster, Wiley and Baylis were reliable, but there were a few gaps that proved fatal.

Sol Walters made a new record at the bat, being responsible for one run. His hitting was around 1,500, according to the official scorer.

Fair Eyes on Bradshaw.

Bradshaw, Dore and Kirkpatrick played a strong game for the cup holders. The latter had two runs to his credit and all three did noble stick work. Bradshaw, of course, could not afford to play loosely with four or five pairs of feminine eyes fixed upon him. Then there was "Hanna," who showed no mercy to the Toronto boys. After all, the gentler sex had a bigger finger in the pie than was noticed at the time.

The teams faced each other as follows:

HAMILTON.—W. Dore, 1st b.; C. Kirkpatrick, p and 2nd b; Bradshaw, c and rf; H. Hanna, rf and c; Mills, cf; F. Tizzard, ss; Robinson, lf; A. Tizzard 3rd b; R. Hanna, 2b and p.

TORONTO.—Wiley, p; Algie, c; T. Glouster, 1st b; McKenzie, 2nd b; Baylis, lf; Walters, rf; Trebell, 3rd b; Groskurth, cf; Cawthra, ss.

Procession to Beat Barnum's.

The fun stopped for dinner and then came the great calithumpian parade

SOL WALTERS AND HARRY EKSTEIN.

And Somebody Else Unknown to the Outside World, in the Big Procession.

through Oakville streets. To minutely describe this event is one of the few impossibilities. The Drummers augmented by Oakville citizens and a score of small boys constituted the nucleus. But when these got inside the carnival costumes they would have fooled even Inspector Dew or Sherlock Holmes.

Everybody in Oakville must have been lining the line of march to see the procession pass, headed by Bay Hill and Robt. Algie in civilian dress. Close behind them were two real Colonels—Col. Stoneman and Col. Cochrane, about whom a thrilling and interesting tale is related. A half century ago they were companions together in Hamilton. In fact they roomed and slept together for 5 years. They drifted across the border about that time, but later Col. Stoneman returned. At Oakville on Friday night they were bed-fellows again for the first time in 50 years. Fifty years ago they were wrecked in a rowboat off the coast of Oakville while returning from Toronto, where they had been attending a visit from the British Royal Family. They were like two old lovers who had long been separated—so they walked together in the procession.

The narrowness of the streets hampered the movements of Sol Walters, the beef trust, and it was with difficulty that he rounded the corners. M. B. Tufford was in a similar situation, only his outside clothing was stuffed with bedticks, quilts, pillows, cushions, etc. Had he fallen or been shoved over he never could have said: "I took up my bed and walked."

Billy Cross preferred to be effeminate and consequently he also had the Oakville boys in hot pursuit—his one red stocking and the other green were decidedly attractive, but contrary to the new mode of the Paris belles, he did not wear his watch on his ankle, although it was graceful enough.

Then there were kings and queens, princes and princesses, Shakespeares, Jack Johnstons, Red Indians and whatnots. Such a parade Oakville never saw before. Oakville band accompanied it and "did itself proud."

Wildfong Cup Game.

To tell or not to tell—the tale of that afternoon game! Whether it would be better to duly report it, setting forth the gallant efforts of George Smye and his pards, and the equally gallant, though vain attempt of Billy Meen and his stalwarts, or to quietly forget it as an unpleasant dream, casting the official record into—but that's the rub. The score card—those figures, 28—5, stand out too prominently to forget, and though charity demands a touching obituary for the vanquished, in the same measure the victors should receive the spoils. And anyway it was just for fun. It was a burlesque on the great summer sport, and as such it was a big success. Even the score may be passed over as being in keeping with the general tone of the game, therefore, on with the dance.

In the first place George Smye and W. Meen chose the two sides, and apparently the genial secretary picked a bunch of ripe ones even though Sol. Walters, Mike Malone and C. C. Weese were among the number. It would take an Aristides or a Hamilton or Toronto lawyer to explain why the score should have been so wide.

It would be a sweeping statement to say that individually there was such a great difference in the men. It was simply a case of not getting away with the barrier. Any one of the vanquished will probably assert that had it gone nine innings there would have been a different tale. And the gods of baseball were unkind. Here was every one of the ten men on the defeated side working his head off, but their best efforts could not stem the avalanche of runs. And when at bat, they seemed to be off color to a man, even if the ball might have passed as a baby balloon.

George Ade Needed.

It was a great victory and from a humorous standpoint it was too bad that George Ade was not there to adequately describe it. And yet it is a question whether he could have done justice to Mike Malone's burying his face in the sand behind home plate in an effort to catch a pop foul, or to tell of the disguest that was written all over Sol Walter's face at the exhibition his side gave of how the game is played when luck is against you; likewise to narrate the bravery of Billy Meen who suffered a finger almost broken in a heroic effort to nail a hot liner.

Kirkpatrick was boss of the game as umpire, and they all dropped their tails when he shouted a decision. Back talk did not budge him and everybody was treated alike. The teams were composed as follows, although their positions are not stated for the reason that with the exception of the batteries everyone was playing infield until Bert Harvey, Harry Ekstein, Geo. Smye, C. C. Weese, or a few of the other sluggers threatened to put the pudding out of the lot:

Losers—W. Meen, p; M. Malone, c; W. H. Cross, Lane, W. Scott, C. C. Weese, Sol Walters, O. Wilder, W. R. Madill, W. H. Pringle, (5).

Winners—George Smye, p; Bert Harvey, c; W. Mills, H. Ekstein. J. B. Mundie, A. S. Newlands, P. Somerville, N. A. Gowdy, C. A. E. Colwell, (28).

Was it to Forget the Past?

Tommy Glouster was the busiest man on the grounds, when the races opened. A Hamilton Club member was mean enough to say that he was keeping busy in order to forget the past—the morning ball game. But whether or no his megaphone worked over time in getting the races to-gether. Jack Wildfong was starter. His toy pistol refused to work as often as it did so that he could scarcely depend on it.

G. W. Moore, a director of the C. T. A. and J. C. Ford, Oakville, superintended the finishes. They had many voluntary assistants when the ladies' races were on, and particularly when 7 or 10 prizes were offered—never mind the reason. There were soap, baking powder and tea races, a baby show, a broom ball contest, kicking the football —all for the ladies. The grass at times is slippery you know, and many dresses and stockings and—wore green tints before the sun went down.

Hamilton Wins Tug-of-War.

The big men with the pull were lined up in the tug-of-war, Hamilton vs. Toronto. At the outset it looked like a victory for the latter, but Geo. Smye and his men added a little more steam and pulled on out against such lightweights as C. C. Weese, Sol Walters, Bert Harvey, Alex Minto, etc. Tommy Glouster donoted the prizes.

The walking sprint for travelers was won by H. H. David with V. F. Bradshaw a close second. It was whispered that next day they couldn't walk—the cords under the knees may have been giving them some trouble.

Great Fat Man's Race.

In the fat man's race there certainly was some "blowing" both at the start and the finish—only of a different kind. W. Mills won, with Sol Walters a good second and T. L. Carruthers third.

The 'early call' race or boot race for travelers was won respectively by Fraser, Cross and Malone, and the 'three headed' by E. B. Graham, H. Ross and A. Moore. Bill Cross and his confreres were left at the post.

In the 220 yards dash for travelers the winners were Bert Groskurth, C. Kirkpatrick and Allan Moore.

The boxing in barrels contest in front of the grand stand was another of the funny happenings. It was between Toronto and Hamilton travelers and at the start the Hamilton boys had to go a-begging for Toronto boxers. Bert Groskurth broke the spell, but he walked right in and was shunted out. Michael Malone, Hamilton, won from Scott by a second. Both tumbled, but Mike was late—better to be late than early in that game. Kirkpatrick of Hamilton beat his man, but Johnston, Toronto, tumbled Graham over quite easily.

Fraser won the 100 yards for travelers with Bill Dore second.

There was a side show on the grounds but it was only for the women. They had to throw a ball through a hole in canvas about 10 feet away, and 1 in a score usually went through.

This Was a Quiet Game.

And still there was another 'game' on the grounds heretofore unmentioned. It was played apart from the crowd and near the centre of the Agricultural grounds. It consisted in an effort by a young man to hold a dainty parasol in such a manner as to conceal himself and another individual from the eyes of the prosaic throng. The latter, however, was no respecter of the artistic that day and later decided to run a race over that exact spot.

It was almost 6 of the clock when the fun subsided, after a day unmarred by rain or accident, with the possible exception of a few rents in some of the ladies' clothing.

STAGE AND FIELD SECRETS.

In the races, even the ladies at times discarded their 'corn cribs' and hustled along in stocking feet.

It is really wonderful what a little foresight will do—look at the Cyclone Cellar, it saved several lives.

Did anybody see Jack Wildfong being waited on at the table? His face must be smarting yet.

Dr. Crippen with all his false eyebrows, etc., must take a back seat when the big parade is considered.

One of the drummers was observed turning his socks inside out after one of the races. He was hot and was simply turning the hose on himself.

Many of the girls paid dearly for their whistles—torn dresses and green tinted in sliding to the tape.

Heard in the ball game, Walters to Smye:

"Come on, Mr. Matthewson, shoot 'em over."

"All right, Mr. Wagner, clout it." And once again the great Christy proved a puzzle.

Sol Walters was wearing a banner on the lapel of his coat on Friday night. Some one asked him why he didn't hang it up.

Harry Ekstein, Geo. Smye, Pringle and Mundie formed the rooting brigade in the moring ball game. This explains why Hamilton won.

A Toronto ball player was hit on the hip by a pitched ball — that was a 'base' hit and he went to first.

"Pop" Somerville was coaching his team at third, but when he encroached on second base territory he was chased off the grounds.

"I'm aiming for the thickest place," said Kirkpatrick when he made Sol Walters step back. Sol, nevertheless, made the first hit of the game. "An every day occurrence," he remarked.

Michael Morrison watched the gate this year instead of the Erin bridge. His lungs are just as good as ever.

Mike Malone introduced all the ladies present to his friends.

For a marvel behind the footlights, name Bay Hill.

Billy Meen delegated Bill Cross to the section of the Agricultural Hall where the first prize cabbage are always stored.

The two colonels slept together at Oakville for the first time in 50 years—quite unlike some who didn't go to bed at all.

A special desptach says that Jack Wildfong was positively not in the midnight parade; he simply saw the "tail" end of it.

A poor reputation for Geo. Smye—he he is a good fellow, but he can't fight.

Charley Smye was missed on Saturday—Jim Jeffries arrived to shake hands with him.

They say that 'misery loves company,' but not so with the Drummers' Snack.

"You don't know nothing," a little Oakville boy was heard to say to a companion. "You don't know what 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 is?" "It's a straight," came from one of the drummers who overheard the question.

Toronto ball tossers had a good pitcher in Wiley, and a good first baseman too—but let us try to forget the past.

C. C. Weese, of Lindsay, was again a prominent figure on the grounds—not a bit thinner.

Oakville citizens now understand the Snack Club better and 1911 will be a record-breaker.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

NEW PACK CANNED GOODS.

Prices for new pack canned goods are out for the coming season and are published in this week's issue. These prices apply to Ontario and Quebec and deserve the close attention of retailers.

For instance standard peas open at 95c a dozen for second grade and 97½c for first. Last year they opened at 75 to 77½ cents, making a difference of 20 cents. They, however, advanced to more than a dollar before new prices were named. Strawberries are 25c higher than the opening price of a year ago.

Grocers who pay 97½ cents for peas should be careful in setting the retail price. That is more than 8 cents each, and if sold for 3 for a quarter the profit will be practically nothing without considering cost of doing business.

Every retailer should figure out his exact cost and arrange his selling price to give a fair profit on his investment and something for his labor.

WHOLESALE PRICE FOR TWENTY YEARS.

A special report on wholesale prices—Canada between 1890 and 1909, has just been issued from the Department of Labor of the Dominion government.

It was prepared by R. H. Coates, B.A., Associate Editor of the Labor Gazette, and includes charts and tables showing the declines and advances of wholesale prices of practically every article of foodstuff, clothing, household requirements, drugs, lumber, etc., between and including the years above named.

Readers of The Grocer will be interested in knowing that in almost every case in which our paper quotes prices, these were used by the government.

The price quotations of The Canadian Grocer have such a reputation throughout Canada as being the standard that invariably governments and individuals come to us when past or present quotations are desired.

LOST MONEY IN OVERWEIGHT.

Safeguarding against leakages can be accomplished in more ways than one. There is one instance that is recalled of a grocer who engaged an apprentice—a boy of about 15 years just out of school. As might be expected he did not have a great deal to do at first, but when he had learned prices and was beginning to be useful he was allowed more latitude, but unfortunately he did not appreciate the responsibility that entailed.

The grocer had not impressed upon the boy certain fundamental principles which, young as he was, he would have recognized as important. For instance when weighing goods the beam always went down with a thump when the boy was serving customers. This is an actual case. The boy invariably gave overweight and people found it out and went to him with their orders.

A quiet lecture at the outset would have shown the boy the meaning of profit and loss. Carelessness in this respect manifested itself in other things he did, all of which meant little leakages from the proprietor's treasury.

PREPARE FOR PICKLING SEASON.

Pickling season is not yet here, but it is close enough to warrant the grocer's beginning to think about it. Nothing is going to be gained by waiting until the last moment. How would it be one of these days when business lulls to look over last year's business? Find out how much of each of the different kinds of spices you handled, and how many glass jars were sold.

The scientific grocer of to-day has his business so well in hand that he is able to do this. Then when you know exactly what you did last year you have a basis to work upon. Examine your present stocks. What condition are they in? It is simply a case of knowing your business.

Conditions will probably warrant your attempting a little more this year or possibly you intend to put forth an extra effort. In that case you will need more goods. Go at your business in this way. There is nothing problematical about it. In fact there is no doubt that the majority of grocers are following this plan or something akin to it. But to the others a word of counsel may be of some assistance. Business is business and the grocer who is going to make the most of his business is he who realizes what is necessary on his part and who is willing to act up to those demands.

FRUIT MUST BE CLEAN.

While the fruit season is now at its height, grocers who have added this department to their business should remember that cleanliness is a consideration that must not be overlooked. It is a more or less general custom to make a display in front of the show windows, a method which is undoubtedly of great benefit to business. At the same time the dust on the roadway is being continually disturbed, and of necessity it must settle on the fruit if unprotected. Flies also show a weakness for berries, cherries, etc., and likewise customers evince a revulsion toward fruit upon which a swarm of flies have settled.

Fine netting will prevent the latter trouble, and will also keep off dust to a certain extent. Customers will not be drawn to fruit which has deteriorated from bruises, over-ripeness or other like causes. Fruit is in greater demand than ever. Strengthen your fruit trade by maintaining a tempting appearance to your display.

BEGGING FOR ORDERS.

Here is a retailer's complaint against some travelers and if the facts are as he represents them, he is quite justified in his attack.

A traveler calls on him for an order, and, failing to sell him a bill of goods by lack of his ability as a salesman or because the merchant is fully stocked in his lines, goes a-begging for an order.

His customary methods are: "I'm away behind this week and would appreciate it very much if you could help me out a little," or "I'm a new man at this job and I want to make good with the firm," and sometimes, "Say, I wish you would give me an order for some thing, no matter how small, just to show the house that I called."

These and other lines of talks are utilized with the commercial man almost on his knees for an order.

In many instances the merchant is too warm hearted and yields by buying something he doesn't actually need. This serves in course of time to antagonize him against the house, and the merchant who ignores the appeal feels the same way by being canvassed in such a manner. Both the traveler and the house are adversely affected by this method of doing business.

An actual case is known to bear out the latter assertion.

If you take for your example nothing higher than yourself how can you hope to improve? You will not shoot any higher than you aim.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS.

Sugar—Second grades 10c higher.
Filberts—1c lower.
Canned Goods—Some of the new prices out.

Montreal, Aug. 5th.

The two second grades of granulated sugar are up ten cents. This change occurred late Saturday morning, and was due to the firm condition of the raw market.

The strike seems to have had a depressing effect on trade in general in Montreal, and as a result nearly all the jobbers say that there has been even less business than at this time last year while most of the other weeks this summer have showed an increase. This has been particularly true of the grocery business, both wholesale and retail. Fruit importers have suffered heavily through delays of their goods, and spoiled lots coming in on account of such delays. Now that it is all over business should be much better.

Camping trade has been good among local retailers, and several have taken up the packing of baskets for such expeditions suggested in The Grocer recently. They all report good success as far as they have gone.

EXTRA.

On Thursday the price of refined sugar was reduced 10 cents.

Sugar.—Both Beaver and Imperial lines of granulated, the second grades, are now quoted at $5, an advance of 10c over last week. This change took place last Saturday, just too late for the issue of last week. A firm market is the order of the day, although jobbers report that sales are much less than could be reasonably looked for at this time of year. However, the present state of the raw market certainly would seem to warrant any reasonable advance which should take place.

Reports from Cuba seem to indicate that there will not be any appreciable increase over last year's output, and if so there is apt to be a still further advance in the States, which usually influences conditions here to a certain extent.

Syrup and Molasses.—Possibly it is due to the high price of sugar at present, but at any rate sales of syrup have increased appreciably this week and seem to be going to do still better. Local jobbers report fine sales for this time of year, and in fairly large individual orders. Retailers likewise say that matters are much improved.

In molasses the call is only for small lots, and they are none too frequent. In fact the situation is almost exactly the opposite of the syrup. Prices in both lines are unchanged.

Coffee.—Firmness is still the prevailing tone of the coffee market, in spite of the fact that there is a general slackening in demand. Summer weather is not ideal for the coffee man, but as this is an annual slackening it is not a surprise. Stocks are low, particularly of Rio and Santos, but they are sufficient to meet all requirements.

Spices.—This week has marked a slight slackening in the demand for most spices. Gingers and cinnamon still hold their own pretty well, and in view of the satisfactory trade done for some weeks past spice manufacturers have no reason to be dissatisfied.

Dried Fruits.—Prunes furnish the only live proposition in the dried fruit market this week. They seem to continue in their former strong demand. There is also a fair inquiry for Valencia raisins.

Nuts.—Owing to rather too heavy local stocks of filberts, prices of these lines have sagged somewhat, and sales as a result are reported better. In view of the reported shortage of the new crop in Europe it does not look as if prices could continue at their present low level.

Trade in all kinds of nuts is brisk, and seems to be on the increase rather than otherwise. In fact summer trade this year is pronounced much better than last year.

Evaporated Apples.—Owing to low stocks there is little doing in evaporated apples. Everyone seems to be waiting for the new crop. A few fair sales are reported, but the grade of the goods is poor, and there seems to be practically none of the better grades on the market.

European inquiries continue to come in and a good trade could be done if the proper grade were forthcoming.

Beans and Peas.—There are few high grade peas left on the local market and these are being snapped up as soon as offered. Prices are still the same as last week.

In beans the weather seems to be too hot for any great demand. The few inquiries are for small lots to fill immediate requirements and even they are none too frequent.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—Some of the new canned goods prices are out. They are all indicative of a higher market for the coming season. Standard peas and raspberries are the only two which are lower than present prices, although they are higher than last year's opening prices. Two and a half cents is the general advance. The articles to advance are early June and extra sifted peas, and beans. Other prices are expected shortly, and the general impression is that they also will show an advance.

Meats are selling well, and some lines of fish, salmon and sardines being the best of these latter. Prices in these lines are unchanged.

WINNIPEG.—The prices for some of the new pack of canned goods have been announced and the others are expected at any time. The demand for the old lines continues good and with the new stocks on the market it should be even improved.

Beans, 2's	5 23	Raspberries	3 83

TORONTO. — Almost the complete list of new pack prices of one large canning concern was issued during the week and will, of course, be a subject for study by the trade. It is evident to the grocer even at a first glance that the prices are fairly high in most cases and are indeed about what was anticipated some time ago. For instance, a year ago standard peas opened at 77½ cents and went as high as $1.10. This year they have opened at 95 cents and it remains to be seen what the price will be. From this it will be plain that three for a quarter peas will not be a money-making proposition to the retailer this year and a new arrangement —if this one is in force—of selling to the consumer will likely be the result. However, that remains for future development.

The pack of peas, it is said, will be light and raspberries are none too promising. The old stocks, that is whatever is left of them, are cleaning out rapidly, and even now are practically done. Some new peas have been received, but they were of limited quantity. One jobber remarked that he would not be surprised to see the price of peas raised after the first orders had been filled.

Canned goods have secured such a place in general demand that they are bound to be valuable property before long, particularly in those lines in which there may be a short pack. Strawberries for instance were disappointing. Opinion in that respect seems to be unanimous. The crop itself did not come up to expectations and when it came to packing it there were other conditions that did not serve to improve matters.

The prices for canned salmon have also been forwarded and it may be said of salmon that it is good property. The prices appearing herewith are for single cases and it is to be understood that a reduction of 2½ cents will be made for five-case lots. The salmon run is still receiving consideration and the pack, it is stated, is not going to be more if it is up to the average. Better knowledge will be secured of this later when the end of the run is in sight.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—
Canned Goods—Open high.
Sugar—Advance in 2nd Grade.
Olives—Much firmer.

Toronto, Aug. 4, 1910.

A steady satisfactory business seems to be the general tenor of the statements heard throughout the grocery world here. Jobbers affirm that payments are good and that orders are being received in encouraging numbers. These conditions, they believe, are indicative of the general situation, for the retailer orders and pays for the most part only when he can afford to and he receives his money when the mechanic and the farmer are earning and spending it. It would appear that the jobber is the barometer of trade and business conditions. At any rate there is a feeling of satisfaction pervading the wholesale district. Conditions, of course, could be improved, but for the most part they are encouraging. The trade has been harrassed by difficulties which arose directly from the strike and the announcement of its termination was received with profound pleasure. It will be some time, however, before former conditions are fully resumed.

Attention is called particularly in this week's market in the canned goods' prices. They are really the feature of this week's report from the fact that trade is steady just now and is following well beaten paths.

Sugar—An advance of ten cents has been announced in second grade sugars. The Imperial and Beaver granulated are the only two brands affected. It is believed that this step on the part of the manufacturers has been due to the fact that they may have thought they were giving a quality of sugar for which they were not getting sufficient margin. Ther are no conditions in the primary market that would cause the advance. Jobbers state that these second grades were manufactured to meet the competition of beet sugar. But in the manufacture, raw material was, of course, necessary for the second grade and it might have been used for first grade and would have brought a higher price. This is given as a reason for the advance. The sugar market is steady with active buying still prevailing. Regarding the present visible supply, Willett & Grey have the following:—"Total stock of Europe and America, 1,852,886 tons against 1,911,982 tons last year at the same uneven dates. The decrease of stock is 59,096 tons, against a decrease of 52,313 last week. Total stocks and afloats together show a visible supply of 2,033,886 tons, against 2,126,982 tons last year, or a decrease of 93,096 tons."

Dried Fruits — Currants have been moving freely, but otherwise the market has been rather quiet. Raisins are firm. The reports in regard to futures have not changed their color and higher prices are still looked for.

A correspondent in Denia, Spain, says: "Owing to the hot weather prevailing in this raisin district, the fruit will not ripen as it ought, therefore the great part of grape will not be turned to raisin, and as we are so near to the crop, that even if it were to rain, would not be useful, thus making the prices to be high."

majority of these purchases are said to have been necessitated by urgent requirements.

Nuts—The feeling of firmness which has characterized this market still obtains. Walnuts and filberts are held firmly with, however, no change in prices.

WEST INDIA FISH TRADE.

Merchants in the West Indies, according to the trade commissioner, E. H. S. Flood, like Newfoundland fish. The reason is they are well packed and salted, and the standard weight is well maintained. The fish trade of the West Indies, he says, has been carried on for many years on a consignment basis, and the custom is now so well established that it would be difficult to change it. As most foodstuffs that were in former years consigned to this market are now supplied to order, it would seem that an effort might be successfully made in this direction in regard to fish.

MARITIME BOARD OF TRADE.

The annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade takes place at Chatham, N. B., this year on Aug. 17 and 18. W. B. Snowball, Chatham, is the president and E. A. Saunders, Halifax, the acting secretary-treasurer.

AN ERROR.

In the "Frou-Frou" advertisement on page 4 of this issue, the location of the Cape Breton Wholesale Grocery should be set down as Sydney and not Sydney Mines, and W. H. Gillard & Co., Sault Ste. Marie is printed in error as W. J. Gillard.

MANITOBA MARKETS

ADVANCES—

Rolled oats.

Orange peel.

Syrup.

Winnipeg, August 4, 1910.

The tone of the entire market is greatly improved over that of the past few weeks. Since the return of travelers to the field, and also the return of the merchants from the big exhibitions, orders have increased in numbers and in bulk. No community will suffer financially on account of this year's limited wheat yield, and merchants will be enabled to buy quite freely with the money that is already in free circulation everywhere in the west.

The oat market is going up, and with it the price of the rolled product, owing to the outlook for a small yield this year. The future of many lines are uncertain. Just now it is believed that the strong markets that are indicated this week are only the beginning of some sharp and radical advances in prices. It would seem that the importations from U. S. are not coming heavily enough to satisfy the demand for the rapidly-increasing population of this country. The present need of supplies on the part of the merchants during an inopportune period for buying from the standpoint of the western crop condition, clashes with the advancing market quotations elsewhere on the continent. This is the peculiar situation which prevails this week, and the circumstances are rarely observed so prominently as they are at the present time.

Sugar—Owing to the preserving season being later than usual this year and the price of fruits being high, the volume of sugar consumption has been restricted. There will undoubtedly be an increased demand next week. Prices are held moderately firm and some local wholesalers look for a stronger market.

Foreign Dried Fruits—The reported strengthening of prices on all California fruits has been delayed. Although packers continue to talk a stronger prune market, it is believed that there is a good crop, and when they come on the market slacker prices will rule. Last week's reduced prices on California raisins are maintained, while there is a tendency toward a higher currant market. All peels are strengthened, and the following prices are quoted this week. All citron peel is selling at one price just now:

Syrup and Molasses—There is very little syrup going out to western merchants, although wholesalers have been stocking well. The price has been advanced by manufacturers, and the following quotations show an advance of 10c on all syrup. The molasses trade is satisfactory:

Nuts—The nut market is rather quiet, although the present quotations are maintained rather firmly. There is little moving just now, but merchants will be ordering the shelled product soon. Peanuts have had an excellent season everywhere. We quote:

Shelled Walnuts, in boxes, per lb	0 30
" " small lots, per lb	0 31
" Almonds, in boxes, per lb	0 33
" " small lots, per lb	0 34
Peanuts, Virginia, per lb	0 11 0 13

Rolled Oats—This cereal continues to soar, in view of the limited oat crop in the west. Merchants, too, are ordering heavily, and this has sent prices up quickly. We quote a 10-cent advance:

Rolled oats, 80 lb. sacks, per 80 lbs	2 00
" 40 " " 40	1 05
" 20 " " 20	0 53
" 80 " (8, 10s)	2 45

Tapioca and Sago—The market is quite unchanged and the opinion is maintained that next year the market will be stronger, due to the lack of culture of the plants. The trade in the west is not heavy this week, and a revival in the output is expected.

Pearl tapioca, per lb	0 05½ 0 06
Sago, per lb	0 05 0 05½

Beans—Wholesalers are preparing to stock heavily in beans and the market has not been changed. Nothing has occurred to mar the good crop prospect in Ontario, and the old prices rule here this week. The heavy consumption of beans everywhere, and the prospects of heavy exportations to the south, will tend to keep the market rather firm next season.

3-lb. picker, per bushel	2 20
Hand picked, per bushel	2 30

Evaporated Apples—The report of a short crop of United States apples, especially on the west coast, is more strongly verified this week, and the evaporated stuff is held stiff at 9½ cents this week. No lower prices are in sight.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, N.S., Aug. 4, 1910.

The wholesale grocery trade has been quieter than usual during the past week. The orders from the country districts are smaller, but this is not unusual at this season of the year. The farmers are now busy with their crops.

Butter continues firm despite the fact that the season is a most remarkable one for pasturage, and that lots of butter is being manufactured. The receipts of butter have been somewhat smaller this week, owing to the farmers being otherwise engaged.

The provision men have all the business that they can handle.

There is a marked scarcity of raspberries this season. Only small quantities have been marketed so far, and despite the high price, the demand is good.

Canners have announced that deliveries of canned peas will be only slightly more than half the amount necessary to fill the orders for the wholesale trade. The opening prices for standard peas to the trade will be $1 to $1.10 per dozen.

Rolled oats are still advancing, and at the present price it will be necessary for the wholesalers to charge $5.25 per barrel.

The price of canned corned beef has advanced to $1.85 for one's and $3.25 for two's.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., August 4, 1910.

Quite a few changes were recorded in the local markets during the past week. Molasses has dropped from 31 and 33 cents a gallon to 30 and 31 cents. Pork and lard are also down somewhat, the former being quoted now at $27.50 to $28.00 for domestic mess and $26.75 to $30.00 for American clear. The figure for lard is now 16 to 16½ cents. Flour, meals and sugar are unchanged. Canadian oats are selling at 52 and 53 cents a bushel.

New potatoes are quoted at 75 to 80 cents a bushel but prices are expected to drop any day now as the shipments from up river points commence to come in. Beef is also down in price, the western grades now selling at 9 to 10½ cents and butchers at 8½ to 10 cents a pound.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, August 4, 1910.

The feature of the local market, in common with that of other cities, is the sensational jump in the price of flour. It went up from $7.10 to $7.20 and is now at $7.40, and even at this high figure it is not definite that it will remain. Reports from the prairies are that in southern Alberta and southern Manitoba the crop is pretty bad; in fact one man from the former place states that farmers are cutting their grain for fodder. Further north in Alberta and in Saskatchewan the prospects seem to be better, but a big difference will be noted in the general amount from early estimations.

One brand of bacon has reached a record price for Vancouver and is jobbed at 31½ cents, being a jump from 29½c. Hams are 24 to 25 cents, with a brand a cent lower. Cooked ham is up to 30c from 26½ to 27, and even at that there is little profit for the retailer, who has to buy the trimmings, etc., and sell them not.

Good eastern butter in solids brings 26 and 27 cents. Already there is a shortage reported by local creameries in the supply, consequently there will be strong demand in the fall and winter for butter. It is then that commission men and other dealers fall back on the eastern.

Slight Increase Announced in Pork Products

Advance is Partially Due to Recent Strike — May Only be Temporary—Eastern Counties are Shipping Cream into United States and This Trade is Growing—Butter, Eggs and Cheese Markets are Normal—Honey is Likely to be Higher in Price This Year, Owing to Decreased Stocks.

The provision market will greet with pleasure the restoration of peace in railway circles, as butter, cheese, eggs and pork products were delayed probably more than any others, by the strike and dealers in these articles hampered a great deal. They state that they will feel the ill effects of the deadlock for some time. One result has been that business has been curtailed to a considerable extent by the holding of stocks at the places where they were produced. There seems to have been a general, though slight weakening in the price of lard. In some quarters it is attributed to decreased demand, and in this respect the same may be said of both butter and eggs, for there has been a slight falling off in the demand for these articles due largely to the summer season.

A large part of the cream produced in the eastern townships of Quebec, is being shipped across the border, and the prospects are that this trade will grow larger. The quality of the poultry now received is not of the highest, and prices have suffered in consequence. The demand is moreover, not heavy.

From Montreal comes a substantiation of a statement in last week's issue, to the effect that honey was a short yield, and higher prices may be expected.

MONTREAL.

Provisions—Trade is only fair in all lines of provisions at present. A slight stimulant has been given the compound lards by an advance of ½c. Pure lards are ½c lower, on account of the small call. The rest of the market shows no change, except a slight weakness in dressed hogs. It will be some time before the market regains its old status, as the weather is too warm at present.

Butter—The old question of cream exportation to the States is cropping up again, as large as ever. In fact, a recent report from Knowlton, Que., shows that they have abandoned everything in that section except the cream business with the United States. They claim to find it far more remunerative than keeping it here, and making butter. Unless some tariff changes on the part of the United States take place, it looks as if this would develop into a permanent industry.

Prices are slightly firmer this week in dairy butter, ranging a cent higher. Receipts are falling off to a small extent, which is the cause assigned. For the week they are 15,456 packages, as against 16,696 packages same week last year. For the season they are 218,015 packages, as against 193,660 same season last year.

Cheese—An examination of the exports this year, as compared with the same season last year, shows that they are somewhat lessened, but not to any such extent as was at first supposed. The difference is only a matter of 2,000 boxes. This is, of course, largely due to the competition rising from New Zealand cheese in England. It speaks well for the home product, if at higher prices we still hold the bulk of our trade.

Locally there is no change in the situation. Receipts for the week are 83,249 boxes, as against 93,557 same week last year. The figures for the season are 841,550 boxes, as against 870,530 same season last year, both sets of figures showing a decided falling off.

Eggs—This week seems to have marked the end of the weak egg prices, as selects and No. 1's are both 1c higher. Receipts falling off to a certain degree, combined with the real shortage of high grade stock are the causes assigned for the change. What with the large receipts coming in dealers were considerably worried until this change took place.

Receipts for the week are 5,359 cases, as against 4,805 cases same week last year. For the season they are 118,450 cases, as against 119,044 cases same season last year.

Honey—A recent letter from a honey producer to a local house, sums up the situation, perhaps as well as can be done with the information at hand. He says in part "re honey crop would say that the crop in our county (York), is about 30 per cent. of last year's supply. Last year we had in our own apiaries 100 lbs. per colony. This year a bit less than 40 lbs. The quality shows a good average all through, though not quite as heavy in body or light in color as last year. Nearly all of it is flavored with basswood. Prospects for buckwheat are fair, about the same as last year so far. Through Northumberland and some eastern counties of Ontario some good yields are reported, but such localities are the exception rather than the rule. We believe the Ontario crop will be less than half what it was last year."

Local men say that in a slightly less degree the same is true of Quebec honey, and there is likely to be a stronger market than last year. At present prices show no signs of change, though the situation is gradually becoming known.

Provisions—While the price of live hogs has dropped for the present the pork product market is considerably firmer, and an increase of ½c has been announced in some lines. The railway trouble had an effect on the market, but conditions should soon revert to their former level. Packers state that there is no shortage of hogs throughout the country, but deliveries have been light of late on account of the strike. As a result there has been a shortage of supplies, with a consequent tightening of quotations. Trade has been well up to the average.

Butter—The butter market is rather quiet. There is no export demand. Quality is reported good, and this year has found more creamery butter on the market, while the inferior dairy grades have becomes scarcer. The price is about the same and production has declined slightly.

Eggs—There has been but little change in the egg market. The quality has not improved to any appreciable extent, and packers state that there is still a good deal of waste. Delay due to railway inconvenience was responsible in some cases. While there has been no change in prices, the feeling is slightly firmer. The demand is not as heavy as it has been. Production has fallen off slightly, but it is expected to be high again in a few weeks.

Advance in the Price of Rolled Oats Announced

Western Crop Conditions Have Effect of Strengthening the Market—Fifteen Cents Was the Amount of the Increase—Railway Trouble is Causing Inconvenience in Many Quarters—Wheat Market Weakens Under More Hopeful Crop Reports—Possesses Firm Tone, However.

With the realization that the western crop had not suffered as severely as was at first believed and that the yield was going to come nearer the original estimates, there has been a better feeling of security in the market with price declining. On July 21st October wheat was quoted at 1.11¾c and on Tuesday of this week it had dropped to 1.01¾ cents. There is a much healthier tone to the western wheat outlook and those who have been following the market expect about 100 million bushels. The first cutting of both western and Ontario wheat has been begun, but of course is not yet general. Reports of the showing of these fields have been quite encouraging.

Ontario flour is firm. Millers are asking $3.90 for export, but are being offered only $3.75. There is no export trade yet for the reason that as the Canadian price drops that at Liverpool takes the same direction. Conditions, however, are expected to improve in a short time.

Oats have been up as high as 49c but have now dropped to below 40c. Although Ontario oats have come through in good condition the crop in the west is worse than wheat and a feeling of firmness prevails.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—Flours are unchanged this week, but the market shows a firm tone, and prices are fully maintained at last quotations.

Demand continues strong, both from local and country buyers.

Winter wheat supplies are short, and some buyers report difficulty in filling their requirements.

Foreign demand is still rather light, but shows symptoms of an improvement.

Rolled Oats.—There is little doing in the rolled oat and cornmeal market this week. Prices are steady, but with a slightly weaker tone, as demand is rather slack.

In the millfeed market prices show decided strength, and are now about $24 for shorts, and $22 for bran. This is said to be due not to a short supply, but to a considerable increase in demand.

TORONTO.

Flour.—Local mills have of late been hampered to a certain extent by the railway strike. Those who were most dependent upon the G.T.R. were unable to get grain in or flour out and in some cases it is said to have been the cause of a temporary cessation of business. These instances are, however, not many and the general opinion from the millers is that the strike has not had a great effect. Of course now that the strike is settled no further inconvenience will be observed. Business is reported fair with prices apparently going to remain at their present figure. Although the advance was rapid it is stated by the millers to have been practically necessary in order to allow them a profit, and while the wheat market has weakened considerably of late a decline in the price of flour does not necessarily follow as it did the upward movement. Local millers do not anticipate any movement for some time yet.

TRADE NOTES.

Bradley and Black is the name of a new firm of grocers in New Michel, B.C. It is composed of B. Bradley and G. E. Black. The bakery business carried on by Mr. Black for the past 18 months will be maintained.

J. C. Sullivan, T. B. Maniece, John Speer, James R. Bell, Wm. Collins and M. Crowley, a number of Peterboro's grocers, have decided upon a Thursday half holiday during August.

H. F. Weber, New Michel, B.C., is enlarging his store and is going to instal a line of groceries and hardware. Mr. Weber now carries a heavy stock of drygoods and has recently engaged a man from Toronto to take over this department.

F. S. Titus, who kept a general store in Campbellton, N. S., and was burned out in the recent fire, left last week for the west accompanied by his brother, C. W. Titus. They will go first to Winnipeg and then to Saskatoon, looking over the ground with a view to deciding whether or not they will locate there. Should the west not prove attractive to him, Mr. Titus will return to Campbellton and rebuild.

H. P. Allison, grocer, Bouck's Hill, Ont., has purchased the stock and rented the premises of T. O. Keys, Inkerman, and will move to the latter place in the course of a week's time. Mr. Allison began business in Bouck's Hill four years ago and has been successful. Seven years ago he was clerking in Inkerman with Mr. Keys with whom he remained for three years. The latter is retiring from business to attend to his farm which is about two miles distant from Inkerman.

Is it that you don't want more profits?

TILL you hired John, salesmen seemed a pretty poor lot. Till the "Iron Horse" came, our grandads felt quite cosy, thank you, in their rickety stage coach.

* * * *

For many years you have been buying flour from X and Y—they treat you "square"—customers seem satisfied—let the sleeping dog lie.

You don't want to change, Brother Grocer?
Can it be that you don't want more profits?
Your customers, maybe, don't know what a good flour really means.

All flours seem alike to them—all bread poor stuff.

Can't you see that you are reducing your possible profits by sticking to "just flour" because "feyther did?"

Your flour consumption is at a standstill, Brother Grocer.

Look at your sales for a few years back—compare results for stated periods. Has your turnover increased—has it increased in line with the population—as it should?

* * * *

Some day, unless you do it first, your custom will try FIVE ROSES flour and awake to wonderful bread and pastry possibilities.

They'll wonder why you didn't give them the best on the market, they are paying you to buy for them.

And the excellence of FIVE ROSES will make two barrels disappear where only one was consumed.

And somebody will have the sale, and the profit, and the goodwill. Seize the opportunity now, Brother Grocer.

A word to the FIVE ROSES salesman—a postal, maybe. That's all there is between you and more sales. and when your first FIVE ROSES shipment comes in—then "your ship comes in."

If FIVE ROSES has awakened the ambition and the enthusiasm of thousands of successful merchants, why shouldn't it do the same for YOU?

Look at it this way, Brother Grocer.

If you leave it till to-morrow—why, you lose one day's extra profits. And every day you put it off, you are losing more and more.

Don't let your turnover suffer—act NOW.

FOR QUALITY

Experience of Western Grocers with Auto Delivery

Claim That Cost of Maintenance is no More That That of One Horse and Wagon — They Formerly Kept Two Horses and Sometimes Three Were Necessary For Adequate Delivery — Claimed to be a Good Advertisement.

Kamloops, B. C., Aug. 4.—There are possibly a number of grocers throughout the Dominion who are considering the question of substituting the automobile for horses in the delivery of goods. Some of the large general stores have for years been using them not only in delivering, but even replacing their heavy drays with stout trucks which not only haul as heavy loads, but do so much more rapidly.

A grocer who has two or three horses at work every day may have been tempted to surrender to the idea of buying an auto delivery vehicle but stopped short because of the fact that there are not many of them in general use.

In this regard the experience of Stevens & Allan, grocers and provision merchants of Kamploops, is interesting. They have had an auto delivery in use continuously since last August with the exception of two weeks during the coldest part of last winter. The severe weather affected the batteries a little and a heated garage is required during that time if the auto is to be used. One of the members of the firm states that the average expenses for maintenance during the past nine months has been $20 a month or about the cost of keeping up a horse and rig. Stevens & Allan had to use two horses and rigs and at times a third was required.

Satisfactory and Efficient.

In point of expense, therefore, there has been no loss, but rather a gain for the auto does the work of the several horses that were previously used by these grocers. That in itself is generally no mean figure. Of course, this only applies to a business that is substantial enough to make necessary and to pay for an auto. Apart from the relation to the old time method from the standpoint of expense there is something native to the auto delivery vehicle that seems to commend it for this use. In the first place it affords a rapid service. Daily papers are rushed to different parts of cities in autos, the horse and cart of other days having been relegated to the junk pile.

It is also considered a decided advertising medium by Stevens & Allan through its novelty and creates a favorable impression either upon the minds of persons seeing it in the streets or those at whose residences it calls. It has proved a consistent worker, at least from the testimony of Stevens & Allan, and with proper care responds when called upon. The one problem it presents is the question of securing a driver —chauffeur if you will. But there is no reason why this should be difficult to solve. This firm is well pleased with its venture from the beaten path.

Have a Large Store.

Stevens & Allan have recently made an addition of twenty feet at the rear of the store for a modern cold storage room with plate glass front.

"This enables us to carry a complete line of produce, cooked meats and perishable goods," they state. We find the money put into a cold storage room will be a good investment to any grocer. No one should be without one.

"We have also added to our store the west half of the block 25x80, renting the front 30 feet for offices and using the rear portion, 50 feet, for an order department and for receiving and delivering goods. We have a staff of five clerks besides ourselves and as soon as we get our alterations finished will have as complete and up-to-date a grocery store as any in the province."

WHEN A FRUITMAN IS A GROCER.

Fruiterers in Ottawa Being Fined For Not Observing Early Closing By-Law—Origin of the Trouble.

Ottawa, Aug. 4.—Considerable discussion is now being carried on among the fruit merchants as regards the early closing by-law as applicable to Saturday night. On this night these stores are obliged to close at nine o'clock and under this ruling several have of late been in the police court and fined for infraction of the law. Argument has been presented by the affected parties, but as yet there has been no ameliorative action taken and the fruiterers are still paying the penalty of non-observance of the law.

The impression has gained ground that the grocers have been causing the trouble. The president of the local Retail Grocers Association, A. G. Johnson, emphatically contradicts this and states that the grocers have no objection to the fruit dealers remaining open after nine on Saturday night as long as they confine their sales to fruit.

The trouble seems to have arisen from the fact that some of these fruit stores have gradually acquired practically a grocery trade by carrying canned goods, fowl, and groceries, and thus keeping open shop after nine o'clock without objection. This is considered by the association to be unfair to the recognized grocer. The association claims that these combination stores who have been the first to experience trouble, and in reality the fruit dealers are being occasioned this unpleasantness by the action of some of their own clan.

The claim is made that when obliged to close at nine o'clock considerable loss is experienced from decayed fruit. A heavy stock is usually ordered for the Saturday trade and if this is not disposed of, by Monday morning a large quantity is unfit for sale. For this reason the fruiterers ask for exemption from the observance of the by-law.

A counter move is being suggested by the fruit men, whereby confectioners and drug stores will also be obliged to respect this law. These stores, they state, trade in goods which can be included in the grocer's category and that of the fruit stores.

As the city council is adjourned for the summer it is hardly possible that any action of a definite nature will be taken until resumption of this body's business. In the meantime the fruit men are leaving no stone unturned in their effort to gain their point.

British Columbia Salmon Run Not More than Expected

Vancouver, Aug. 3.—The salmon run so far has not been particularly good, although it has improved somewhat during the last few days. It is not any better than was expected, though, and the outlook is that sufficient preparation was made. It was reported that this year would be big, but the only place that will exceed expectation will be in the northern coast districts where the run has been very good, both in quality and quantity. On the Fraser, the run is merely ordinary.

How small salmon are depleted is told by a visitor to Mission Junction, where he stood on a bridge over a stream and saw predatory fish devouring the fry in millions. There was a straight line of big fish across the stream keeping back the fry that was trying to get down the Fraser into the sea. He said if a few men were on hand with nets good work could have been done. This condition of things has prevailed for some time, and it would be difficult to compute the number of fry that meets destruction in this manner.

PAINLESS PAYMENTS.

Robbie often heard his father complain of customers who are slow payers. "It is just like pulling teeth to get money out of them," the father would say, and Robbie—who had watched the work of the dentist next door—pitied the poor creditors greatly.

One day a miserly customer came in to pay a bill and the boy gazed sympathetically at the unwilling payer as he slowly and caressingly unfolded each separate bank note and laid it lingeringly on the counter. Suddenly an idea came into Robbie's head, and he turned excitedly to his father.

"Why don't you give him gas, papa?" he cried, "then it won't hurt him so much."

Heavy Supply of Halibut Forces Down the Price

Sharp Decline Recently Occurs, Owing to the Free Deliveries —One Dealer Said Market Was Glutted and Price Had to go —Price of Lemons Shows a Weakness With a Decline in Some Places—Canadian Peaches and Tomatoes are Arriving in Limited Quantities — General Market Has an Abundance of Fruit at Fairly Good Prices.

The past week has noticed an easier feeling in the lemon market after a steady upward climb and the retention of a high price. In the west there has been an actual decline in the price of lemons and a weaker feeling in Montreal but the Toronto market is fairly firm. Weather conditions have changed and with a decreased demand prices naturally slumped. Fruit is being received freely now according as it ripens and is put on the market. Throughout the country there is a feeling of satisfaction with the extent of the production thus far although in some respects there have been slight disappointments. The fruits that find general favor, those that are in demand from their preserving qualities are moving rapidly. Canadian peaches are being shipped in moderate quantities and give promise of a good crop.

Home grown tomatoes are also arriving from the Ontario peninsula and while they are said to be plentiful in that part of the country, the general report is not as favorable. The various dealers are beginning to readjust themselves to freight conditions although up to the middle of the week there were few or no shipments over the G.T.R.

In the Toronto fish market there is a marked decline in the price of halibut which owing to heavy supplies has glutted the market and knocked from three to four cents off the existing price. Trade remains fair.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits.—Green apples are making their appearance in fair quantity, and demand for this fruit seems to be good. A few watermelons are quoted and muskmelons are here in good quantity. They are bringing about $7-$7.50 per crate.

The first shipments of Delaware grapes are on the market. They are bringing $3-$3.50 per carrier. The grade is good. Lemons are slightly easier, some being quoted as low as $5.50, but the better grades are still bringing $7. Oranges are about the same as last week, but the demand is somewhat stronger. The market all through shows up well considering all things, and local men appear satisfied.

Vegetables.—First arrivals of green corn are on the market at 15c per doz. The sale for the little which has so far arrived is good. This is only natural taking into consideration that the opening quotation is so reasonable.

On the whole the market is easier, wherever changes have occurred prices are lower. This is true of beans, celery, carrots and several others of the heavy sellers. This is due to the large influx of supplies this week, as compared with last. Last week there was the disorganized railway conditions to contend with, but conditions seem to be much improved.

Trade in general is brisk, but dealers say that supplies are coming in almost too freely to be handled properly, and disposed of in time.

Fish.—Eastern or Gaspe salmon is practically done for the season. Some B.C. fish is expected this week, which will serve to fill the wants of late buyers. Fresh fish of all kinds is scarce at the moment, particularly lake fish.

The crop of mackerel is reported almost a failure this season so far, and if fall fishing is not plentiful the market will be left with a poor supply of this kind of fish.

The weather on the coast is reported stormy, and many of the fishing smacks are overdue by several days. This unfavorable state of affairs has firmed the market somewhat.

Green Fruits.—The prices on many lines are getting stronger and the output is quite satisfactory, although other seasons have seen a larger trade. The consumer seems to be waiting for lower prices, which will not come, and this will tend to lengthen the season as far as possible. Green Fruits.—Red raspberries are nearly done and are closely followed by the black variety which is coming in rather freely. The entire market shows a splendid lot of fruit which is moving rapidly before a steady demand. Lawtonberries are now on the market and are of fine quality. There is a fairly good supply of red and black currants and of blue berries showing but little change in prices. Canadian peaches are coming in but as yet they are not very plentiful. California fruit still holds a fairly strong place on the market, which, locally, is firm due to a certain extent to the conditions which resulted from the strike. Bananas are firm and lemons are also steady although the weather of late has not been conducive to heavy demand. Practically the last of the Verdelli crop has been shipped for the present season. Oranges are still firm, the highest price being quoted at the $5 mark.

Vegetables.—New tomatoes from the Leamington district are showing on the market and are of fairly good quality. Reports are to the effect that the crop in that district is likely to be good although the statements regarding the general crop are not so favorable. Throughout the United States there is a feeling that the crop is going to be a short one. The dry weather is said to have had a deterrent effect on the crop and in not a few quarters this year's crop is estimated below that of last year. Large Valencia onions are coming on the market. Canadian celery is finding a ready sale and altogether a satisfactory market remains. The supplies might be heavier, there is room for improvement in this respect, but at least the dealers are not carrying heavy stocks over and the price is holding.

Fish.—It is a long time, according to dealers since halibut was as cheap as at present. This condition is due to the over supply and as a result the price which has been at from nine to ten cents a pound has dropped to from C to 6½ cents. The demand has not grown with the heavy supply and the price dropped in consequence. There is a steady business in white fish and salmon trout.

Canada's Share in the Consumption of Valencia Raisins

An examination of the figures showing the production and distribution of Valencia raisins should be of interest to the trade. In 1890 the total production was 867,006 cwt. but in the following year it went to only 650,590 cwt. and there has been a decline in production during the intervening years except now and then when a fairly good year was felt. In 1906 the production had dropped to 333,685 cwt. but during the past three years there has been an improvement on these figures. In 1909 the yield totalled 477,105 cwt. but from the reports received up to the present this year's crop is likely to be at least 25 per cent. lower than these figures.

Canada has gradually increased her demand during the period of years referred to. In 1890 her importation of Valencia raisins was 52,952 cwt. but in 1893 it had dropped to 22,001 cwt. In 1909 Canada imported 84,908 cwt., it being her heaviest year. The next best was in 1905 when 80,689 cwt. were imported. Apparently old stocks are light and those who are carefully studying the market reiterate its firmness and expect to see prices somewhat in advance of last year.

From the statistics at hand it is shown that Great Britain is an exceedingly heavy consumer in fact nearly three quarters of the Valencia crop last year went to various parts of the British Empire. It is stated that during the past twenty years the price has generally been inversely proportional to the production. In other words when the crop was heavy the price was light and vice versa. This, of course, is naturally to be expected.

Another Complaint of Wholesalers Selling Direct to Consumers

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 3.—Grocers of this town are the next to organize. They have realized that in order to put the grocery business on a better basis there must be united action, and last week formed an association.

The trade in Sudbury has grown to large proportions, and for some time, has felt the necessity of a central body to help them in their business. The meeting was attended by every grocer in town, and all confessed themselves unanimously in favor of the association. After the officers had been elected a general discussion ensued the chief point raised being the selling to the consumer by the wholesale trade. This question will be vigorously followed up as the trade feel that under present conditions they are not being fairly dealt with.

The question of late deliveries was also up and it is the intention of the newly formed organization to place the delivery of goods on a business basis. The grocers thoroughly recognize their mutual interests and feel that by intelligent co-operation they will improve the standing of the trade and possibly their financial well-being.

The officers elected were:

President—G. H. Lennon.

Vice-President—W. Greenwood.

Treasurer—Geo. Elliot.

Secretary—I. H. Davis.

Committee—Frank McKinnon J. S. Davidson, E. Grenon, Peter Christakos and P. L. Parker.

Georgia's crop of peaches this year exceeds the record crop of 1909 by about 300 cars and is three times as large as that of last year, the shipments to date approximating 6,000 cars.

B. C.'s RECORD FRUIT CROP.

Peaches and Apples Looking Fine and Strawberries Turned Out All Right.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 3.—British Columbia's fruit crop this year will be the largest on record, not only collectively but individually in peaches and apples. Strawberries were a good crop this spring and growers did well, but the larger fruits will be even better. Not only will there be quantity, but the quality is of the best. There has been plenty of sun to give color and flavor to the fruit, as well as imparting sweetness, and besides there are few if any pests to spoil peaches and apples. This latter is due to the strict vigilance maintained by the efficient corps of inspectors located at Vancouver, where all nursery stock is carefully watched and fumigated. If it is very bad it is condemned.

During the past month, over thirty consignments of fruit from California have been condemned, so that there shall be no entry of these pests which have proved so destructive in the fruit growing districts in the south.

The Mooney Biscuit and Candy Co., which purchased the biscuit and confectionery plant of Foley Bros. & Larson, in Winnipeg, a few weeks ago, have acquired additional vacant property at the rear of their premises on which they purpose erecting an addition to the present plant. New machinery has been installed. The plan of the office and warehouse is at present under reconstruction. W. C. Mooney who is at present in the city is to manage the western trade.

Donnelly, Watson & Brown, Ltd., of Calgary and Vancouver, are building a new "home" in Calgary and which they expect to occupy about 15th of August. Their present premises are too small for their rapidly extending business. This firm now have a staff of 25 employes, seven of whom are travelers, five working from the headquarters in Calgary and two from the Vancouver branch. The firm handle chiefly grocery specialties and confectionery lines and are agents for Kootenay Jams and Jellies. Mr. Brown, the general secretary-manager, is well known throughout the trade. The new building is to be three stories high and so built to allow the addition of three more stories. The firm are extending their field of operations and it is their intention to keep adding to their traveling staff and to work the whole of Western Canada thoroughly.

FRIENDS—NOT GROWLERS

RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes never comes back to you with growls from the housekeeper. It is always up to the same high standard maintained for forty years, and is always just right. That's why we have the thousands upon thousands of grocers pushing it everywhere. Grocers don't wish to run the risk of losing a good customer by passing out an inferior stove polish, which is wrong more often than it is right. RISING SUN makes friends for you and for us in every household where you put it.

Definite Plans for Lessening Expense Account

Probably Less Stock is Necessary to Carry on the Business—Reduction of $2,000 Made in One Instance and Found to be Satisfactory—The Question of Proprietor's Salary, Rent, and Wages of Employes — Writer Thinks That Every Salesman Should Memorize Prices and Not Depend on a Book.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

An analytical study of the expense account along the lines suggested in my last article will lead any wide-awake merchant to the conclusion that something definite must be done. The example given was not extraordinary, but really quite common, if the grocer could only realize it. The trouble is that so few of us really know; also that so few have the courage and the cultivated faculty of logical deduction to seek and find the actual facts. Having our own affairs to handle, feeling that we are "accountable to nobody about our own affairs," we make allowances which would not "go" for a minute if we were handling an outside problem. But those who really and honestly take the bull by the horns without shrinking, will find things just about as I have indicated, with very few exceptions.

I said that this simple knowledge, attained through the searching examination of our own affairs, would lead most of us to find the remedy; and that is so. Accurate knowledge will lead to the accomplishment of sweeping reforms, simply because our thought and effort will be aroused thereby. So the merchant, coming face to face with the fact that his expense account averages nearly 16 p.c. on his sales, will set himself vigorously to the task of bettering things. And what will be his his first honest conclusion? That, as the facts show that he is carrying such an unthinkable load of expense, surely he himself is not so good a manager as he had considered himself to be and that consequently he is not entitled to the salary he should properly have if things were different. So he will first cut off, say, $300 a year from his own income. That is good; it is the first step in reform; moreover it shows to himself his own honesty in the reform he has undertaken to inaugurate and carry clear through.

That step is arbitrary. He can make it arbitrary, for he knows it will hold. But that is as far as he can go without further consideration and thought, for he cannot upset his business by any hasty or ill-considered step. He must dig; take thought; carefully weigh each move. For from now onward he is not taking chances, but building, and he intends to build on a certain foundation of substantial knowledge and logical deduction. First, can he cut his interest charge? Maybe. Once, when I was doing a business of around $60,000, I found I was carrying upwards of $8,000 in groceries. I attacked it at once, determined that I would cut that down. I did not know the bottom limit to which I might go without crippling my business, but I was satisfied that I did not need within $1,500 of that amount of stock, and maybe $6,000 would do the trick. So I started in with the first salesman who came into the store—and turned him down. I kept that up for a year, buying only just what I could not do without; putting off from week to week the purchase of any single little item if I could possibly do it.

Added to Savings Account.

What I did with the money brings me to a point I hinted at last week. I put it into a savings account every month at the rate of $200; and I began to investigate bonds. Pretty soon I had some bonds and my stock shrunk to around $6,000. It has averaged $6,000 ever since, but my bond holdings have increased, and I have never been without a steadily augmenting savings account in cold dollars. I have done this in season and out of season, often at what seemed to be the sacrifice of opportunities to buy right; but let me say on the side right here that in most cases such alleged "opportunities" would best be put in quotation marks—and left there—for they are delusions in the vast majority of cases. But there is no delusion about cash in the bank, nor about interest-bearing securities which can be used in a minute in any emergency. This course has a thousand advantages which are apparent, and it also reduced my interest charge. But remember, that the interest charge can only be reduced that way, for if you have $1,000 in use in your business, that stands you $60 a year—and you cannot get away from the fact.

The Question of Rent.

Likewise, the store occupied. Is the rent you are paying too high? That depends on many things. If it is your own building, you must simply consider whether it could be rented for the figure you are paying, with reasonable certainty that it would continue occupied. If that is the case, then you cannot cut your rent. Then what must you do? You must get more business; or average up your profits to a higher level. A whole lot of food for thought in that problem, is there not? Yes, in that will be found the difference between progress and retrogression, for its solution will call for the best that lies in any man, and it will bring to the surface every tittle of latent ability that you possess.

On the salary or wages question, I am going to begin by telling you a story and maybe sending you the solution afterwards. In New York city there is a big, old-established dry goods house which has become what most such houses tend to become, a modified department store. It has flourished through two or three generations, making money steadily all the time. The managers have exhausted every means of getting to the bottom of the market in their purchasing department. They have established the method of paying cash in advance for most of their supplies, to get every possible benefit in the way of close figures and discounts; and they keep $200,000 lying in the bank for just this purpose. Bonds and securities of other kinds they have by the vault full. So now they turn, as all successful concerns will turn, the "intensive cultivation" of their business.

In their handkerchief department they employ a certain number of girls, and the close investigation of their business revealed the fact that the percentage of cost on handkerchief sales was too high. Their thought was to reduce the pay of the girls, who were getting about $4 per week; but the expert to whom they happened to put this question told them they were wrong. They did not want to replace five girls at $4 with five girls at $3.50, but needed to make four girls at $7, cost them less on their sales than they were now paying. They accomplished what they were after; and I shall tell you about it later on. What I wanted to bring out was the fact that the reduction of, say, 8 p.c. wages expense on sales may not involve the cutting down of the rate at which your help is now being paid, but may probably, and more likely, mean the increase in the efficiency of the help so that, while the wages remain as now, or increase, your ratio of expense decreases. So, as I said of the rental problem these riddles will stimulate you to become a better merchant every day you work at them.

Keep Prices in the Memory.

And right here I think of a point I cannot put off. In the issue on July 16th of this paper, on page 43, you will find an article dealing in a sort of price-book for your clerks to use; and I say: Have none of it. There is just one place for prices and that is in the memory of the seller. And if you answer that many people have memories that are too poor to retain the 2,000 prices of your stock, I say that memory is just like muscle—it grows in size and strength in precisely the proportion in which you exercise it. Train your boys from the order counter outward to the front, and drill them so they will never hesitate for an instant on any price. Let one sample package of the less active stocks be marked with a sticker, but insist on the prices being accurately remembered.

Value of Concentration.

Many years ago I was disgusted to find that I was asking the elder Johnson the price on this and that almost daily, and I resolved to quit it. I determined that thereafter I would know a price after I had first heard it. When a figure was given me thereafter I repeated it to myself, concentrating my mind on that one point until I knew that I could not forget; and in a few weeks, yes; in a few days, I knew every price in the store. With that kind of foundation, I could build up every market change with unfailing accuracy, and it was not long before our regular customers stopped referring to the "Old Man" for confirmation of any price I named, for they gained confidence through finding me right.

It is all a matter of studiousness, attention, concentration. It is a habit which can be cultivated to full fruition by anybody, should be cultivated by everybody, and I say: Go to it—and away with price books.

Made Specialty in Butter, Eggs, Cheese and Tea

A Successful Grocer Found That Quality in These Staples was Sufficient to Get and Keep Customers — Always Made it a Point to Tell His Patrons Exact Nature of the Goods—Considered This Scheme Part of His Advertising Plan.

"Good butter, good eggs, good cheese and good tea"!

There is at least one grocer who built up his business by making a specialty of butter eggs, cheese and tea. The story of his success was told by a business man—a friend—who seemed to take particular pleasure in being able to declare that this particular grocer had depended upon these staple goods. The friend's story was about as follows:

"When this grocer opened his little store, I was one of the first to make a purchase being well acquainted with him, and I remember that in the window he had a printed card stating that the butter and eggs on display were absolutely fresh and good. He did not choose this campaign in a haphazard manner, but simply determined to follow it.

"And I think his plan was a wise one. Butter and tea are necessities. They are used at practically every meal, and because of this fact they must be of unquestionable quality in order to please, and when people want eggs they want good eggs. Well, the best of grocers cannot always get the highest class of goods, but this fellow always told his customers the conditions of the goods exactly as they were, or at least as he knew them to be. If the butter was a little off in color or flavor—which was very seldom—he would say so, advising only a small purchase until he had better stock.

Source of Supply.

"To make sure that his produce was good he had a certain number of farmers from whom he obtained his supplies. He had impressed upon them his care in getting quality, and when there was any trouble he was not slow to mention the fact to the offender. These occasions were few, however, and for the most part his supplies were of the best. There were times when he did not make a heavy profit on these special goods, but he regarded the idea as a part of his advertising scheme, and was not expecting to reap heavily from this department of his business.

His Cheese Trade.

"I was forgetting that he also specialized in cheese. It is hardly necessary to say that he used every effort to get quality in this article, as in the other lines mentioned. He had only a poor knowledge of cheese when he began business, but he had a friend who knew cheese from A to Z, and it was not long before this retailer was a good judge. Some grocers are satisfied when they buy a single cheese forgetting that what pleases one consumer may not meet with the favor of another. Some cheese are mild, others strong, and there are medium grades.

"It was not long until he had all three in his store, and by this means he was able to cater to different tastes. He believed that this assisted considerably to swell his general business.

"And then about tea! He had grasped every opportunity during his clerkship days to learn teas and when he was in business for himself he could talk to his customers intelligently about it. That was the beginning of his business, and the quality he demanded in these staples he was careful to secure in the other goods. He attributes his success largely due to this simple, yet effective plan."

Other cases of this kind are known to the writer, although cheese and tea were substituted for other articles almost in equal demand. The grocers referred to admit that they had set out with the determination to specialize along those staple lines although it took many months before good results were apparent.

Things That Shouldn't Be

Grocers or their clerks should not address children in a harsh manner as if serving them were not worth while. Their young natures are sensitive and they invariably inform their parents of the reception they receive.

Sugar Prices Cut, Under Weight Given Claims a Competitor

Vancouver, August 11. — "Twenty pounds of yellow sugar for $1," is the alluring line in a local retail firm's advertisement, for yellow sugar jobs at $5.15 when it is bought by the sack. One grocer secured one dollar's worth, from his competitor, asking for it that way and not calling for twenty pounds. When he weighed it he found that there was just seventeen pounds and a half. It may not have been cheating, but it was sharp practice and shows how such stores can advertise standard articles at prices less than cost. In this instance, the grocer says it was not sold as advertised. This complaint is not made of one store alone, and cases have been quoted in the past along the wholesale line where dealers offer what are supposed to be bargain prices and take it out in the weight, when the particular thing is not called for as advertised. One hundred pound packs of potatoes presumably, have been known to weigh but 85 pounds.

In another cash store, where special attractions were offered at cut prices, the statement was made by one of the clerks that the advertisement was used to get people into the store, the object being to sell some other of the same staple at the regular price. When the customer gets wise to this procedure it will be seen that he gains nothing for running around, except losing credit with his regular dealer. It stands to reason that people are not in the store business for the benefit of the public and must make money.

For instance, a buyer went into a department store one day this week to get something advertised at a bargain rate. When the request was made for it at the price stated, the reply of the clerk was that it was all gone, and "Do you expect us to give things away all the time?" "Was it ever sold?" came back the interrogation, and the answer has yet to be filed.

NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERIES.

The trap fishery is practically closed down all along the coast, says The Trade Review, St. John's, Newfoundland, and the aggregate catch is much smaller than for many years. South and west it will not be so bad, but from Bacalieu, north, it is almost a blank. The northern man's only hope now is the "squid scull," and, as small catches have been taken on squid by hook and liners at one or two places, the position may not be so bad by reeling-up time. The Straits fishery, by last reports, will be very much below the average, and the upper part of the Labrador has done nothing with traps and very little with hook and line. All the floaters have gone north of Cape Harrison, where fish is reported plentiful, and they may secure paying voyages; but the outlook is blue for the stationers on the southern part of the coast.

The Canadian Match Company, Limited, were recently granted a Dominion charter. In addition to carrying on a regular lumber business they will also manufacture matches. The company is capitalized at $250,000.

The above map roughly represents the three great Western Canadian Provinces, showing just where the crops are good, fair and poor. Generally speaking the wheat crops south of the main line of the C. P. R. are poor while those above are good. The wheat yield is now conservatively estimated at 90,000 bushels, considerably more than was expected 3 weeks or a month ago.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Vancouver Retailers Complaining That They are Unfairly Treated with Respect To Price Quotations—Montreal Merchant Believes in Payments by Cheque Only —A Camp Goods Advertisement from Victoria, B. C. — Importance Placed on Cleanliness by Quebec Retailer.

Raising Prices to Retailers.

Vancouver, B.C., August 11.—To The Canadian Grocer to-day, a local retailer discussed the actions of some commission men, who take advantage of a man's necessity and ask higher prices, in fact have no stated price for goods. It is reasonable to suppose he maintains that there would be a standard price, but if a grocer wants something in a hurry the price is quite stiff, whereas if the firm wants to sell, the figure is extremely reasonable. This retailer knew of instances where the price say on potatoes differed from $3 to $6 in the quotations of one firm. It is this sort of action, he says, that has started the farmer and customer in Seattle to organize a company which intends establishing a string of co-operative stores. The general wholesale dealer is different, as he carries standard goods which call for more steady quotations.

Paying Bills by Cheque.

Montreal, Aug. 11.—Payment by cheque is a method that is endorsed by a large number of business men and it is claimed equally applicable to those in the grocery trade. A Montreal merchant who pays everything by cheque spoke of the custom as follows:

"It is bad business to-day for a business man or, indeed, for an ordinary individual, to pay bills in cash. A mere memorandum or an entry in a book to the effect that a bill was paid on such a day is not proof positive that the bill was paid. Retail dealers should pay as little cash out over the counter or from the money drawer as possible. All money received should be deposited in the bank and then bills paid by cheque. A cheque is a receipt and it is rendered still more a receipt if it is stated on the face of the cheque what is was given for. There is no objection to entering into particulars as to what the cheque paid for, on the face of the cheque; and it is the safest kind of guarantee that the bill has been paid. Dealers, no matter how small or how limited their operations, should use the bank."

A Good Camp Goods Ad.

Victoria, B.C., Aug. 10.—Dixi H. Ross & Co. recently made a direct appeal to the public to get their summer camp orders in their large advertising space in the Victoria press.

This company believes in suggesting summer camp goods and in their advertisement they name about 80 specific articles with the price opposite each in heavy black type.

The head-line of this ad. reads: "Some Dixi H. Ross Suggestions For Your Summer Camp Orders." Following that is their conversation: "Even when summering out at your cottage or camp in the pure ozone laden sea air or amid fresh pinewood breezes, remember good pure foods are a necessity to good health. Poor groceries are dear at any price—expensive investments. Our groceries cannot be bettered anywhere and our prices are as low as is consistent with a high-grade stock. We make a specialty of cleanliness as well as purity. Hundreds of Victorian house-wives testify to the fact that the Dixi H. Ross Store is headquarters for good things to eat and drink. With our increased facilities, our unrivalled stock of imported European goods, and our fine delivery service, we can serve your interests even more acceptably than than ever before."

This is followed up by a list of goods and their prices above referred to.

Particular About Cleanliness.

Quebec, August 11.—Cleanliness is the motto of A. Drolet, a grocer of this city who is as scrupulous regarding the general appearance of his place of business as it is possible to get it. Every morning the floor is carefully swept and any dust that may collect on the goods is taken off with a wet cloth to prevent it getting onto other goods. The front windows are washed frequently and are not allowed to get dirty. The scales and cash register are covered every night with cloths especially prepared for them in order to prevent the dust and flies settling on them. Great care is given bottles, biscuit and spice receptacles, measures, etc. Vegetables are not kept in the store and thus any odors good or bad arising from them are kept out of the store. A special place at the rear was made for them.

The store is well equipped with electric lights, the cellar is well ventilated and the clerks wear white linen garments. They unite to keep the store up to a high standard.

Self-measuring oil pumps allow coal oil to be handled cleanly.

Three windows and two doors give the store a wide appearance and presents an inviting front. The proprietor appreciates exclamations such as, "You have a very clean and neat store" from his customers, because it is his aim to make it clean and bright.

Fly Poison Window.

Bracebridge, Ont., Aug. 11. — Kirk Bros. have one of their large windows dressed in up-to-date style. This window is completely filled with various kinds of fly poison and might be termed a "Death to Flies" window. The base is made of fly-paper piled tier upon tier while poison pads are used for the pillars reaching to the ceiling. This window is favorably commented on by many tourists, farmers and town people.

Specialty of Butter and Eggs.

Calgary, Alta., Aug. 11.—Asked as to how he built up his business a grocer of this city said, "I made a specialty of butter and eggs when I opened my business about ten years ago, and I advertized those articles as much as I could. Understand, I did not neglect the grocery end of the business for my stock was of first-class quality, but I did not want to advertise that idea. I felt it would be a better ad. to call attention to these lines, butter and eggs. Everybody used them, and the majority of people wanted the best quality. I made arrangements with a number of farmers to give me their entire supply. People who came to buy butter or eggs also made purchases of other goods and thus was the thin edge of the wedge entered. It did not happen during the first month or the first year. The growth was gradual and in all that time I did not cease my vigilance on the quality of the butter and eggs I handled. I always examined samples of the eggs to make sure they were fresh and I was equally careful to watch the quality of the butter I received."

Aims to Get a Fair Profit.

Toronto, August, 11.—"Quality and straight prices have been two aims that I have always kept in mind, and I believe that they have been responsible for the business that I have built up. They are both so easy to follow that any one can adopt the same system.

"I determined to try to cultivate the bettter class of trade and to that end I investigated different varieties of goods to make sure that I was on the right track. How I did this is a rather long story. Some of them I tried myself. In other cases I asked the advice of friends, I visited the best grocery stores and enquired there about them, and I always read advertisements just for the information they gave about the different goods. Having bought quality goods, my other rule was that as long as I was in the business I would get a fair price or quit. That is the only secret I have to my business, and I think it should be the foundation for any other that is aiming at success."

Such is the testimony of a Yonge St. grocer.

Reversing Cash Discounts on Overdue Accounts

Should Cash Discounts be Deducted from Purchase Invoices and Merchandise or Purchase Account Charged With the Net Amount?—The Retailer's and Creditor's Views—Reasonable Treatment of Customer's Account—When Cash Discounts Should not be Allowed—Not Obligatory to Allow any Cash Discount After Period has Elapsed.

By Howard R. Wellington.

This is a matter which has probably been brought more forcibly to our attention within the last few years on account of the new customs regulations which permit of a certain rate for cash discounts being deducted from the face of invoices, the duty being calculated on the balance or the net amount.

A number of concerns allow this amount to be deducted, and the net amount of the invoice charged against merchandise or purchase account. This method of treatment is, however, not correct, as cash discount is a rebate for prompt payment, and has absolutely nothing to do with the cost of goods, nor should it enter into the basis of figuring the selling price by adding a certain percentage on the cost.

The correct treatment of all invoices on which cash discounts have been deducted is to run through the amount deducted and charge the original or gross amount to the correct accounts. Then, when the account is paid, the cash discounts should be credited in the usual way to purchase discount, discount or interest account, whichever title is used.

It has been argued against this method that merchandise account should be charged with the actual cost of the goods, and that all discounts, including cash discounts, should be deducted from the face of each invoice before being charged.

Anyone taking the latter view may be asked the question "What would be done in case it was decided to take 'time' on the account and lose the cash discount?" In such a case there would be no cash discount deducted and merchandise account would be charged with the full original amount of the invoice.

Again, it is necessary, as a rule, to borrow money either on note or discounts in order to take advantage of cash discounts, and charges in this connection are charged against discount account. Similarly, why should not discounts, earned by the use of this borrowed money, be credited to the same account, so as to show at the end of the year the amount paid the bank on borrowed money, on one side, and the amount earned by cash discount on the other or credit side?

The Treatment of Freight.

When a concern delivers goods, should the freight allowance be deducted before calculating cash discounts or afterward? The question may be argued both ways. From the buyer's standpoint, the freight has nothing to do with the invoice, and if the goods are delivered at a certain point, the freight should have been prepaid, or allowed from settlement after cash discount has been calculated.

From the seller's standpoint the freight is in the nature of a rebate, a concession or credit note and should therefore be deducted from the face of invoice covering the goods purchased, and the cash discount figured on the net amount when settlement is made.

Both these views are right in a way, but we believe the proper course to take is the first one outlined above, which is, that the freight should not enter into the calculation of cash discount, which is figured on the amount of the invoice before freight is deducted.

There has been a tendency during the last few years to decrease, rather than increase, the cash discount rebate, the result being that few firms to-day allow more than 2 p.c. for cash.

Of course, the buyer must bear in mind that if a large cash discount is offered, it is necessary for the manufacturer or jobber to add a sufficient percentage to his cost to provide for this extra rebate. Competition on general lines is so keen to-day that more than a fair profit cannot be made, and price and value should always be taken into consideration when a comparison is made between goods offered by a concern allowing a large percentage for cash discount, and that allowing only a small percentage.

Reversing Cash Discounts.

If the retailer does not pay his account within the discount period, is he entitled to any cash discount? A customer in the west wrote us recently asking for our candid opinion upon this subject. He had accepted a draft payable within a discount period, but unable to take up the draft when due, he writes his creditors stating the facts and asking for a renewal. The extension is granted, but the cash discount, already allowed him, is charged back, and in addition, interest on the renewal for the extra time.

It would seem that the reasonable treatment of a customer's account in such a case would be to charge back the cash discount, and redraw, adding exchange only, provided, of course that the extension asked for did not go beyond the "Net Terms" period, as usually, goods are sold with both a discount period and a net term period. If, however, a renewal is requested for only a short period, say fifteen or thirty days, it seems reasonable to expect that a portion, at least, of the cash discount be allowed, even though interest be charged for the extra time, but certainly the full discount should not be allowed.

The manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber, as the case may be, imports his goods in large quantities in order to better serve the retailer by giving him the closest possible prices and carrying a heavy stock so as to supply goods when wanted. Usually advantage is taken of cash discounts, in fact some of the houses will give no other terms, and it means therefore a vast outlay of money, part of which it is altogether likely is borrowed from the bank at certain seasons of the year, and on which interest will be paid. It is obvious, therefore, that cash discount, which importer earns on his purchases is very often more than wiped out by the interest on the amount invested.

Percentage Added for Selling Price.

Again, selling prices are based on an advance of a certain percentage on cost, the cash discount being looked upon simply as an inducement for the customer to pay his account promptly; in other words, cash discount is a rebate for prompt payment and most certainly should not be allowed if accounts are not paid within the required time.

In our experience a number of methods have been pursued in regard to this matter of cash discount on renewals, and we might enumerate some of the cases as follows:

1. Charge back full cash discount and renew amount of account without adding interest, but charging bank exchange, providing, of course that the time requested by the customer does not extend beyond the "Net terms" period. If goods are sold only on the discount period, interest would then be added as well.
2. When part of the draft is paid, allow cash discount on this amount only, charging back the balance and adding interest and exchange on the amount.
3. When the whole amount of draft is returned, and renewal is requested for say thirty days, allow one-half cash discount, renew amount, adding interest and exchange.
4. When the whole amount of draft is returned and renewal requested for thirty and sixty days, allow proportion of cash discount on each draft, and add interest and exchange on renewal.

Strictly speaking, it is not obligatory to allow any cash discount after the discount period has elapsed, and while a proportion is sometimes allowed, the retailer should not expect it.

It must be remembered, too, that where a large number of renewals are desired by customers, a corresponding amount of work is entailed in an office in the way of letter writing, drawing drafts, posting to ledger, banking, etc., and while this may not appear to the average customer as an expense, it certainly takes a great deal of valuable time to look after these matters.

The "Grocer's Hump" of the Hamilton, Ont., Retail Grocers' Association will be held this year on August 31st. The name of the trysting place is being kept a secret. An invitation has been sent to members of the Brantford association to attend.

Value of a Smart Delivery in the Grocery Business

A First Prize Outfit and Impression It Made on a Merchant's Customers—Satisfaction to the Owner In Knowing He Had A Neat Up-to-date Delivery.

Toronto, Aug. 10.—There are not a few grocers to-day who take particular pains to maintain their delivery equipment in the best conditions within their means. The horse has within his veins blood that has been pedigreed, the harness and trappings are well polished, substantial and neat, and the vehicle is a masterpiece of the modern wagon-maker's art. And sometimes as grocers of this class stop to ponder upon the question they may be confronted with the query "does it pay?" Does all this extra trouble to ensure a decent equipment bring me any more returns than Worth While in Business.

Smart delivery equipages have always been one of the aims of R. Davies & Son. They have had good horseflesh before and having once set up that standard it was quite natural to maintain it. Mr. Davies stated that he looked upon a neat delivery outfit as an asset to business. Its results were felt more indirectly than directly. Customers always commented favorably upon it and in this last instance expressed their pleasure and satisfaction that Mr. Davies had carried off the first prize.

Others who were not customers would the simple satisfaction I receive from knowing that my delivery service is, in appearance, as good as money will buy?

In the accompanying photograph there is presented the splendid delivery outfit of R. Davies & Son, grocers, Homewood Ave, Toronto, the winner of a silver cup at the Open Air Horse Show on Dominion Day.

It carried off first honors in the competition for grocers' delivery outfits and the whole equipment is one of which any merchant might well be proud. "The horse' is a four year old gelding, high spirited and yet not flighty or out of place with the delivery wagon.

undoubtedly note the fine appearance of the outfit, although Mr. Davies was too modest to make an assertion in this regard. The people of to-day accept these outward signs as indicative of the character of the whole buisness and in the great majority of cases it is safe to follow that plan. Therefore it would be expressing a truism to say: "By their delivery outfits, ye shall know them," when referring to grocers.

When a grocer has a stock of goods that is of the best quality, his methods of impressing that fact upon the buying public are manifold. It may be well said, that a smart, well-kept delivery outfit goes a long way to establish and confirm that impression. Of the above outfit, the horse speaks for himself. The picture does not bring out the details of the wagon and harness. The latter is new and bright with metal buckles, etc., well polished. The wagon has rubber tires, brass hubs and in other details brass and silver are conspicuous. The lettering is appropriate and attractive. The whole is in good taste as grocers in general will agree and especially those who are as painstaking with this department of their business as are both R. Davies, senior and junior.

OTTAWA GROCERS' PICNIC.

Their Annual Outing Was at Cornwall This Year.

Ottawa, Aug. 10.—One thousand members and friends of the local Grocers' Association attended the picnic of that organization to St. Lawrence Park, Cornwall, last week. The weather proved ideal, not a single shower marring the sport, and when the train arrived back in Ottawa at 10.15 p.m., it contained a tired though happy crowd.

At the park a long programme of sports was held, the feature being the baseball game between teams from Ottawa and Hull. The Ottawa nine was captained by Fred McNeil, while M. Lafleche led the Hull team into the fray. After a close game, Hull won out by the score of 8 to 9. A guessing contest was also conducted and entered by a large number.

Another decidedly popular feature was the dancing platform erected on the grounds. This was in demand every moment, and an orchestra and pipe band were kept busy furnishing the music.

Great credit is due the committee who brought the event to so successful an end. The committee was composed of A. P. Johnston, chairman; T. W. Collins, Duncan Bell and C. B. McLean.

A Canadian meat packing company, in sending out circulars to the trade, points out that smoked meats should be unpacked and hung in a cool dry place, as soon as received. It is also stated that covered meats will show mould during the warm weather, which is unavoidable.

Selfridge's departmental store, London, Eng., have adopted an original way of ensuring rigid exactitude in all their announcements. The firm pay out 5s. to the assistant who first points out any mis-statement or error (other than purely typographical) in an advertisement.

CANNED PEAS SHORT.

There has been a big grab for canned peas and still jobbers are short. The trouble is that there was not a sufficient quantity packed to supply all demands and there is not the remotest chance of prices coming down.

One jobber states that he could only secure 250 cases out of every 1,000 ordered. Another says that there will be no more than a 60 per cent. delivery.

In Toronto this week some wholesalers didn't have a case of peas to sell for present delivery, so low have the old stocks been run.

Retailers, therefore, who have not contracted for their canned peas should delay no longer. Prices are sure not to be lower and there is every possibility of them going up. Of course there is the limited price when stock will be imported.

Demand for peas has rapidly been soaring in recent years and retailers should pay particular attention to this article.

DOES NOT HIT INDIVIDUALS.

President J. Gibson, and Secretary Sargeant, of the Canadian Commercial Travelers' Association, Toronto, are visiting British Columbia, making inquiries into the working of the new tax imposed on corporations by that province. They report that it is intended to hit only incorporated stock companies of limited liability, and no tax is imposed upon individuals who sell on their own account. A commission merchant, therefore, residing at Toronto, Winnipeg or Calgary, selling goods for himself rather than for a company, which he represents, can do business without interference in British Columbia.

ANALYSIS OF MILK.

Bulletin No. 208 has just been issued by the Inland Revenue Department in reference to condensed and evaporated milk inspection. The results are set out in tabulated form and Chief Analyst McGill states that "an inspection of these tables shows that considerable care is taken in the manufacture of concentrated milk. In most cases the difference in fat value between the averages for 1908 and 1910 is less than one-half of one per cent.; and with a legalized standard to be met, it is reasonable to believe that future inspections of this article will show still more constancy and uniformity in the output.

"Attention has more than once been called to the misuse of the term cream in naming unsweetened condensed milk. The word cream has a perfectly definite and well understood signification, and is legally defined as follows: 'Cream is that portion of milk, rich in milk fat, which rises to the surface of milk on standing, or is separated from it by centrifugal force, is fresh and clean, and contains (unless otherwise specified), not less than eighteen (18) per cent. of milk fat.'

"It is manifestly misleading to apply such a term to the article tabulated in Table II. Such an article is more truly described as Evaporated Milk, and is defined for purposes of the Act as follows: 'Evaporated milk is milk from which a considerable portion of water has been evaporated, and contains not less than 26 per cent. of milk solids, and not less than 7.20 per cent. of milk fat.'

"Evaporated milk is quantitatively defined in terms of Total Milk Solids, and Milk Fat."

In the case of Evaporated Milk the standard for total solids is placed at 26 per cent. and 7.2 for milk fat.

"The standards in question," says Mr. McGill, "have been adopted after very careful study of the subject, and the fact they they are fully met by three brands out of 9, and are met within one half of one per cent. of fat by six proves that the requirements are reasonable."

For condensed milk the corresponding standard limits are 28 p.c. of milk solids and 7.7 per cent. of fat. The fat percentage is the more important.

"Twelve brands of 23 reach the required standard for fat, while five other come within one-half of one per cent. of its requirements. Of the remaining brands some are professedly manufactured from skimmed milk. This finding would therefore seem to support the reasonableness of our standards, as regards milk fat content for Condensed Milk."

ATTEND THE EXHIBITIONS.

During the next few weeks fairs and exhibitions will be in progress in almost every city, town and village throughout the Dominion, and merchants generally, should receive direct benefit from these exhibitions.

There are several reasons why the merchants should interest themselves in the various exhibits. In the first place an exhibition of goods brings out the science of display. Many of the exhibits are designed and arranged by experts or by men who give the display feature considerable thought. By studying the display methods in the various booths the merchant will unconsciously carry away many ideas, which will assist him in keeping up the appearance and attraction of his own store.

An excellent opportunity is also given the merchant to secure knowledge about the goods which he sells. An adequate knowledge of all goods in the retail stock is necessary in order to make satisfactory sales. The merchant and his clerks are afforded no better opportunity to study the goods, which he has in his store at home, then at the ex- in his store at home, than at the exhibitor to show the goods and explain every part and every feature of the article. And every merchant knows how valuable such information is when he is trying to sell the article to a customer.

Let the merchants and their employes everywhere take advantage of the fair or exhibition in their own community, and elsewhere if possible, with the definite object in view to gather hints whereby they can improve their own business.

APPLES NOT PROMISING.

It is now a certainty that the apple crop is not going to be up to the average in the various provinces of the Dominion, with the exception of British Columbia. This refers more particularly to winter apples and means that next winter apples will be expensive property.

Fruit men in Western Ontario say that there will not likely be any for export. The June drop in the prospects was very heavy throughout Ontario. The same applies to Southwestern Quebec, where the crop with the exception of early varieties will be below the average.

In New Brunswick, due to prolonged wet weather at the wrong time, apples will be light. The Annapolis, Cornwallis and Gaspereau valleys of Nova Scotia are not promising for anything better than the average. Other sections are better, but still others are worse, and it is estimated that the exports from Nova Scotia will not exceed 350,000 barrels this year, or less than one-half of last year's exports, This is a conservative estimate.

Late frosts in Prince Edward Island caused considerable injury.

The chief causes assigned for the above rather gloomy conditions are unfavorable weather, and the fact that trees have been exhausted to some extent by having borne so many good crops in the past.

British Columbia, however, will likely show a substantial increase, not only in apples, but in pears, plums and apricots.

STRENGTHENING THE FIRM.

The idea of holding annual conferences is spreading among manufacturers and it would be a good thing if retail firms with large staffs would do the same.

Last week the Canadian traveling staff of the Quaker Oats Co. met at Peterboro, and after their business conference went for a boat trip on the nearby lakes.

Such meetings and outings serve to bring about an interchange of ideas and to promote sociability. Several retail firms have learned this and annually have some sort of a sociable time. But the idea should spread a little faster.

IGNORANCE IN CUTTING PRICES.

Imagine a grocer buying a crate of berries at 14 cents a box and selling them at 15 cents. And yet this is known to have occurred and represents a type of merchant, namely the man who is in the grocery business and knows more about guiding a plow or running a machine—the work from which he was lured by prospects of a snap and a little grocery store to call his own.

The illustrations of sheer ignorance of even the first principles would scarcely be believed unless seen. The man who bought and sold the berries mentioned above was guided by his neighbor. A third party relates the story as follows: "I had bought berries which were even better than his and I paid only twelve cents. That allowed me three cents a box and I was satisfied. I saw this buyer and engaged in conversation with him only to find that the wholesale fruitman had "beaten" him. I told him that he would have to sell the berries for more than fifteen cents to make a half decent profit, but he replied that his neighbor was selling at 15 cents and he would have to do the same. I saw that he was trying to follow a nearby grocer as to selling price, but he had entirely overlooked the buying price."

Another grocer was recently known to be losing ten cents on every basket of cherries he handled and was tickled because he was disposing of five or six baskets a day. A third was buying potatoes by the barrel, paying 30 cents a peck, and was retailing them by the peck and receiving just 30 cents.

These three examples are not fictitious at all. They show just how little some people know of business.

A traveler stated the other day that he often finds similar instances of an entire lacking of the business sense and further that when he pointed out in a kindly manner that the grocer was losing money the latter became angry. Others of course were happy to learn the truth.

When a grocer finds competitors underselling him and from actual ignorance of the essentials of business, he is tempted to let them go, but one store of this kind has a demoralizing effect on all the others in the community. The man who sold the cherries losing ten cents on each basket would have sold twenty-five baskets during the day if more buyers had known the price at which he was selling. In these cases the man who does not know ought to be pitied and mildly corrected.

COMPETITORS AS FRIENDS.

Friendly relations between competitors in the same town are always pleasing to hear and more particularly when there is no trade association. Organization naturally brings men closer together and tends to make them appreciate one another.

Here is an instance told by a representative of The Canadian Grocer in Manitoba:

"I have for a long time been thinking that trade conditions were improving and even that the world was getting better, but this has never been more satisfactorily demonstrated to me than when this week I met two rival merchants in a Manitoba village standing together, talking about matters in the most friendly manner. I introduced myself to the one who was pointed out to me as the merchant for whom I was looking, and he at once introduced me to the other as his friend in the same line of business.

"After I made myself feel sure that I did not misunderstand, I congratulated them on the elevated position they had attained in commercial life, and when I explained to them the object of my visit they subscribed for The Canadian Grocer, each paying half. It will be read by them both. While I would have preferred a subscription from each, I never was better pleased by any favor on the road, than with this particular and unique expression of good feeling between rival merchants."

Let the merchants all take a lesson from this and eliminate their petty jealousies. They should not only "live and let live," but live and help others to live, and all will benefit by the system.

EVILS OF PRICE CUTTING.

Price-cutting among merchants is always a source of trouble. Bad feeling is produced and profits are sacrificed in order to outdo the other fellow. Sometimes the results are disastrous.

A striking instance has recently come to light. In an Ontario town there were eight stores. Price-cutting was started and carried on, and ultimately five stores were obliged to go out of business.

One of the survivors, interviewed in the matter, said he attributed these failures to an epidemic of price-slashing, from which the benefit to the merchant was negligible and which disorganized the normal buying habit. He believes in keen competition, but at the same time, in being on friendly terms with competitors. A Merchants' Association once existed in his town, but fell through. He recognizes that such an association is desirable and that at the present time, were it in existence, advance prices could be more easily secured and that, instead of merchants being afraid of setting prices higher than other competitors, they could, through mutual agreement, and as the result of co-operation, apply advances in accordance with increased cost. Such an association, he thinks, should not be formed only of town merchants, but country storekeepers in the surrounding district should be induced to join.

It is quite legitimate to cut prices of some lines as leaders to make a drawing attraction to induce customers into the store, but regular goods should not be marked away up beyond reasonable prices to make up for reductions on special lines. They should rather strengthen the impression of good values made on the customer, so that, as has been observed, clerks may be enthusiastic over values generally. It is impossible for them to be so if they discover that pricing is not based on sound merchandizing principles.

ST. JOHN BOARD WITHDRAWS.

The St. John, N.B., Board of Trade has definitely decided not to send delegates to the annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade, at Chatham, N.B., this year. At last year's meeting the local board withdrew and they have not since, it is stated, found reasons for re-affiliating.

Puzzle to Know what Constitutes a "Good" Grocer

So Writes a Traveler Who Has Visited Grocers in all Parts of the Dominion—The Varieties He Meets With and Something About the Jealousies in the Trade—Watching One's Competitors.

By F. R. Mortimer.

The more one comes in contact with the great army of grocers, as he wanders from city to town and town to hamlet through the Dominion, the more is he puzzled to know what constitutes a good grocer. He meets with so many different dispositions and methods of doing business that he is entirely at a loss to frame a description that will include them all.

There is the jolly good fellow, the sensible dignified business man, the hot headed quick-tempered crank, the sullen stubborn nature, the particularly wise mortal, the rough and ready, the polished and the unpolished, the courteous and the rude. All these varieties of grocers are trying to do their best to serve the public.

One thing strikes the observer as very evident, and this that they did not all attend the same school, and that there is no regular system of training. The majority must simply have "growed up" to be grocers, without having been goverened by any fundamental rules or without the idea that the business they were in was a science pure and simple, and that it was only another instance of the survival of the fittest. Some have developed into excellent merchants, and are a credit to themselves and their towns. Others are fairly successful, while many others are far below the average, and are absolute failures. But even the poorest have some qualities which the best of them might copy and practice with profit. What a vast amount of strength and improvement could be gained by the grocery trade if they would learn to drop the error of jealousy and unitedly work to raise the standard of their trade.

Narrow Minds in the Trade.

If the entire trade were carefully examined it would be found that the majority of cases of trade bigotry and narrow, petty ideas, would be found among the small dealers.

It is among the small traders, those who are struggling along, that this spirit predominates. Thank goodness there are some in this class who are worthy of the name of being grocers, even if they have not yet made their mark. It is also sad to think of the number of the more prosperous, who are guilty of the same charge. What excellent merchants could be produced by sifting out the best of the experiences of the many? Where would there be a chance for any mechanic, etc., to open a business without previous training had he to compete with a class of grocers, who would be developed in that manner.

It is some consolation to know that a large number of the trade are getting away from that delusion that the individual gains something by withholding knowledge from others. Just a little bit of the milk of human kindness—that which gives rise to the fellowship of man—would go a long way to improving the personal relations existing among the trade.

Much to Learn.

Do not imagine that you know all about the grocery business. Those who are possessed of that opinion are generally not as wise as they think they are. A grocer of this kind is monarch of all he surveys within the walls of his own store, but beyond that he cares for nothing except to watch the door of his competitor to see how many of his customers enter there.

The history of the grocery trade tells of hundreds of this kind. They tried to watch the business of each of their customers, only to come to grief with such a burden on their shoulders.

The man of small ideas is not the big successful man, no matter in what line you investigate. It is said that competition is the life of trade; and doubtless it is true to a certain extent, but it is lamentable that it is responsible for much of the envy, and antagonism that exists in trade.

Sudbury Grocers are Looking Out for Legitimate Profits

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 10.—The newly formed Retail Grocers' Association held another full meeting last week and every member voiced his sentiments in favor of the organization. The proceedings were noted for the good fellowship displayed and for the unanimous votes given to each motion.

The members expect that their association will before long remove many of the difficulties now besetting the trade.

One question discussed was the fixed selling price for certain lines and the prices on lines showing a bare margin of profit. It was decided that each member compile a list and that a committee of the whole decide what is a fair legitimate profit on these lines. The new prices are expected to go into operation next week.

The transient traders have proved a sore point calling for immediate and drastic action. The license fee here is only $50, and it is remarkable the amount of damage an active, hustling transient can do for this comparatively small sum. He comes into town with his car of produce, apples, potatoes, etc., sells what he can to the merchants and then proceeds to peddle his surplus to the householder at any price. But according to the grocers he will have his license fee raised. If this cannot be done, the merchants say they will not purchase his goods so that in any case he is not going to have such an easy time.

NOVA SCOTIA CROPS.

Everything Promises Well With the Exception of Fruits.

Halifax, N.S., Aug. 10.—M. Cumming, secretary for Agriculture, has just issued the Provincial Government crop report. The report in part says:—

Hay crop, immense; grain, potatoes, roots, excellent; pastures never better; live stock flourishing—in fact, a record year for the general farmer; but, fruit, a dismal failure. Such is the season of 1910. Even including the failure in fruit it will be a great year for Nova Scotia. There will be fodder in abundance, and the farmer will be encouraged to multiply his live stock holdings, and those animals that he now possess will be in better thrift and give greater returns than for years. And it will not be all lost in the fruit sections. The trees are growing and storing up food for other years' crops. This year's famine is the precursor of record fruit years to come.

TRADE NOTES.

O. S. Matchett, representative of Chas. Rishor, wholesale grocer, Peterboro, Ont., was a visitor at the Toronto office of The Grocer on Monday.

At a meeting of the creditors of Godard Bros, general merchants, of Elgin, Albert County, N.B., held last week, liabilities were shown to be $20,000. An offer of 50 cents in thirty days was accepted, and a committee appointed to secure the approval of the other creditors.

H. L. Nelson and H. M. McLellan, of Campbellton, N.B., general merchants, have assigned to Sheriff Stewart. The liabilities are $6,500 and assets, $3,500.

Elizabeth Henderson, Philadelphia; Harriete McCready, John T. McCready, Kenneth J. MacRae, St. John, and Percy E. Fownes, of Sydney, are applying for incorporation as McCready & Son, Ltd., to carry on the vinegar and pickle business of Thomas McCready & Sons, of this city. The capital stock is $50,000 and the head office of the company will be in Fairville, St. John County, N.B.

The annual picnic for the employes and their families, given by the Montreal Biscuit Co., took place on Saturday, July 30th. The destination of the 300 who took in the event was Hudson, Que. A special train took them out and returned in the evening. A program of sports occupied the greater part of the afternoon, among which was one special event for the confectionery jobbers who were invited to attend.

The Grocery Clerk in the Eyes of the Employer

Calgary Grocer's Experience With the Variety Who are out of the Store Before the Whistle Stops Blowing—Merchant Thinks the Clerk Should Receive Fair Wages—One of the Latter Gives His Opinion on Employers.

With the exception of regular payments on the part of customers and a steadily growing business there is nothing more satisfying to the average grocer than the hearty co-operation of his staff of clerks. The knowledge that those in his employ are taking a deep interest in the welfare of the store, that they realize the importance of the part they play in the building up of their employer's success is a guarantee that things are running smoothly.

W. C. Miller, a Toronto grocer, pointed out recently that the men who have attained success in the trade are for the most part those who have served as clerks. They had a fixed idea that they were going into the grocery business and they gradually learned its fine points until there was nothing left for them but to go into business for themselves or plug along working as an employe instead of an employer.

As has been frequently said, the clerk is advancing his own interests by doing his best to advance those of the grocer with whome he is engaged. But it is difficult to impress this basic principle upon many of the youth of the present day. At least that is an idea that largely obtains among the trade.

To Enthuse His Clerks.

And of the various reports of this kind, a recent one is recalled of a Calgary grocer, who wrote asking for advice on this very point. He wanted his clerks to feel that he was to a certain extent dependent on them, that he needed their best efforts. He wished to discourage a tendency to "jump into their coats when the whistle blows," but rather to leave the store in a clean, tidy condition for the next day. He wanted them to take a special care in their personal appearance, in other words he wanted them to be alive to his business.

How Conditions Vary.

A little advice was offered in regard to this query by one of the members of R. Barron, Ltd., one of Toronto's large retail grocers.

Mr. Barron said:

"It is not an easy matter for one grocer to offer advice to another on account of the many differences that may exist between them and their methods of doing business. What would apply to one might not be suitable to another and so on.

"A clerk should be receiving fair wages. Of course in any case the trade is not noted for large envelopes to the clerks. The young men of to-day are being attracted into other branches of work by shorter hours, less work and generally more money. There is one class of men that are not worth keeping. They are those who are not workers. They are found now and then in every branch of life and the grocer who has one on his staff might just as well let him go, replacing him by a worker. There is another kind, the man who has a chronic demand for more money. A grocer should know what wages he can afford and after that the clerk who is not satisfied should look for some other place."

Mr. Barron stated that he had never tried the plan of offering a bonus to clerks for best sales, but fancied that it should be helpful.

Preparing for the Business.

Grocers agree that the best results are obtained from clerks who have the ambition of having a business of their own in future years. With this incentive they put forth their best efforts because their hearts are in the work. They should not be content with the store in which they are employed, but by reading and visiting other stores they will get a wider knowledge of methods.

A grocer may depend upon it that a great deal of influence radiates from himself. If he is careless, untidy and happy-go-lucky, it is only natural to expect the same from his clerks. If he plays the races, goes to the ball games during working hours, takes a day off any old time, opens the store late in the morning, etc., similar failings in his clerks would not be a surprise.

"If the grocer wants to get the best results from his clerks," said one of them, "he should first look over his own grounds. What are the conditions in the store? What is the grocer doing—for it depends largely upon himself—to win the interest of his clerks? He knows what conditions should exist and they vary largely in different stores. Mutual respect and confidence will go a long way to securing ideal relations. The grocer has many means at his disposal whereby he can get the enthusiasm he desires.

"Clerks should be possessed of a love for salesmanship and they should be helped in this respect as much as possible. They should know the cost of goods and know how to "talk" them. This requires confidence from the proprietor and reading by the clerk, and so on. There are so many means at the grocer's disposal when he thinks about the question that it should not puzzle him to solve it to his satisfaction."

Uniform Containers for Produce and for Fruit are Proposed

The superintendent of the New York State Department of Weights and Measures is advocating uniform containers for fruit and produce. For instance he suggests that there be used one size of barrel, which should contain a certain amount, within certain specified variations, and then establish a half barrel and a quarter barrel, bushel and half bushel boxes. The exact size of the barrel is a matter which should be agreed upon between the various interests concerned.

There are, roughly, he says, over 100 different forms and sizes of barrels in use in the State, and when used for the shipment of a certain commodity to a section where that commodity is not grown it is unfit to use a second time. Consequently it is destroyed, and the value of the container is practically always neglected. If there were one size of barrel then that barrel, whereever it went, could be used over and over again and would tend toward a great decrease in wastefulness, and would certainly save many a tree which is now cut down to be sawed up into barrel staves, which are used but once.

Canada's Imports of Sugar Products from the Barbadoes

For the year ending June 30, 1909, Canada imported 6,472 tons of sugar from the Barbadoes. Up to June 30, 1910, the figures are 21,724 tons or more than 3 times as much. The respective figures on molasses are 40,703 puncheons and 43,133 puncheons. Canada took 70 per cent. of the total exports from the Barbadoes of sugar products.

CUSTOMS IN THE BARBADOS.

E. H. S. Flood, Canadian trade commissioner, Barbados, in referring to certificates of origin, customs regulations and forms of invoice, states that in the West Indies no specific forms of invoice or certificate are required. Importers in passing entries through the customs are required to make a declaration as to the marks and number of the packages, their contents and value, which must be supported by the original invoice.

Exporters should, therefore, see that invoices accompany all shipments, and it is desirable in these invoices to specify the contents of each package of goods, showing the weights and quantities in every instance where possible, together with the values. The cost of freight, packing, insurance, etc., should be kept separate from the actual cost of the goods, as should also the cost of the outer package. Misstatements are likely to render the goods liable to seizure.

Although no certificate of origin is required, in some of the islands a statement as to the country of origin is asked for, and there is a tendency in introducing amendments in the customs regulations to require this to be stated. Exporters would, therefore, do well to state the country of origin on their invoices.

The customs regulations of the several West India islands are almost identical, and the above are the chief points of interest to exporters.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Sugar—Decline of 10c.
Filberts—Decline of ½c.
Shelled Walnuts—5c higher.
Beans—7½c higher.

Montreal, Aug. 11, 1910.

Two features of the past week are outstanding in this city. They are the settlement of the G.T.R. strike and the 10c decline in sugar. The former has eased up the fresh fruit and milk situation, and has allowed trade in these lines to assume more normal proportions. Incidentally the strikers were not buying more than the necessities while out of work, while now they can afford to live in the former style. It makes a great difference to the grocer whether a customer is hard up or not.

The drop in refined sugar went into effect last Thursday at 1.30, and was a surprise, even to some of the large jobbers. This was particularly so in view of the advance of some grades the week previous. Even the drop has not seemed to benefit trade much as yet, but of course it is still rather early to judge justly of the effect.

With the Eucharistic Congress coming on in the near future, local jobbers are preparing for a large out-of-town list of visiting customers. Various guesses as to the number of strangers who will attend have been hazarded, but they differ so widely that only time can settle the question. There is no doubt that local trade will be greatly benefited by this influx. In view of this celebration trade has already begun to improve, and jobbers say that things are starting fully as well as can be expected.

Many country buyers have been in town recently, and they have apparently come to buy, and that largely. Taken in conjunction with the increased city trade, it makes a promising outlook.

Sugar—Sugar finally dropped, as was briefly reported in last week's Grocer. The decline was 10c for all the grades. At first it was thought that the raw market must have weakened sufficiently to cause the drop, but the refiners say it was due to a decided slackening in the demand for refined. There is not so much fruit, etc., being done up as this is a between season. Coming after the 10c advance in the two grades last week, it changes the whole aspect of the market.

Trade continues dull at the reduction, but refiners hope that the change will give a sufficient stimulus to the market to improve matters in the near future.

Coffee—A coffee man who has made a careful study of conditions pertaining to the coffee trade, made the statement recently that per capita consumption of coffee in this country was largely on the increase. Added to that the constant increase by increase of population, and it looks as if there would be plenty of room for all those at present in the business and then some.

The local market remains firm, especially Rio and Santos. There seems to be a slightly weaker tone creeping into other lines, however.

Prices continue firm, and in the case of peppers somewhat higher in the primary markets. Red pepper is exceptionally high, Japan chillies selling for 25c to the retailer.

Dried Fruits—From present indications there will be little left of the last year's stocks when the new comes on the market. The demand is showing a decided improvement, and this is helping to shorten stocks.

Recent despatches from Greece say that currants are higher, but so far this has not been confirmed. However, there is no doubt that the situation is a firm one, and an advance would not be at all unexpected.

Prunes continue to have a strong demand, especially for the better grades. Prices all through are the same.

Nuts—Walnuts and filberts are scarce, and the lines of shelled walnuts and filberts are both higher. Bordeaux halves are now selling at 32½c to 35c, while filberts are up ½c.

Trade is brisk for the lines mentioned, and nearly all lines are in better demand than at this time last year.

Almonds promise to be higher. Recent reports are being confirmed as to the crop damage, and this will probably send prices to a higher level.

that several of the large apple evaporators will not be put in commission this year, and as a result high prices are looked for in this year's crop. However, it is too early to know definitely whether this is the case. At present there is no change in the local situation.

Beans and Peas—Beans are up to $2.02½, an advance of 7½c over former quotations. A brisk demand is the cause of the change. There is none too much high grade stock on the market, however, and this has undoubtedly helped considerably.

Peas are rather quiet, and there is no change whatever in the situation of last week.

Rice and Tapioca—Tapioca is scarce on spot, and it looks as if an advance would be the order of the day in the near future. The quiet state of present trade, however, seems to have had a deterrent influence so far. How long this will continue to do so is what local men are trying to determine.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—A new schedule of salmon and meat prices is out. In the former practically all lines are higher, while in the latter, the ones to change have also advanced.

Labor on the Pacific coast is said to be hard to obtain, that is the cheap Asiatic labor, and as a result prices had to go up.

As to the meats there is such a high market for fresh meats that an advance in many lines became necessary.

Vegetables are unchanged and peas in particular are scarce. Sales are good for the few obtainable.

TORONTO—There is considerable disappointment among the wholesale and retail trade over the short pack of peas. Jobbers state that they have sold all their holdings. While it seems improbable that all the peas are sold, still of those from whom enquiries were made they could not offer even a single case. The jobber books his orders for fall deliveries of certain lines of canned goods during the spring or early summer months and about this time sends in his orders to the canners. The pea pack was so short that only a percentage of the orders can be filled. One jobber stated that he was receiving only 250 out of every 1,000 cases he ordered. The result is that the retailers are receiving only a percentage of their orders, the jobbers equalizing as much as possible among their customers. Some of the jobbers state that the peas they ordered have all been used up, which simply means that grocers who neglected to order peas will be without any stocks unless they can secure them from some other source than those mentioned.

A retailer stated that he knew jobbers who were selling new peas at the price of the old stock, a difference of about fifteen cents. There was a general denial of this but it was admitted that the price should be at the old figures and further that it will not be long until they are exceeded.

Apparently the new packs of corn and tomatoes will be up to the average. The tomato crop seems to be coming along better than was expected and corn is reported to be plentiful although in some cases the statements are not as unanimous regarding corn. The late planting and dry weather has, it is said, not had a beneficial effect and corn may not be up to the mark. This is not generally held, however.

In regard to salmon, the Skeena river catch has up to the present been much better than was expected but even this will not have any effect on the prices that have been quoted.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—
Canned Peas—Scarce and firm.
Nuts—Firm.
Spices—Active and firm.
Sugar—Decline of 10 cents.

Toronto, Aug. 11, 1910.

One of the surprises of the past month or two was the break in the sugar market last week when a decline of ten cents all the way down the list was declared. This was preceded by the announcement of an increase of ten cents in the second grade granulated and also by reports of certain strength in the primary markets. Enquiry among the jobbers does not find any instances of the various houses being caught with heavy stocks on their hands. Retailers are practically in the same box and it is given as one reason for the decline that it was meant to stimulate trade. This is a reason coming from a jobber. On the other hand the manufacturers state that the trade has been quite active. At any rate, the decline was a surprise. From now until the new crop is felt there will be heavy demands made on sugar supplies. The latter part of August should bring heavy buying and September is a particularly good month. The new price is stirring up trade but it is not expected that there will be a return to the former quotation.

Spices are also moving out more rapidly now.

In regard to canned goods a dealer stated that the recent pack of peas was the smallest recorded here in quite a number of years. None of the jobbers are receiving more than 60 per cent. of their orders, but the percentage being handed out by canners is down as low as 25 per cent. The trade is a unit in voicing the opinion that the original prices for peas are doomed to an early death and the existing conditions strongly support statements of that character. Tomatoes are likely to be an average pack in spite of the reports to the contrary; at least there is more confidence expressed now. Corn should be a fairly good crop, but it is remarked that it would need to be with other lines running short. It might be once more repeated that canned goods of practically every kind are valuable property.

Sugar—At the lower price sugar is moving freely before a good demand. A brief note appeared in last week's issue announcing a decrease of ten cents in all sugars as the paper was on the press at the time the decrease was announced. There have been statements to the effect that sugar buying was not as heavy as a few weeks ago but the general opinion is that there has been a steady movement which should take on a new acceleration in a short time. The primary market is fairly strong, but the reports regarding the new crop are favorable. The decline was not unwelcome to retailers who are now doing their heaviest trade in sugar.

Dried Fruits.—Trade is rather quiet in these markets. There have been some currants bought by jobbers at speculative prices. Regarding the new crop, reports from Greece state that the weather is now favorable but that it is too late to have much of an effect. The yield is expected to be 140,000 tons as compared with 185,000 tons last year. Currants are now from 2 to 3 shillings higher than when they opened a year ago. Another advice on the crop is as follows:

"The crop is likely to be 150,000 tons, provided there is no further damage, as against about 180,000 tons last year's crop. As the weather in Greece is now settled, it is not likely that further damage will be done, and it would therefore seem that the crop will not be below the figure given above. Shippers state that it will not be the middle of August before the position is clearly defined, as it is at that time that the Privileged Company and the growers come to a final settlement."

In regard to the raisin crop in Spain the weather is said to be unfavorable and the crop is likely to be small in quantity, and the quality is likely to suffer from drought as the grapes will hardly ripen. One report concludes, "Higher prices must be expected." The prices for the new raisin crop should be out next week. The California prune crop is likely to be short, one estimate being to the effect that it will not be more than half an average.

Teas.—According to one authority stocks of Indian tea the world over are light and when it is considered that Ceylon shipments since the beginning of the year are several million pounds behind last year, there is ground for belief that for some months to come, India teas will command high prices.

First crop Japans are finished and the second crops are being picked. In spite of fairly active buying on all the markets, the shortage continues to be over a million pounds as compared with last year, while up to the end of June the export to America was less than half what it was up to the same date last year. While opinions are divided regarding the second crop, reports from the interior state that it is likely to be abundant and of good quality, but that the picking of it will be somewhat slow as the farmers are busy in the rice field. Regarding China teas the quality of the offerings is reported not entirely satisfactory. Prices are high, however. Much better tea is looked for in the second crop.

"The market for 1910 Valencia almonds is open. They are quoted around 32½ cents. The new crop Tarragonas figure about 15½ cents in Chicago. The crop is estimated as being from 25 to 30 per cent. short."

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS—

Dried Fruits.—Firmer.
Syrup.—Advanced prices.
Sugar.—Decline of 10 cents.
Beans.—Decline of 10 cents.

Winnipeg, August 10, 1910.

The trade has not been disappointed in last week's indication of an advancing market. It is believed that the markets in western Canada have been suppressed on account of the prevailing opinion that business was to be dull in the west this fall. Now that there is little foundation for that idea so far as the crop condition is concerned, and also because merchants are buying freely, market restraints have disappeared. Such lines as are quoted below are having a heavy export demand, and crop conditions in the southern and western states are not particularly favorable. It is only reasonable to expect much better prices than are being quoted at present.

Sugar.—A reduction of 10 cents has been made on the local market following advices from Montreal and New York. It is believed that the reports of shortages from Cuba were unduly enlarged upon, and this kept the market firm for some days. The output from local wholesale houses has been disappointing during the preserving season so far.

Foreign Dried Fruits.—All goods are advancing. Limited crop and heavy exportations are sending prices up. California packers have given the trade due warning and it now looks as if their predictions are to be verified. The advances are more marked in California raisins and prunes, although currants and nectarines have been just up a few cents.

Syrup and Molasses.—Importers and jobbers have become active in moving off a large quantity of syrup recently and the trade is buying now for fall and winter stock. There is always an excellent market in western Canada in the fall for syrup and molasses and the output this year is sure to surpass that of any previous year. The following prices are an advance of 10 cents and are only nominal as it is believed the market will go up several points in the near future.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, N.S., Aug. 11, 1910.

Business during the past week improved considerably, the volume of orders coming in from outside points being greater than the previous week. Collections are also improving and general conditions are satisfactory.

Some of the retail grocers this week received large consignments of small tubs of fresh made dairy butter. It is a long time since such quantities of butter in this form reached the market; 22 cents was the price paid for most of this stock.

Native grown tomatoes advanced 2 cents per pound this week. They are now retailing at 18 cents per pound, but at these figures there is only a fair demand.

Old potatoes are about done and the new stock now on the market is selling at $2.75 per barrel. These potatoes are small, but of good quality.

All lines of fruit are in good demand. Mediterranean oranges are very high, being quoted at $5.50 to $6.25, an advance of 50 cents over the previous week. Plums are now down to $2, and California pears are quoted at $3 per box.

There is a marked scarcity of raspberries this season and in consequence prices are high.

Mackerel have again struck in along the coast and some of the fishermen have made fairly good catches during the past week. Mackerel are in exceptionally good demand, as the catch on the U. S. coast this season is small.

Halifax has never had the reputation of being an importer of fish, a special department being the export of this commodity. On board of the steamer Carthaginian, which arrived here the past week, was a shipment of Irish mackerel for Halifax merchants.

There is not much doing in the molasses trade at present, but imports are still coming along. The schooner Victoria recently landed here 210 puncheons, 41 hogsheads and 42 barrels. Sugar declined 10 cents during the week.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., Aug. 11,1910.

Oatmeal advanced 25 cents last week and sugar declined 10 cents. Rolled oats are now selling at $5.50 to $5.60 and standard at $6.10 and $6.20. Granulated sugar is quoted at $5.10 to $5.30 and yellows at $4.70 to $5.10. Eggs have advanced to 25 and 26 cents a dozen.

A local wholesale fruit dealer in speaking of the outlook for apples this season said the indications were that the crop of New Brunswick apples would be smaller than usual, while Nova Scotia and Ontario crops looked none too bright. Prices were likely to be higher than usual.

Keep in mind the dominant fact that mankind from its first appearance on the earth has been schooled by nature to look for signs; for invitations to taste; for suggestions as to what to wear. Tell your story briefly, forcibly, truthfully, and address it through the proper media and you can successfully apply advertising as a means to increased distribution.

The Productiveness of Jamaica and the Progress Being Made

"It is like gilding refined gold to talk of Jamaica's wonderful productiveness nowadays," says a writer in the British Export Gazette, "and of that market's consequent powers of recuperation after periods of disaster. On the other hand, I cannot allow to pass without a word of appreciation the Administration's action in utilizing present prosperity for the removal of some of the burdens with which trade is afflicted. The customs duties on condensed milk, tools, pumps, fencing and iron roofing are being entirely removed, while that on soap is being reduced by 50 per cent. These duties always have been purely revenual, and in no sense protective, and it is only justice—though I must confess a rare form of justice—that their hampering influence on mercantile operations should be removed at the earliest possible moment. In only too many cases the business community are regarded as the natural bearers of financial burdens and the last to receive official relief or assistance of any kind.

"It is especially satisfactory to note, in this connection, that so much effort is being made in many quarters to secure more capital for the island's industries on the strength of the present upward tendency. When our special commissioner was visiting Jamaica recently he vividly realized how full development was being retarded by lack of financial enterprise, and the same note was struck by a speaker at the last meeting of the Colonial Bank, who pointed out that to the beautiful climate, rich soil, and cheap labor, it was only necessary to add capitalists willing to plant new areas and instal up-to-date machinery. In this connection, by the way, the proposal to start a central sugar mill near Kingston is taking more definite shape, and is naturally viewed with keen enthusiasm by the planters."

Reasons for Advanced Honey Prices this Year

Honey Exchange Committee Look Forward to Good Year and Advise Members of Association to Hold Part of Yield for Later Delivery—Temporary Shortage of Pork Products Causes Prices to Advance Slightly While Live and Dressed Hogs are Quoted Much Lower—Rest of Markets are About Normal.

The general provision markets show easier prices for live hogs as the result of rather plentiful supplies, but pork products in the most cases are slightly higher due to temporary short supplies. General trade is said to be good with bacon considerably on the increase. Compound lard has advanced a half cent a pound owing to the advance in the price of oils.

Butter in the west is lower in production than last year due to drought. There is a good demand also in the east where shipments of cream across the border are steadily growing. To build up an export trade lower prices are a necessity on this side of the water.

Cheese has been rather quiet during the week. In the majority of places production keeps up and the price at country points has passed the eleven cent mark.

Up to the present honey seemed to be opening on a strong market. Some members of the trade state that they are still feeling the effects of the strike although conditions are rapidly reaching their former state.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—Hogs are more plentiful this week, and as a result prices of both live and dressed are 50c lower. A few minor changes in other lines have taken place, but nothing of any great moment. Trade is said to be very good for this time of year and is steadily on the up-grade. Dealers are optimistic over the outlook.

Bacon trade has showed the best increase lately, although all lines have had their share.

Butter.—For the first time in the history of the Eastern Townships they have sent in to Montreal for butter. The order was received by a local house from Beebe Plains, Que. The reason given for the order was the inability to obtain sufficient cream, owing to the amount going to the States. This goes to show that this trade is increasing, though not much fuss is being made over it.

Receipts for the week are 14,666 packages as against 17,419 packages same week last year. For the season they are 235,434, as against 211,561 same week last year.

TORONTO.

Provisions—during the past week there was a sharp decline in the price of live and dressed hogs. The deliveries were liberal, and no difficulty was experienced in securing the live hogs. However, the prices of bacon and other products showed slight increases. This was accounted for by the short stocks of pork products. The advance is hardly expected to be held in the face of low prices in the primary market. The demand for these goods continues firm.

Honey—There are many indications of a strong market in honey. Recent reports about short supplies are not borne out by the meeting of the Honey Exchange Committee in connection with the Ontario Beekeepers' Association. It was reported then that there has been an increase of 60 per cent. in the number of hives in the province. It was also stated that there is practically no old honey left on the market. The average production per colony is slightly lower than that of last year, but this should be met to a large extent by the new hives. While the crop in the western and centre parts of the province, where the bulk of the marketable honey is produced, is lower than last year's, there is a much larger crop in the eastern counties, which has kept up the average. It might be said that if the production is below that of last year, the difference can scarcely be appreciable. However, the conditions of the other market are much that it is believed the demand will be greater than last year and prices will likely be higher.

Butter—Jobbers claim that the supply of dairy butter is fully 25 per cent. less than that of last year, due to drought. Creamery is selling for 24 cents this week, but firmer than usual. Dairy No. 1 is jobbing from 21 to 22 cents, and No. 2 at 17½ cents.

Eggs—The egg demand has weakened and prices, are not firm. Western shipments have fallen off somewhat. Supplies are quite plentiful, and the jobbing price is 20 cents.

Cheese—An excellent cheese trade is reported from all parts of the country. Manitoba stuff is firm at 12½, and the Ontario product is selling freely at 14 cents.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

C. H. Lee, manager of the Canada Spice & Grocery Co., Ltd., London, Ont., is at present visiting Winnipeg and other western centres in the interests of his firm. He is finding business good in spite of adverse crop prospects in some sections. He says that business men generally are optimistic, having implicit faith in the future of the west.

The Joseph Campbell Co. have just struck off a proof sheet, showing their new free electrotypes for dealers. There is a peculiar advantage about them. Instead of being entire advertisements allowing room for nothing but the dealer's name to be inserted, these cuts are in the form of headings and "eye-catchers," under which the dealer's own advertising can be printed. The advantage of this can be seen at a glance. A number of articles can be advertised along with such a cut, even in a small space. Their artistic quality is above criticism, like all such work by the Joseph Campbell Co. Every dealer who sells Campbell's Soups should read the offer to send these cuts free, and be prompt in sending for his share of electrotypes because they are bound to increase his sales of this profitable commodity.

Rolled Oats Market Presents Tone of Firmness

Price of Oats is High as Result of Poor Yield in the West—at Advanced Figures Market Holds and Trade Looks for Higher Figures—More Confidence is Shown in Flour Market.

Confidence in Canada's grain crops is being gradually restored and the question is being asked as to why the first reports should have been of such a stampeding nature. According to some westerners the United States press originated the stories in an attempt to arrest the exodus of farmers into Canada. After the wildness of the stories was lost upon the facts of saner reports the extent of the western crops began to climb the ladder down which it had so rapidly slid until now it is believed that the three provinces will produce at least 90,000,000 bushels. High prices will have a certain effect in discounting any light yield. Bradstreet's states that the first car of new wheat to arrive in Winnipeg recently showed excellent quality and sold at $1.01 a bushel. The market has not changed materially during the past week, but there is a slight improvement in the demand for export.

There is a firm tone to the rolled oats market in sympathy with the strength in the primary market. The oat crop has suffered more severely than the wheat, at least reports from the west are to that effect and prices have been advanced on the strength of it. Dealers report an encouraging demand for rolled oats and state that the export trade and the promises of it are good.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—Winter wheat flours are scarce and prices are firmly maintained, but there is so little to be found that there seems to be a higher tendency in the market. The demand for spring wheat continues fairly good, with prices unchanged.

Export demand is light this week, but some inquiries are reported.

Rolled Oats.—All lines of rolled oats are higher on account of reports of a shortage in the western oat crop. The new oatmeal price is $2.70, an advance of 27½c over last week. This change in the situation has given trade a distinct stimulus.

In cornmeal there has been also an advance. This is thought to be due rather to an increase in demand than to any crop reports, although there seems to be rather a shortage at present.

TORONTO.

Flour.—Blended flour is now quoted at prices higher than straight roller or patents. Local business remains fair. Reports regarding Ontario wheat are bright and the expectations for a heavy yield will undoubtedly be realized.

COMPARISON OF PRICES.

Present Quotations on Staples and Those Which Existed a Year Ago.

Variation in the price of staple articles is always a matter of interest to grocers. The changing season with their changing conditions affect in many ways the general markets but the grocer is apt to forget them. In the list published herewith will be found quotations on some of the most important staples. In the one column are the existing prices of the present week, in the next those that were quoted six months ago are given, and in the third column are the prices of a year ago. It will be seen that in no instance was there a steady price through the entire year. As has been pointed out frequently during the last six weeks, lemons are hovering at a high price, but it is only when a comparison is made with the figures of a year ago that the real difference is realized.

The prices following are Montreal quotations:—

The only difference between your flour and your competitor's is the demand—and quality makes that.

Claims the System of Buying Eggs to be at Fault

Professor at Macdonald College, Quebec, Gives His Opinion on Why He Maintains That Eggs are too High to the Consumer—Incidents That go to Show How Producer Includes Bad Eggs With the Good.

By Prof. F. C. Elford.

Considerable has been said about the cost of living, one thing and another is blamed, reasons have been given why meat, eggs, etc., are so high, some blame the producer others the middlemen, while the cold storage comes in for considerable censure.

As for eggs and dressed poultry, all of these causes may have something to do with the present high prices. The trouble, however, is not the price as much as the quality. One does not object to a good price if the paying of it ensures a good article, but when along with the high price the quality is poor, there may be some reason for the boycott of eggs.

Why should ordinary eggs be so high, eggs that are not guaranteed, just common eggs? The fault is not all the producer, nor is it all the buyer or the cold storage, but it belongs to the system.

It is almost needless to follow this system from the poultry yard to the consumer's table. It is very often a long and tedious trip, and in the warm weather, must be very trying. Probably 90 per cent. of the eggs are produced on the farm where the general rule is to dispose of them to the weekly egg peddler or take them to the store, where they are sold or traded for goods. In each case there is little or no discrimination. The peddler drives into one farm and gets 20 dozen good clean eggs that have been gathered during the week. The farmer's wife receives say 15 cents a dozen. The next farm is visited, here they are not so careful, and very often the hunting of the week's eggs are left until the day the peddler comes. Upon arrival he finds all kinds of eggs, good and bad and all stages between—they are bought at 15 cents a dozen. The producers do not care so long as they can sell them, and the peddler does not care as he is paid by the dozen for collecting, the more eggs the better. I heard of a peddler who was fond of telling his customers, that he would take "anything with a shell on, dirt and all, they all had a bath."

As long as buyers will accept these there are farmers who will sell them. I was at a meeting a few weeks ago when a woman asked, "what was to be done with stale or rotten eggs, if she couldn't sell them, she wouldn't eat them at home."

Only 30 Per Cent. New Laid.

A case of eggs came in the other day supposed to be absolutely new laid. On examination it was found that out of about 300 eggs, there were 90 new laid, 20 rotten, and the rest from stale to bad. On investigation, one woman, though she declared her eggs were fresh, at last admitted that she had put in some that may not have been good, but she didn't think it made any difference, as the eggs were being shipped away. It seems as if people have a different standard of morals when it comes to selling eggs.

Here then is the first fault in the system, the lack of that fine discrimination on the part of the producer. I wouldn't say that all people who sell bad eggs are dishonest. Many are, but they have been trained to it by the system, and this training process has been most thoroughly done all along the line.

We know how the country merchant is handicapped. A good customer comes in with 10 dozen eggs; of course, they are all fresh, but the store keeper knows they are no better than the last lot. He knows that hens do not lay so many more shiny-looking and discolored eggs during harvest and threshing time, but he can't speak for fear of losing trade. He can console himself with the thought that the wholesaler takes them case count anyway. And so it goes on. With some there seems to be a secret jubilation after having been paid for 20 dozen "fresh" eggs, 10 dozen of which were found under the stack.

Relation to Cost of Living.

What has all this to do with the cost of living or the high price of eggs? Let us look a little further. The good eggs from your farm and the bad eggs from mine find themselves in the same boxes, piled up in the same hot room waiting for the weekly trip of the wagon that collects for the wholesale house. My lot of eggs have been laid for from one to seven days, kept possibly not in the best of condition. They may reach the store just after the wagon has left, and must wait another week. Store room is not always the best, and by the time they are on the second wagon, the fertile eggs are well on to the broiler stage, the infertile eggs have partaken of the odors of the stale eggs, and groceries until the best of them are hardly fit for food. When they arrive at the wholesale storehouse they are from one to three weeks old. There they are candled and sorted into various grades.

A produce man told me the other day that at this time of the year they counted on from 2 to 6 dozen in every case, as being absolutely bad; none of them are good. The wholesaler, however, has no intention of losing on these eggs, and has set his prices accordingly. The same price is paid for all, but he hopes that there will be enough good to make his own and a margin. He therefore has to charge the city retailer who buys a case of eggs, the first price paid to the farmer, 2 or 3 commissions, cost of transportation, cost of candling and value of eggs sorted out and sent to the dump. This extra price has to be charged for eggs that are far from their best.

This is the main reason why so many, even high-priced eggs are unsatisfactory, and they will remain so until the whole system is changed. There is no reason why the eggs the consumer pays for should be so long on the way and subjected to such conditions.

Seventeen Cents Thrown Away.

A bulletin issued by the United States Government is authority for the statement, that when the Iowa farmer is paid 15 cents for his eggs on the farm, the consumer pays 25 cents, or in other words it takes 10 cents to market a 15-cent article. This results in a loss to both ends of the industry, the producer pays his share of these commissions, and the consumer not only pays his share, but has to receive less value for his price. This same authority says that there is a loss through carelessness of at least 17 per cent. Our conditions are no better than this, so for every dollar the consumer pays for eggs, there is 17 cents of it actually thrown away. This amount is made up as follows: Dirties, 2 cents; breakages, 2 cents; chick development and rotten eggs, 7½ cents; stale eggs, 5 cents; bad flavored eggs, ½-cent, total 17 cents.

Continued Next Week.

COURTESY IN BUSINESS.

"I am not treated everywhere the way I am here," remarked a traveler recently to a grocer with whom he was well acquainted through years of business relations.

They were talking upon the changing conditions in business and the demand for the real gentleman in every walk of business life.

The traveler was saying: "Ordinary courtesy is at last finding the place it deserves in business. There is no pedestal for the uncivil boor these days. Business men are demanding men whose demeanor is of the considerate quality.

"In the grocery business the personal element is undoubtedly an important factor and yet there are many grocers imagine that it is an element of good business to be gruff and short. It is just one of the little things, one of the trifles but it helps your business methods. It assists your advertising and is really one of the bonds which keep your customers with you. Kindliness is really kingliness these days."

Estimates of the olive crop in France indicate a yield of about half the normal size, although some place it as low as one-third.

Canadian Grown Peaches will Soon be Plentiful

Fruitmen Expect An Average Crop—But Earlier Expectations Will not be Realized—Should Be Most Plentiful in Another Week—Tomatoes are Moving Well But Not a Full Crop is Looked For—Warm Weather Will Boost Price of Lemons—Halibut up to Ten Cents Again.

Canadian grown fruit and vegetables are gradually crowding out all the imported stocks. Among the most recent to appear for the first time this year are peaches of which it is stated there will be a good average crop, but there will not be the yield that was expected when the trees were in bud. In about another week or ten days peaches will, as far as Ontario is concerned, begin to be shipped profusely and will reach their best. British Columbia reports excellent crops in every variety of fruit.

Oranges are firm and are enjoying a steady trade. The weather has lost its torridness and the lemon market weakened. However, the general opinion is that it is more than holding its own and if warm weather returns high prices may be expected.

Tomatoes are being received now and are bringing a fair price. A recent report estimates the St. Catharines crop at but little more than half the average. California fruit of good quality is still coming in. Pears, plums, grapes, etc., packed in a commendable manner are being brought into the country and are meeting a good demand at rather high prices. Canadian harvest apples are now on general sale. The reports regarding the new apple crop are not wholly satisfactory. In fact the reports speak of small production this fall.

Raspberries were dear this year, though the crop was good. Too many were shipped to the west and other points for the price to stay low. The day of cheap raspberries and strawberries is rapidly passing, and owing to the improved transportation facilities and increased demand for these popular fruits, it will not likely come back again.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits.—Green apples are coming in freely now, and prices are lower. Per bbl. they bring $2.50 to $3.50 and the demand is good at this price. Other lines such as melons, Deleware grapes, and peaches are more plentiful and as a result prices are lower.

Lemons are lower, being now $5.50, and the sale is good at this price.

The only line showing scarcity is small fruits, such as berries of all kinds. The season is about through for most of them. Even the few finding their way to the market are of indifferent quality, and are slow of sale.

Vegetables.—Tomatoes are coming in freely, and as a result prices are down considerably. The grade of arrivals is pronounced good.

Potatoes are somewhat scarce, and the price of the better grade old ones is higher. New ones are in sufficient quantity to keep prices level.

Some of the smaller lines, such as celery, cucumbers and lettuce, are scarce, and are quoted at an advance.

Trade in general is not any too brisk, but supply and demand are fairly even.

Spanish onions are on the market at $2.50 per large case.

Fish.—There are no more fresh Gaspe salmon to be had as the season is over. However, considerable B. C. salmon is arriving now.

The swordfish season is beginning and the quotation at present is 12c.

Steak cod are somewhat easier, as demand is rather light.

Mackerel are scarce and higher.

On the whole the market is rather quiet, and the dealers do not look for any great improvement for some time to come.

Green Fruit.—The local market is again receiving fairly large shipments of fruit and some of the displays on the wholesale market would delight the eyes of the gods. California fruit is more plentiful now and is apparently in good condition. Pears and plums of the imported variety are still holding a firm place on the market, but peaches are giving away before the new home stocks. Og the latter the dealers state that in another week or so they will be quite plentiful. It is generally stated that the crops are in a promising condition and that the production will be quite heavy. Raspberries are nearly done and while some are quoted at 11 cents the best variety is as high as 15 cents.

quality of the late Valencia oranges recently received on the local market could hardly be improved. They are quoted as high as $5. Lemons are holding their own under weather conditions that are not likely to create a particularly heavy demand. It was stated by one prominent fruit man that the new crop of lemons will not be received here until the middle of November, and the supply for the interim is not heavy. Should a warm wave similar to that which spent itself three weeks ago or more again be felt, lemons will soar to probably $7.50. During the present season lemons have been particularly strong and it will be remembered that in the very beginning of the warm weather it was pointed out in these columns that lemons were worth watching closely and that prediction has been verified.

Imported grapes are quoted in case lots at $2.75. They appear to be of fine quality. The present week may be considered the off period from the fact that there is a spirit of quietness in the market compared to the conditions which have existed. It is no doubt due to the fact that some crops are pretty well spent and others have not yet ripened. A renewal is expected when peaches reach their height.

Vegetables.—The bottom has been falling steadily from the majority of the vegetable prices on the local market. Imported stocks are for the present a thing of the past and with home production fairly heavy the prices have been adapting themselves to the local markets. It has been simply a case of gradual transformation and there is now scarcely an imported vegetable offered by the wholesale fruitmen. Cucumbers, carrots, beets, etc., are pretty nearly down to bottom prices and a heavy demand is reported. Tomatoes are coming in fairly plentifully now, but the feeling among the trade is that there will be no record production established by tomatoes this year.

Home grown potatoes are being quoted at about 90 cents a bag. They are of good quality and there seems to be a good crop.

Fish.—The past week has been featured by a shortage in the supplies of fish. Salmon, trout and white fish were particularly in this respect and although halibut had dropped considerably the week before it quickly returned to the ten cent price as a result of the demand being turned more largely in that direction. There is a fairly good demand for fish but the buisness is hampered by the shortage of supplies.

Instances of Price Cutting and their Effects

Soap, Syrup, Cereals and Canned Peas Handled at a Loss Considering Expenses Entailed—Canned Peas Which Cost $1.15 Sell at $1—Trouble Over a Cut in Oil—A Plea for Better Organization.

By H. R. Daniels.

Organize! Organize! Organize! should be the retail grocers' slogan.

Half of the evils that beset the trade to-day would disappear like magic before a resolute effort at co-operation. Reckless cutting and slashing of prices are continually whittling down profits. Trade conditions, too, have an overwhelming tendency toward small margins and quick turnovers; and these adverse features are periodically aggravated by the impolitic action of some dealer, who in order to boost business makes a heavy cut in the price of some staple article.

To illustrate; we know of a merchant who is handling a certain line of soap at five cents per bar. This soap nets $5.25, freight included, the loss sustained being ¼c per bar. No comment is necessary here.

Pail syrups in 5's which net about 25c are being retailed at 28c; 10's which cost about 48c laid down are handled at 55c; a cereal sells at 3 for 25c; canned peas, worth at the present moment say $1.15 are sold 3 for 25c. A dozen cost $1.15 and sell for $1.

Many more such cases might be instanced. The above will be sufficient for the argument in hand.

A Bad Matter Grows Worse.

Now, it is obvious that even the most conservative grocer cannot always be content with meekly falling into line. He, too, must sometimes be the aggressor; otherwise his patrons are apt to form the impression that they are always paying the highest price for their goods. Presto! He makes a slash and a bad matter grows worse.

The foregoing is not mere surmise. It is, unfortunately, borne out by hard facts. We cheerfully acknowledge our share in the grievance. At the same time we feel that our policy has been governed by necessity. In this connection the following will be interesting.

Last fall we secured the agency for a Canadian manufacturer's illuminating oils in this vicinity. Previous to this we had, in common with the other merchants, purchased our supply through the local jobbers, paying 13c per gallon and retailing at 18c. On the new basis, of course, we secured the wholesale price 11c and forthwith decided upon a reduction. The following notice was accordingly issued in circular form:

ANNOUNCEMENT.

As you are well aware, you have paid 18c. per gallon for coal oil from time immemorial. On and after Monday, Oct. 11, we will retail oil at 14½c. per gallon, and with your co-operation we will keep it there. That this store is enjoying the confidence of the public is evidenced by the enormous growth of our trade, and we propose to merit that confidence by a liberal retail policy. Yours truly.

The price chosen (14½c.) was diplomatic, giving as it did 15c. in single gallon and 16c. in half gallon quantities. This was considered fair to our competitors under the circumstances.

But the unexpected happened. The jobbers for a large U.S. concern—both hardware dealers—became panic stricken, and proposed to supply the other merchants with oil at wholesale prices, same to be retailed at 13c. per gallon until we had been frozen out. In the meantime they appealed to the oil company to protect their profits, representing that we were making a cut at their trade in this territory. We thought this was grossly unfair to us as we had not offered a single barrel to the trade here and had no intention of doing so.

The Ultimatum Delivered.

In due time the company's agent arrived and we were the recipient of a sort of ultimatum. We could retract our position and resume the old price or take the consequences of a war upon the United States company. We did not relish being bullied in this fashion and chose the latter alternative. Anyway, we figured that our own company would support us in this matter; a predilection justified by subsequent events. In the meantime we acquainted both companies with the true facts in the case and thereby prevented any further friction.

However, the 13c. rate went into effect and after maintaining our original price for one month we also adopted it; a position from which we will not be the first to recede.

The foregoing represents but one aspect of a very pressing problem. There is another phase which we have not considered here, viz.—the policy of paying an excessive price for the farmers' produce, but the discussion of this must be deferred to another article.

In conclusion, the crux of the situation is this: such business methods are entirely unwarranted, benefit no one, and are productive of the most disastrous results upon trade. Finally, the whole constitutes a powerful argument for more friendly co-operation on the part of the merchants.

HOW PRUNES ARE PACKED.

Are Allowed to Fall on Ground When Fully Ripened—The Preparation for Final Packing.

It may be of interest to grocers to know that prunes are not picked from trees, but are allowed to fall to the ground. The reason is that the prune must be dead ripe, with all its sugar developed, or it will not cure properly. The ground beneath the trees is carefully prepared, being leveled and smoothed for the falling fruit. When gathered, the prunes are rolled down troughs full of tiny needles, that prick the skins. They are then dipped in a hot solution containing lye, which cleanses them, and are then rinsed in cold water. Next they are put in broad, shallow, wooden trays and laid in the sun for two or three weeks. At the packing house they are assorted as to size by a machine, which shakes them over a huge sieve. They are dropped through their proper holes in different bins and are run through a vat of hot water and finally packed.

BUY WHEN YOU NEED.

Grocer Should Regularly Examine His Stock to Make Sure That he has Sufficient Supply—The Benefits of Such a System.

By A. H. Harvey.

Do you take an hour or two now and then, Mr. Grocer, to figure out what goods you need, or do you wait until some traveler happens along and buy according to his suggestions? Did you ever stop to examine this department of your business?

It is hardly necessary to mention the importance of buying in so far as it concerns the grocer himself. A great deal of the profit on goods is made before they reach the store. It depends upon how the grocer has conducted his buying. Therefore, let the buying of your goods be one of the questions which receives your closest attention.

Proceeding from this point, it is manifestly necessary that you know just what you want. Therefore, take an hour or two sometimes when the rush is over and examine the condition of your stocks. Make a list of the articles you need, and if your stock is absolutely low send in your order to the wholesale house at once. You may have a run on these very goods.

This not only keeps you in close acquaintanceship with your goods, but it also prevents certain lines from becoming stale. If you make a regular practice of this idea you will not be one of those who, when upon a chance visit to the storehouse, stumbles over a pile of goods and says in surprise, "I did not know I had so much of those goods." And there is another reason. The custom mentioned above prevents the grocer from becoming careless, and if that were the only benefit he would derive it is sufficient reward.

This, then, is the fundamental necessity. After you have performed this task it is an entirely different question as to what you will buy, how much you will buy and under what conditions your purchases are made.

SCUM ON PICKLES.

Here is one recipe given by a retailer to take the scum off bulk pickles: "When scum appears on the top of bulk pickles skim off the scum and then dip out vinegar until the pickles are reached. Then add sufficient distilled vinegar of about 40 grain to make up the loss of liquid removed. Stir the contents of the cask occasionally so that mold will not collect."

The retailer who "snaps" traveling salesmen before he learns whether they know anything of value to him, is choking up the channel of information worth more than fine gold.

A GROCER'S CO-OPERATION

RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes gives a lusture which far outlasts all others under the heat of the stove, and that is why it has so many friends that call for it over the grocery counters the world around. We believe that the real live grocer wants to push the goods that please his customers, and that is why we have the hearty co-operation of thousands upon thousands of grocers everywhere. It pays you to push it.

MORSE BROS., Props. - Canton, Mass., U.S.A.

You Must Realize

that an article which has a huge amount of consumer advertising behind it to pull it through the stores, as has

2 in 1

must be a profitable and quick-selling line to handle.

But in addition to this ad-pulling force, "2 in 1" has sterling merit behind it. It preserves the boots and makes them pliable; is waterproof; shines quickly and lasts a long time; does not soil the clothes or clog the brush, and is just now in increasing demand.

You can't afford to be without "2 in 1" on your shelves.

Where do you live?

Should no representative of the undermentioned Wholesale Grocery and Biscuit Firms visit your store, it is no reason why you should not sell FROU-FROU.

If you will send us your name and address, no matter where your store is situated, we will, in the first place, mail you a sample so that you may taste the taste of FROU-FROU, and if favored with your order we will guarantee that a 5-lb. or a 10-lb. tin reaches you at as advantageous terms as your brother grocer who may be more favorably situated for receiving supplies.

FROU-FROU is the result of Dutch ingenuity, the World's greatest Wafer, and the despair of imitators.

You owe it to your customers and to your own business to sell this, the peer of all Wafers.

The store with FROU-FROU can always supply the "something extra" for its customers' unexpected guests.

Something that Interests Grocers

A "GALT" EMBOSSED STEEL CEILING is an essential in any modern store.

It adds a touch of beauty and dignity to the interior of your store that nothing else can. No trouble to get a design that will harmonize with your fixtures and equipment.

A "GALT" METAL CEILING, however, is not merely an ornament. Its practical advantages appeal particularly to shrewd business-men. It is fireproof; will not stain, crack or fall down; it is unaffected by heat, dampness or vibration.

A "GALT" CEILING is moderate in cost and, if necessary, may be applied over a wood or plaster ceiling without interrupting business.

Send sketch and measurements of your ceiling for quotation and catalog "A-3," showing hundreds of designs.

A Great Selling Team

¶ Buyers must be moved through several steps to be brought to the buying point.

¶ They must have their attention attracted to the article. They must have their interest in it awakened. They must be informed as to its nature, utility and merits. They must be convinced of its value. They must be moved to action—to closing.

¶ Good salesmen and good trade-paper advertising make a great team to carry the buyer through these several stages to the buying point. Alone, the salesman is at a disadvantage.

Keep in mind the dominant fact that mankind from its first appearance on the earth has been schooled by nature to look for signs; for invitations to taste; for suggestions as to what to wear. Tell your story briefly, forcibly, truthfully, and address it through the proper media and you can successfully apply advertising as a means to increased distribution.

The Slow but Sure Work of the Mail Order Houses

Canadian Grocer Representative Spends a Day in a Small Canadian Town to Determine the Facts—Population Reduced 300 in Last Half-dozen Years—More Orders Going to Catalogue Houses Than Ever Before—All Kinds of Goods Sent for—Experience of One of the Merchants Who Advertises Methodically—Where the Trouble Lies.

Here are some startling facts for retail merchants in the small cities, towns and villages of Canada to turn over in their minds.

A representative of The Canadian Grocer visited a small Canadian town recently to enquire into the facts of mail order competition.

The population of this place, according to the last report of the assessor, is 812. Not many years ago it was nearly 1,100. This is explained by some to be due to the fact that several large families have moved away, or that the young people have departed. These claim that there are just as many houses occupied, but that the families are not so large.

The fact remains that the population has been reduced. The town clerk stands sponsor for this statement.

The postmaster of this same town says that the number of orders sent out to the mail order houses is enormous and that this number has greatly increased during recent years.

This is substantiated by the express driver, who delivers all express parcels. He says one would be surprised to know just what things are ordered from the catalogue houses. Sugar is a big item with many, but he often delivers such things as whips, window-curtain poles, hardware, etc. These come from the big city stores, and the business done with them by the people in the town is, he says, gradually increasing.

It is a significant fact that in this town there are a large number of retired farmers.

What is the Remedy?

With such facts as these staring the merchants in the face, as well as those who are interested in the welfare of not only the town, but the community, naturally the question is asked: "From where should the remedy come?"

There is but one answer—from the merchants themselves.

It has been proven over and over again that the merchants in a small town can sell, on the whole, more cheaply than the catalogue houses, taking into consideration first price, freight, quality and service. The only thing left to do is to impress customers with these facts; and that must be done principally by newspaper advertising. While newspaper space is generally recognized as the leader, there are other auxiliaries, such as the circular, dodger and personal contract.

Why He Quit Business.

This is examplified in this same town. Not long ago a general merchant went out of business—he did not fail, but he got out because he claimed the mail order houses were getting too much of his trade. He was not a modern advertiser.

Just across the street is a dry goods merchant who is making a success. He uses nearly a half-page space in his home weekly newspaper and the same ad. never goes to press twice without an entire change. He follows the large store method in advertising, quotes prices, talks quality and talks as if he meant everything.

As a result, his business is double what it was ten years ago, and is growing rapidly. He has taught his customers that they can buy as cheaply from him as anywhere else, and when they pick up their catalogues from the big houses, articles are suggested for which they come to him to buy.

But other merchants sit quietly in their stores and actually wait for business, reminding one of the story of the lazy frog which waited for the fly to travel down its throat. It died.

These men become offended if you tell them they must get out of their shells and hustle if they are going to be outstanding business men. The town in question provides an example of this, too.

No Worse Than Others.

Other business men there say that:—"We are certain that the mail order housese are doing a good business here, but we are no worse off than other villages or towns in the country."

This is a statement that would be difficult for such men to prove, or for anybody else to refute; but even were it true in every case, it is no way to talk.

"He's just as bad as I am," shouldn't make the punishment any the less for the latter, and so business men ought to ignore conditions in other places and attend to their own.

One more sample of the way some merchants do business: At a meeting of the Board of Trade of this place some time ago one of the merchants talked on the loyalty the people of the community should have for their home towns. Instead of spending their money in other centres, they should spend it at home, etc., etc.

Not very long after, the express driver delivered some parcels for this same merchant from mail order houses, which he could have purchased in a hardware or general store at home. Consistent, isn't it?

Capital for Advertising.

The representative of The Grocer learned of an instance in which one man had to pay $1.50 express charges on a couple of sacks of sugar. He had requested that it be sent by express, and it came by express at his request. Another man told the writer of having purchased a suit of underwear from a catalogue house. He had seen what he considered an attractive price in the catalogue. When his suit arrived he saw that the quality was not at all what he had expected and has since bought better material at home for the same money.

With such capital as this to work on what could a bright, up-to-date advertiser not do?

The Canadian Grocer does not publish the above statements merely from hearsay. They are among actual facts collected during a day's visit in one Canadian town; and they are symbolic of conditions existing in many other towns and villages throughout Canada.

In conclusion let us say that merchants will get no good from whining because people are disloyal enough to buy away from home. The public have got to be "shown" in these days of live methods and brisk competition, and the merchant who will not or cannot "show" them may just as well step down and out and make room for someone who can and will. This is the only salvation in protecting the interests of the country at large from the quiet, far-reaching, but "purely legitimate" business methods of the catalogue houses.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST MOSQUITOS.

There is an anti-mosquito campaign on in the West Indies and South America and if continuous is expected to be successful. Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, S.A., was once a veritable "inferno" but yellow fever is now suppressed due principally to the efforts of one man, Oswaldo Cruz.

In this connection the Georgetown, British Guiana, Chamber of Commerce has passed a resolution recognizing that "it is in the interest of this Chamber of Commerce especially, the city of Georgetown in particular, and the colony of British Guiana generally, that everything should be done for the improvement of the health of the inhabitants, and to give the Port a clean and good name;" and resolving: "That the Council of the Chamber of Commerce of Georgetown records its unanimous wish that the Mosquito Bill, 1910, may be passed, as a means to safeguard the Public Health."

R. A. Lawson, grocer, Bracebridge, will this fall erect a store on a site near the G.T.R. depot and handle flour and feed on a wholesale scale.

A report from California states that fifty thousand carloads of oranges and lemons will be the harvest of California during the coming season if estimates prove correct. This means the biggest citrus fruit yield in the history of the Pacific coast.

A Few Ordinary Precautions in Handling Spices

Season for Heavy Demand has Already Opened and Grocers are Preparing to Meet it—Care Should be Exercised to Prevent the Spices From Losing Their Strength by the Evaporation of the Free Oil They Contain—Suggestions as to What Should be Done.

The annual pickling and preserving season has grown to such proportions that the grocer puts forth extra efforts to cater to the requirements of the housewife whose pride is to store away for winter use a supply of fruit and pickles which she hopes will endure until late into the following spring.

Realizing that every home will be calling for spices of one kind or another, the grocer orders a supply, and considers that he is prepared for any local demand. Spices are not the easiest thing in the store to handle, but a grocer who has been in the business for years, should know practically all that is necessary in order to keep his stocks fresh and to make this end of his business pay.

What to Keep Spices in.

It must be remembered in regard to the most of the spices that they contain a volatile oil, which is really the strength of the spice. To explain this fact, attention may be pointed to cloves. By a process of crushing, oil of cloves may be obtained from the raw material, and the powdered material left is practically useless for its strength has been taken out in the oil. Getting back to spices in general, this oil that is generally found easily evaporates, and to avoid this the spice should be contained in a vessel that will prevent evaporation. A tin canister is as good as any, and in almost every grocery store they will be found with the name of the particular spice stamped on the outside. Care should be taken to see that they are all placed in their proper tins or containers, when the new stocks arrive. Glass containers with a good stopper are advisable, and are especially useful because the woman in the store sees the spice through the glass. The name should, of course, appear on a label. In this case the difficulty is to secure a stopper that fits as tightly as does the top of one of those tin cans referred to. There are grocers who have spices in receptacles from which they are apparently receiving satisfaction.

A spice manufacturer suggested that it should be lined in such a manner that the oil could not escape into the wood as might easily be the case if there was nothing to prevent if from so doing.

Displaying Spice.

There are many grocers who at this time of the year make a window display of pickling necessities. They will take their spice receptacles and ladle out a sample of mixed pickling spice, another of tumeric, of mace, curry powder and so on. They are arranged regularly, and placed in the window each little heap having a price ticket and the name of the particular spice. A window of this kind is a good idea, but according to spice men it is a mistake to expose the spice in this manner. The most of the samples will lose their strength in a short time and deteriorated spice might as well be thrown away by the grocer who has the reputation of his business to protect. It is not a difficult matter to obtain little glass vessels, which will have a top, and which can be used for the different spices. It is claimed that the display will not lose any of its effectiveness, and the grocer is not losing any of his spice.

It is hardly necessary to suggest that a separate ladle should be used for spice, and it is much better, in fact, it is almost necessary that each spice tin have its own little ladle. The customer who buys allspice does not want traces of curry powder in the goods, and so on. Carefulness is one of the prime factors of the spice department of a grocery store.

While there is a certain steady business in some spices throughout the entire year, the present is the season for particular lines, and the grocer should endeavor to get his share of the trade.

Care in Weighing.

Before passing the grocer should be reminded to be careful in weighing spices. As a rule the purchases are small averaging about two ounces. This means that the stock he gets in will have to be weighed many times before it is all sold. The automatic registering scale is invaluable in the case of spices. The grocer cannot afford to give any of his goods away, and with the old time scales, it is often a tedious matter to get the correct weight, and even then there is a certain amount of guess work to it. With the self registering scale, however, if he comes above or below the amount asked for he knows the exact value of the amount in the pan, and in the great majority of cases the customer is quite satisfied to take it. There is usually a good profit in spices if they are handled properly, but to get the best results the grocer must watch his methods and protect himself against unnecessary leaks.

PROGRESS OF FOOD STANDARDS.

The Canadian spice standards will not be legalized until June 1911, according to the announcement of A. McGill, chief analysist, of the Laboratory of the Inland Revenue Department, Ottawa. It was thought that they would be ready this summer. Milk, grain, and meat and their products and beverages are now in hand and are occupying the full time and attention of the advisory board.

Criticism on Newspaper Ads. of Retail Grocers

Newspaper Space in Itself is Not Valuable, Says Writer; It is What is Placed in it That Makes it Valuable—A Variety of Ad. That Shouldn't be Used—A Saskatchewan and an Ontario Ad.

By B. H. Thomas.

Mere space is valueless in a newspaper from the advertiser's point of view; it is what he has to say in it and the manner in which that is displayed that makes it valuable or not.

When an advertiser, therefore, has attained the ability to write "selling" copy and when he understands best how to have it displayed in printers' type then his ads. are going to be productive of good results.

Advertising is now a science; it is not, as was at one time thought, a big display of a name and an article. It should always be written so as to point out as many qualities or selling points as possible, and an advertiser, therefore, should analyze his goods and discover just what these points are before he begins to write about them.

In writing newspaper ads. there are some things to be taken into consideration. Among the chief are: The policy of the house, local conditions and the seasons.

Some men have said that an advertiser cannot write about his own goods.

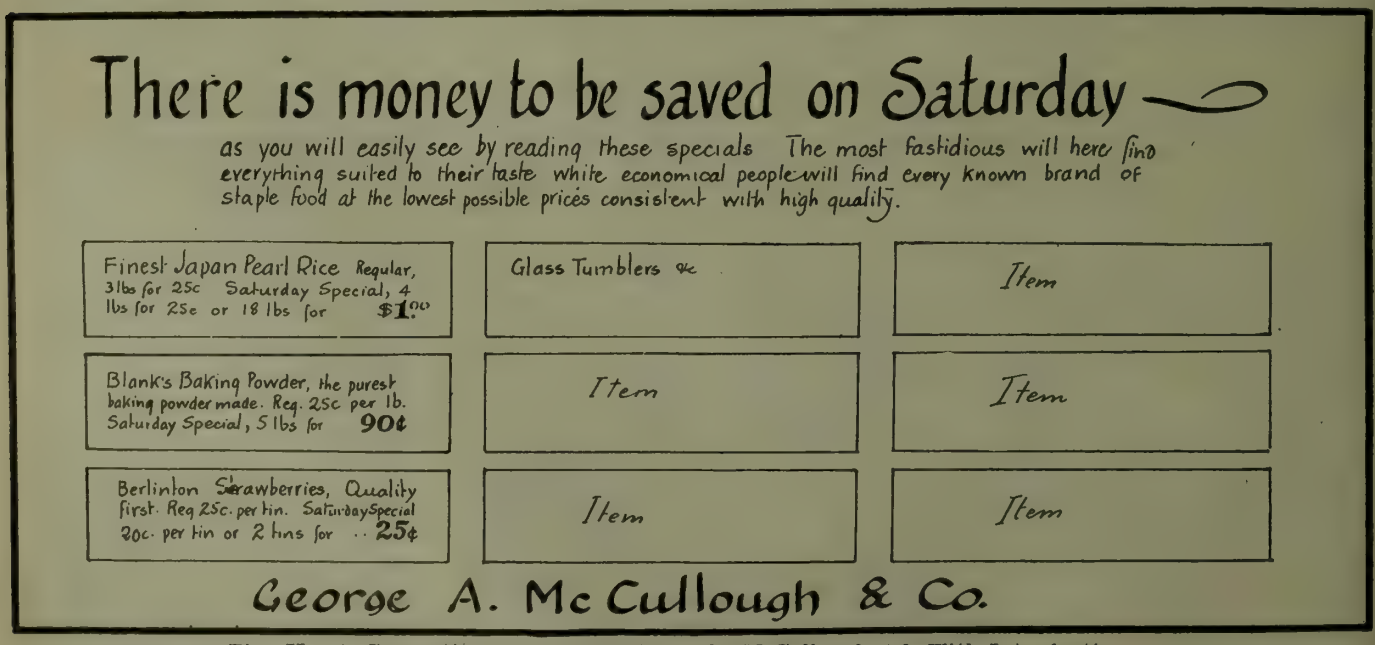

Fig. II.—A Suggestion for a Layout of the McCullough Ad. With Introduction.

This is scarcely the case, presuming he can place himself in the purchaser's position and appeal to him so as to overcome any objections which such a man might raise.

A Method Not to Use.

Some advertisers use a quarter-column or more in a newspaper to display such an ad. as this:

POTATOES.
BERRIES,
ORANGES,
ETC., ETC., at MARTIN'S.

Now, just why this is going to induce any prospective purchaser to buy Martin's potatoes, berries, etc., is difficult to understand. The advertiser claims no special attractions or qualities and doesn't even name a price nor his own address. Such advertisements are practically useless unless given to the newspaper manager to hold his trade.

As one advertiser remarked recently: "It is no good having the best article in the world at the fairest price, if you whisper it down the well. Let it go forth to the world that you have it. Before saying it, however, mind it is the best."

Honest advertising is a legitimate demonstration of a good article—dishonest advertising is a misleading statement as to an inferior article. Advertising is a force for progress, for, on finding that goods will sell by advertising their merits, men at once set to work putting more merit into them.

The worst thing a grocer can do is to advertise an unreliable article, for although it may bring a good profit it will only bring it once. Advertising will make new customers, but the grocer must keep them.

Comparisons Between Ads.

Let us take a look at Fig. 1, the original newspaper ad. of Geo. A. McCullough & Co., Stoughton, Sask., and Fig. 2, a suggestion for, what the writer considers, a better lay-out.

It will be noted that in the introduction of the original ad. are to be found the words: "There is money to be saved on Saturday, etc." This, we believe, would make a better beginning, as the suggestion in Fig. 2 indicates.

The lay-out in Fig. 1 might also be criticized as being too much mixed. If panels were used in regular style, the ad. would be more attractive and more readable.

There is no necessity either for the stock cut in the upper right-hand corner. This space could have been filled to better advantage with a talk about the flour, its quality, etc. The writer of the ad. has some good ideas on giving short talks and prices about individual articles. Heavier type, however, should be used to designate the prices for, after all, prices are the most important information. The use of white space around the reading matter is always preferable.

The Christie Grocery Ad.

There are some good points in favor of the ad. shown here of the Christie Grocery, Wingham, Ont. Only the top portion of it could be reproduced, as it was too long for this column, occupying, as it did a space 15 inches deep in the Wingham paper. The talks given on baking powder, flavoring extracts, bananas, etc., are good, but they could have been strengthened had the prices been given in a heavier type.

The appearance of the ad. could have been improved had "Christie's Grocery, Phone 59," been inserted at the bottom and the introduction begun with "A Good Story—" in large type, and occupying the first line. Everyone likes to listen to or read a good story, and this would tend to catch the eye more quickly.

Another criticism which might be offered is that the introduction is rather long. From "Nothing too good for us" down to "best" might have been omitted.

"Ripe tomatoes, when we can get them choice" is a statement which many advertisers would deem unwise. It is an admission that sometimes tomatoes cannot be got and it is better not to refer to such an article until the merchant has a good stock of it.

DIFFERENT KINDS OF PEPPER.

There are two chief varieties of pepper. Black pepper is grown principally in the Malay peninsula and in southern India and the red or cayenne pepper comes from Africa. The latter is the hottest of all peppers. It is really fiery although it is not without flavor. The Mexican chilli peper is really a sub-variety of cayenne. Another popular variety of red pepper is the Hungarian or paprica pepper. For seasoning anything that has tomatoes in its make-up no pepper is better than this variety. Then there is a great variety of small pepper used for bottling and making pepper sauce. Splendid varieties of this pepper are grown in Southern California, Northern Mexico, Texas and Louisania. In one small section of Louisania they grow a hot pepper which possesses a delicious flavor. This is the pepper which is used in the manufacture of tobasco sauce.

HITS THE PEDDLERS.

The city council of Hugo, Oklahoma, have hit upon a novel plan to combat the peddling evil. An ordinance has been passed which compels every agent, canvasser or solicitor to pass a daily medical examination, the fee for which is $10 for the first time and $5 for each succeeding visit. The ordinance aims at regulating the city's health and peddlers, solicitors, etc. will have to satisfy the medical health officers that they are entirely free from contagious diseases and are not a menace to the general public in that regard. Regular licensed retail and wholesale dealers are of course not included under the act.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

NEW CANNED SALMON PRICES.

The official announcement of prices of new pack salmon has been made and deserves some consideration from retailers.

For instance, the price of best salmon, 1 lb. talls in less than 5 case lots is $2.05 per dozen. Last year the opening price was $1.75. These prices apply to Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime provinces.

The retailer will therefore see that this salmon should sell for not less than 20 cents this year in order to make a fair profit. Salmon at $2.05 means 17 cents per tin. Last year the cost was only about 14½c. and the general sale price 18 cents.

The opening prices on the best grade of salmon which are given elsewhere in our market column are not likely to last beyond Dec. 1. An advance on that date is expected of 2½c. per dozen, providing a change does not occur before.

FAIR PROSPECTS FOR FRUIT.

The vineyards are looking healthy in the Niagara district. Young vineyards are well loaded and promise a medium crop. Red grapes in many sections are a full crop, but old vineyards on Niagaras and Concords will not be as heavily loaded as last year.

The tomato crop has materially improved during the past month. A larger acreage is planted in the Niagara fruit belt. A medium to full crop is expected.

Peaches will be a good crop in the Niagara district, although not quite as heavy as last season. The trees affected with curl leaf have recovered much better than was anticipated. Many peach growers have thinned their orchards. The crop is reported medium to full, with the exception of Albertas which are frequently reported light.

Plums are lighter than usual in Ontario. There is a short crop in the Georgian Bay district and in the counties bordering on Lakes Erie and Huron. The condition of the crop in the Niagara district is somewhat better, though Lombards are lighter than usual; the Japan varieties are very light. European and American plums are, on the whole, a light to medium crop. A feature of the plum situation in this district is the unevenness of the yield. British Columbia has a large crop of plums.

There will be a fair crop of pears in the commercial sections. In the Niagara district a medium crop will be harvested. There is not much blight showing in this section as usual. The Georgian Bay district will have a fair crop, especially of the later varieties. In other parts of Ontario, pears vary from light to medium, with some failures. In Nova Scotia pears will not be as plentiful as last year. A light to medium crop will be harvested. British Columbia will have a good crop. Bartletts are particularly heavy.

KNOW WHAT YOU PAY FOR.

In another column of this issue appears a letter from a Manitoba reader referring to instances in which he had received short net weights.

This is a matter of more than the ordinary concern. Just as a consumer insists on getting the weight he pays for so should the retailer obtain the weight mentioned in his invoice. To do this he has to weigh the goods as they come to his store, and, as the western grocer points out, find the weight of the tare to obtain the net weight. This is the quantity he should pay for.

Some time ago the writer watched a merchant's methods before he fixed his selling price. He had just received a box of pears invoiced at so much a box. At first thought he concluded he would sell them at 3 for 10 cents or 40 cents a dozen. On second thought he counted out the pears and found that without freight they were costing him about 37 cents a dozen. Three cents on 40 cents would have allowed him only 7½ per cent. profit. The outcome was that he sold his pears at 5 cents each or 50 cents a dozen. Thirteen cents on 50 cents would allow him 26 per cent. profit, providing there was no waste or fruit spoiled.

The practice of weighing, measuring and counting everything that comes into the store is simply a step towards scientific merchandising.

THE CO-OPERATION OF THE DEALER.

The manufacturer who advertises in The Grocer demonstrates, first of all, a strong faith in his goods, and, second, that he has confidence in the salesmanship of the dealer. As the latter comes to a better realization of his importance in the system by which grocery lines are distributed, the greater will become the desirability of soliciting his co-operation in this way.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF ADVANCES.

There has been money in canned goods during the past year for those retailers who watched the market carefully and who took advantage of raises.

Last year's opening prices were comparatively low considering the quotations that later followed on corn, peas, tomatoes, salmon, etc.

But the trouble with some retailers is that they do not take advantage of advances when they have bought coreectly. They congratulate themselves on a purchase when they see the price going up later on, but they never think of offering the article at a better price to the consumer. Imagine a real estate dealer doing the same, or any other speculator for that matter.

One grocer states that by watching the advances in canned goods he was able to make better profits than ever before. Some goods bought at 80 cents he was able to sell at 10 cents straight, others at 65 cents he sold at 3 for a quarter, but he eliminated the 3 for a quarter whenever he found that the advances warranted such action. It was a good year for canned goods and he profited thereby.

Why should not all retailers take advantage of similar conditions?

THE TIME FOR COLLECTIONS.

The time is near at hand when retailers should become energetic in looking after credits. This is particularly true in the case of merchants who cater to farmers' trade and who have considerable unpaid accounts.

Farmers are now beginning to realize on their crops and that is the time they should be canvassed.

Many retailers get notes from the farmers about this time payable in one or two months and in this way find it easy to collect. Others of course have different methods for different customers but, at any rate, the best time to catch the farmer with plenty of money will soon be here, and full advantage should be taken of it.

Grocery Store Should Not be Free Lunch Counter

Kingston Grocer Writes Interesting Letter Pointing Out Duties of Clerks—Value of Getting Together to Remove Trade Jealousies—Criticism of the Government's Attitude in Connection With Adulterated Goods.

Eidtor Canadian Grocer.—I was greatly interested in some late letters in The Canadian Grocer, from men who have been through the bush, and who kindly took the trouble to sit down at their desks and draw pen pictures and maps showing the proper course and way to do business. I only wish there were more such evangelists in trade, and I think clerks should take The Grocer home and study up conditions and how to run stores, please customers, dress windows, and please their employers.

Not a Free Lunch Counter.

A clerk who is faithful is valuable. That word 'faithful' means a lot—honest with the cash drawer and goods such as candies, cakes, etc. Do not abuse your trust and imagine you are at a free lunch counter; do not come five minutes late in the morning and close up five minutes before time. Be liberal, and if you are ill a day you get your pay. Do everything that is honorable to make coin for your employer and if he doesn't appreciate it, others will find out your faithfulness and you will be the gainer. Too many clerks go the other way and they get the 'pitchfork.'

Talking about clerks, a grocer told me he found it hard to get good clerks who would try to think and keep ahead of their work and push goods by introduction. "How in the name of common sense," said he, "are new lines of goods to be known to people if the clerk doesn't back up the advertisement, and keep telling the people. A well dressed store and window is an invitation to come in—a dirty store to keep out. Does it pay, said he, to get cheap help? Is it not better to invest in a good clerk more than any other fixture in a store. A silent salesman is all right, but the man behind it shouldn't be a dummy.

Removes Trade Jealousy.

The Grocers' Picnic came off on Aug. 17th. Grocers' picnics do a lot of good. They bring the men together, make boys of them once again and take the rough edge of jealousy off, for, sad to say, there is a lot of it in trade and it is foolish. If grocers would be more friendly they certainly would have larger bank accounts; there would be less cutting of prices, and they would tell each other about beats, as follows. "Well, is that you Smith." "Yes." "Well, say, look out for Jones, he left a balance here of $23, and skidooed."

The pedlar nuisance still flourishes here, and there was not one license taken out last year, and why? Pedlars go from house to house and spread disease like the common house fly.

Adulterated Goods.

Does the government analyst tell me that the government is honest and doing a good work by fining a poor grocer $39 for having a small portion of something not injurious in a quarter-lb. of pepper, the grocer being innocent of the compound nature of the pepper? The government, it seems to me, is not fair in this regard. The grocer says: "I am with you and want to keep pure goods: will you analyze a few ounces of pepper for me." "Oh, yes," said the government, "but we will fine you $10 for our trouble. With us it is heads, we win, tailes, you lose. We know it is poor logic, but we need the money."

The government allows manufacturers to put up any old mixture so long as they put "compound" on the package. Why not prohibit any compound. Then when people buy canned chicken they are not eating slink veal. Again what about cheap whiskey and prune juice sold at fabulous prices? Wake up Mr. Government, and be bigger men; punish the right party, if you don't you will be left at home some day.

KINGSTON GROCER.

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 16, 1910.

A Manitoba Grocer Finds Short Weight in Goods Purchased

Editor Canadian Grocer.—I was just wondering if all retailers weigh and check up stocks of biscuits, cheese, etc., when they are received into the store. I have recently found out that a box of Fig Bars (biscuits), is 1¼ lbs. light. In other words the tare allowed as marked on the box is 5½ lbs., but after taking out the biscuits and weighing the empty box with cardboard, paper, etc., I discovered that I am 1¼ lbs. out on the invoice.

Another matter I wish you would use your valuable paper to adjust is in regard to cheese. We in Manitoba pay from 1¼ to 2 cents more for so-called Ontario cheese than that asked for the Manitoba variety. Now, half the time I am not absolutely certain that I am getting Ontario cheese when I am invoiced with it by jobbers, and I would be pleased and satisfied if all Ontario cheese were plainly marked with the name of the factory in which it was manufactured. I am sure honest manufacturers would not mind doing that.

Shelled walnuts have also been brought to my attention recently. A case was marked 55 lbs. net. After emptying the box, of which the gross weight is 70¾ lbs. I weighed the box and found that its weight was 19 lbs., which left me 51¾ lbs. of shelled walnuts.

Jobbers claim that there is a shrinkage and will not allow for shortage in some instances. I for one, however, will not pay for what I do not receive, and I think that retailers should find out what they are getting and pay accordingly. Japan rice in 50-pound bags will rarely go over 49 pounds, a loss of one pound to the retailer.

One line of confectionary in pails and drums are rarely marked gross weight and tare, and sometimes are short of net weight, and are marked only with blue pencil on the top of the lid.

If all retailers want to know exactly what they are getting I would advise them to find the gross weight, empty the box, etc., and weigh it. It is then an easy matter to know exactly where you are at.

I would like to know what other grocers think about this matter.

SOO MERCHANTS ORGANIZING.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Aug. 18th.—A branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, was established here on Wednesday evening, August 10th, when at a meeting of local merchants an organization was formed representing Sault Ste. Marie. The officers elected are as follows:

President, E. J. Ewing; 1st Vice-President, J. Stevenson; 2nd Vice-President, J. F. Beattie; Secretary, H. Megginson; Treasurer, T. E. Simpson; Auditor, J. D. H. Brown.

E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion Association was present and delivered an address on the objects of organization, suggesting a line of action to be followed. The president, E. J. Ewing, is a grocer. A grocers' branch was formed and W. F. Danskin was appointed to take charge of the district.

At a meeting of directors of the Canada Sugar Refining Co., held in the Board Room, Montreal, several changes were made in the officials. A. H. Thomson was promoted to the post of secretary, A. L. Drummond became general manager of the plant, Frank Redpath consulting engineer, and George Bower, mechanical superintendent. Mr. Thomson has been acting secretary for some time past.

A Rhode Island, U.S.A., department store uses yellow want slips in connection with every clerk's sales book. It is an absolute rule that every request by a customer for goods not in stock be reported. The slips come to the department buyer daily for classification and serve as a barometer of the demand as stimulated by advertising campaigns.

The total export of bananas from Costa Rica during 1909 was 9,365,690 bunches, a decrease of 6.9 per cent. as compared with the exports in 1908. Since 1907 the industry has remained more or less stationary as regards area planted.

The Wm. Ross Co., grocers, Bracebridge, Ont., have disposed of their business to Harg Bros., of Hornings Mills, Ont.

Original Paper Bag Receptacle.

Neepawa, Man., Aug. 18.—A simple and convenient method of keeping paper bags in a grocery store has been employed in the store of W. M. Kennedy of this place.

The contrivance is the idea of Mr. Kennedy's assistant who, as a clerk devoted to the interests of the store, ranks high. The bags are placed in a series of drawers under the top board of the counter and within the easiest reach. The drawers are arranged in regular order from the small ¼-lb. bags up the the twenty lbs. and higher. Each drawer corresponds to the size of the bag. There is an iron weight in each which allows only one bag to be taken out at a time. If the clerk wants two or more he can get them by the one attempt, but no more come with them as is the case in the ordinary drawer.

This weight is adjusted in a simple way. About half way between the front and back of the drawer there are two perpendicular grooves ¼-in. wide, one on each side and directly opposite each other. The weight is rather wide but at each end there is a little projection which just fits the grooves. The weight moves up and down in each drawer and can be easily lifted out when the supply of bags has to be renewed. The weight as stated easily moves up and down always resting on the bags. The bags are put in the drawers with the bottom ends to the front of the drawer. When the clerk begins to draw one out the weight pressing down prevents others from coming with the one required. A bag can be whisked out in a second and there is no danger of four or five coming with it and falling on the floor.

Auction Sales Bring Crowds.

Arcola, Sask., Aug. 18.—The merchants in this town have instituted a new and unique method of making their town a great attraction once a month to all the surrounding country.

They have free auction sales on the first Wednesday in each month. The merchants employ the auctioneer, and anyone who has anything to sell may bring it there from the ends of the earth and have it sold to the highest bidder without costing him a cent. It does not matter what it is—whether an old plow or a farm. Not having the slightest idea of what will be offered, the whole community is curious to know what chances might be presented and in consequence turn up on the free auction day.

This is a great advantage to the farmers for disposing of anything they have to spare and also gives them a chance to buy things they may need. To make the sales interesting and successful the merchants put up some of their goods, which is often knocked down at bargain prices. This system has a tendency to unite the merchants in the interests of their own town and it also serves to bring the farmers into the town regularly.

Why Grocers Bear the Brunt.

Vancouver, B.C., August 18.—With the quietness not unusual at this time of year, there is a bit of a tightening in collections which gave rise to some observations on the part of a dealer that show how the grocer gets the least of prosperity and the most of adversity. "It is all owing to the credit system," he explained. "The grocer more than any other merchant is expected to give credit for what is supplied. Why he should do so more than the dry goods merchant is hard to say, but the fact remains that the grocer and the butcher—the two who sell the most in small quantities—are those who have the biggest list on their books.

In good times, accounts are paid fairly well, and if they are not paid when duller times come, it is not because of good intention on the part of the customer. The trouble is, especially just now when certain large dealers are trying to win trade, that those who have a little cash are taking advantage of alluring offers in the hope of saving a dollar or two. They think that next month the regular grocer's account will be paid. Then by next month, work may not be so plentiful, and before it is realized a big bill is run up, which the ordinary man cannot pay for a long time.

"If a man is earning say $3 a day, which is more than the laborer and many other men make, the margin for home supplies is rather small. With rent not lower than $30 and clothes, extras, etc., without taking sickness into account, there is little left to pay off standing indebtedness. The grocer simply has to bear it. If the money is not paid, dry goods cannot be secured, so back to the willing shoulders comes the burden. No one views duller times with alarm more than the grocer, for even in the best of seasons his profits are small and his cash payments none too large."

Coupons to Promote Cash Trade.

Quebec, Aug. 18.—Elzear Turcotte, grocer of this city has progressive business ideas and is not afraid to put them into practice. Recently he issued a circular composed of four pages of written matter, setting forth reasons why he should receive the trade of the citizens. At the top of the first page appears the following "Business is a struggle in which victory is won by modern methods. They are contributing to my success. You are profiting by them."

The entire article is written in French. He asks the following question in another place: "If you buy $5 worth of goods a week and receive 5 p.c. rebate by our coupons, are you not saving one dollar in four weeks?"

Receipts of purchases are given to customers from the cash register installed in the store and on returning $25 of these coupons Mr. Turcotte gives $1.25 in groceries, etc. The coupons are given as an incentive to prompt payments. The circular also refers to the extended delivery system to suburban points. It is printed in two colors, black and red.

Auto Tickets Increase Trade.

Paris, Ill., Aug. 17.—The merchants of this place have adopted a unique plan whereby the sales for cash are are given an impetus as well as bringing in on time the cash due each month on thirty-day accounts.

The following is a copy of D. D. Anthony's adv. appearing in the local daily:

WE GIVE AUTOMOBILE TICKETS
ON ALL PURCHASES.
Large or small.
WE SELL ONLY
FRESH CLEAN GROCERIES.
Telephone us your order.
D. D. ANTHONY,
West Court St.

In describing this plan, Mr. Anthony states: "A lot of the dealers here in Paris got together and bought an automobile to give away. The object is to get the people to come to Paris to trade and they have become well interested in the proposition.

"We give one ticket for each dollar's worth of groceries bought for cash or on thirty day accounts." Continuing, Mr. Anthony calls attention to the fact that this "encourages the buyer to buy a dollar's worth of goods, or if we give on thirty-day accounts it encourages the settling of accounts within that time."

The club which has been formed by the merchants joining their forces in this way has been named the "Booster Club."

Using the Civic Slogan.

Chatham, Ont., Aug. 18.—Chatham's recently adopted civic slogan of "See Chatham First" has been given prominence by quite a number of merchants, who have had it printed upon the stationery and envelopes they send out.

Not only have S. E. Park & Co. done this, but they also utilize the slogan on their cash register checks, combined with their own trade slogan. On the back of each of these checks, issued to cash purchasers and redeemable in goods at 5 per cent. of the face value, appears the wording: "See Chatham First, then get it at Parks."

QUEBEC MARKETS

SUGAR ADVANCE—

Just at the time of going to press sugar advanced in New York, 10 and 20 cents. Canadian market strong.

Montreal, Aug. 18, 1910.

With the near approach of the Eucharistic Congress there has been a considerable awakening in the business world here. Everyone is preparing for a tremendous influx of visitors, both from the province and from the rest of Canada. Already the effect has been felt by the jobbing trade, many of whose out-of-town customers are taking advantage of the excdrsion rates to call upon them, and have already communicated to that effect.

The public decorations for the Congress alone will cost the city about $150,000, besides what individuals may do. Restaurant men are equipping themselves to do a largely increased business, and if expectations hold good, the Congress will prove a good thing financially for the city.

At present, jobbers and manufacturers both report a fine trade passing, and the best part of it is that the greater part is from the country. This is unusual at this season, and as a result dealers are very much pleased.

Since the recent decline in sugar, the market has rallied a little and it looks as if a firmer tone would prevail from now on.

Sugar.—There is a slightly firmer feeling in the refined market.

After the unexpected performance of the market recently, however, it is bad form to prophesy what will happen to prices. The raw market remains about the same as usual, with a firmer undertone. One of the questions now being discussed is whether the Java crop will be up to the standard expected. Reports have it that the weather there of late will have a bad effect.

Syrup and Molasses.—It is still too early in the season to be able to judge how this year's demand will shape but at present a good trade is passing, and the comparison with last year's figures shows up very well. Jobbers are not buying freely yet, but in small lots the country dealers are gradually filling up.

The demand for syrups is exceptionally brisk, in fact so good that dealers are at a loss to account for the rather sudden improvement. Prices of all lines are unchanged.

Tea.—Low grade Japans are higher than last year, and are as a result not having the ready sale that had been looked for. The second crop of Japan is over now and they are well on in their third. The better grades are having a good sale for this time of year. Reports from Japan say that the recent heavy rains have put somewhat of a damper on tea of late.

Ceylon seem to be having the readiest sale during the past week, and are on the increase.

There is a firm feeling throughout the spice market, in view of this fact. Gingers are particularly affected. No changes in price have taken place.

Dried Fruits.—There is a very good demand passing for what is left of the old crop Valencias, but as stocks are low this really has little true bearing on the market. However, there is a fair demand for other lines, considering the time of year. Currants are firm, and the latest cables from Greece report a much smaller crop than was at first expected, and it looks as if higher levels would be reached.

Some orders for October delivery of dates have been booked, but there is little of moment stirring as yet.

Nuts—Walnut trade is slack at present. In fact most lines of nuts show little activity just now. This is principally due to the poor grade of stocks. Almonds are firm and unchanged. It looks as if there would be a scarcity of Brazils in the near future, and local men prophesy an advance. The filbert situation looks strong. Advices from New York say that an advance in this commodity is looked for in the near future.

Beans and Peas—On account of the high price of pork this year there has not been the demand that was expected for beans, and as a result there is a rather large supply now being held by local men. However, the situation is brightening somewhat, as the latest reports from the States show higher prices and rather short supplies. In fact prices across the line are almost high enough to warrant export from here. At any rate there will be a beneficial effect felt here without much doubt.

Peas are quiet at unchanged prices. There has been a light demand for export, but not sufficient to be much taken into account.

Rice and Tapioca—The only rice in much demand seems to be Patna. The other lines are quiet, and prices seem to be a trifle weaker. Tapioca stocks are low and firmly held. There seems to be little danger of any further advance, but the situation looks satisfactory to holders.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.

Canned Goods — The present high prices of vegetables have materially lessened the demand for all lines except tomatoes. These continue to hold their own. In addition to this local stocks are short. For all lines of fruits the demand is brisk, and seems to be slightly on the increase.

In fish, lobsters and salmon are firm, and in good demand. So far there has been a strong foreign buying, which has absorbed the larger part of the present stocks, thus strengthening the local market. The demand for meats continues as good as ever, and will probably be unchanged till after the hunting season is over.

TORONTO.—There is one prospect of the canned goods business in Canada, of which jobbers have not been forgetful, namely the increased demand which results directly from the large number of new settlers which are moving into the west. This field is bound to be an important one, and the trade have not overlooked it in their deliberations regarding the canned goods business that will be felt during the coming year. The stocks of canned goods in practically every line are extremely light. For all practical purposes it may be said that there are none to be had. The new stocks are coming in to a bare market. The general statements of jobbers are to the effect that there is no overlapping this year. Of the new packs there are no further developments in regard to peas.

Tomatoes may be liberally packed. Some canners have already commenced operations, and as this is an early date, the season is expected to be longer than usual. This will allow a heavier pack. Tomatoes in a particular season may be a heavy crop, but if they ripen quickly that does not allow the canners sufficient time to pack them. The factories have only a certain daily capacity. Beginning now, therefore, seems to augur a fairly long season, and the pack may be a good one. Much, of course, depends upon the crop, and although there have been statements that it will be below the average, the consensus of opinion accepts the belief that the crop and pack will be well up to the average. Time alone will determine. Corn is still doubtful, but a fair pack should be put away. Tomatoes and corn will be cleaned up pretty well before the new pack arrives.

In regard to salmon, the catch of sockeyes seems to have been larger than was expected, but there is a pinched feeling in the lower grades. Pinks and cohoes, it is stated, are rather scarce. The supply of cans is also short, according to one authority, and is not helping the canner in a favorable way.

The fact that opening prices on 1 lb. talls is $2.05 per dozen or $2.02½ in 5-case or more lots means that retailers will have to sell it at 20c per tin.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Currants—New prices high.

Beans—Supplies are short.

Sugar—Steady.

Spices—Moving rapidly.

Toronto, Aug. 18, 1910.

General grocery markets are from all accounts in a fairly flourishing condition. Orders are coming in freely and payments are said to be better than usual. Prices are generally of a strong tone and nowhere are there indications of weakness. Sugar is steady, although all opinions do not agree that the demand is quite up to the average of this time of the year.

In regard to new prices for currants the market is high and the quality of the stocks is not the best owing to weather conditions which have turned unfavorable just at the harvest time. Valencia raisins are also dearer in the home markets, though speculatively, than at this time a year ago, and the supply is estimated now at 7,000 tons below last year's crop.

Nuts are being bulled by those who have the primary markets in their hands and in every branch the same condition prevails. A scarcity of white beans of all grades is now reported. Thus general markets of future goods are strong. Canned goods are still a feature and are likely to be.

Sugar.—Trade is steady with a firmer feeling in the primary market. The demand for sugar is said by some to be good, while others assert that it is only fair as the result of what they term "between seasons." Jobbers generally state that the demand is good and quite up to what they expected. It should show better condition in a short time.

Dried Fruits.—Jobbers state that the spot supplies of dried fruits are quite light. Added to this are reports from the primary markets of conditions that are influencing prices to higher levels. From Greece the cable reports have been received stating that the price for the new crop is now three shillings higher than they were at this time last year. Buying has already been begun and the price now asked is really the opening price for the new stocks. In addition the weather is again contrary to that which was hoped for. The currants are being harvested. That is, they are on the drying beds, but recent rain has been hurtful. Instead of getting the sun, the crops are being treated to more rain. The higher prices will not have any material effect on the average Canadian grocer. The duty on currants this year has been reduced from one cent a pound to sixty-six cents a hundred weight. This reduction in the usual cost of bringing in currants, therefore, no change as far as the retailer is concerned.

All dried fruits are strong. The raisin crop in Valencia, Spain, according to a direct letter received by a local dealer, will total 17,000 tons as compared with 24,000 tons last year. In this primary market raisins have advanced two shillings during the past two weeks and they are now quoted five shillings higher than at the same time last year. Moreover, it is stated that the quality is not up to the average. Locally there is not much doing in the dried fruit market. Futures, however, are interesting and are being followed closely.

Teas.—Teas are showing firmness in sympathy with primary markets where practically everything is quoted from one to two cents a pound higher than a year ago with little to indicate a reaction.

Coffee.—The coffee market is steady with prospects in the primary market for a good yield.

Spices.—Manufacturers assert that the fall business is already being felt. In fact one house stated that their sales up to the present this season are three quarters of the entire business of last season. They consider that the present year is going to be a good one for this particular market. The amount of the business they have done up to the present has been an agreeable surprise, as the total last year was well up to the average. Jobbers state, too, that their orders for spice are more numerous and from now on the demand should be fairly heavy. Prices are quite steady.

Beans.—In all grades of white beans there is a scarcity noticed. The quantity of the old stock left is very small and the stocks in Michigan have been well cleaned up with the result that the U.S. dealers are forced to come to Canada for supplies. There has been no change in prices, but the market is interesting just now to those who are following it.

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS—
Shelled Nuts—Higher.
Tapioca—Firmer.
Syrups—General advance.
Dried Fruits.—Firm.

Winnipeg, Aug. 18, 1910.

The general business condition of the country is much better than it has been for several weeks. Merchants grew slack on their ordering when it was feared that the wheat crop would be unfavorable. They were wise in doing this and wholesalers were not anxious to overload them during such a period. The result is that at present the ordering is heavy.

It is decidedly between seasons on some lines at present and as a consequence many scarcities are reported. The large immigration and the increased number of stores that are opening is the chief cause of the heavy demand. All goods are firm and advancing with the exception of sugar.

Sugar.—The unaccountable decline in the sugar market last week, it is believed, was not strongly warranted, as this week the market is firmer. Sugar has moved, slowly this season in the west owing to the high price and scarcity of fruits. Just now, however, larger lots are being ordered and a good trade is anticipated.

Foreign Dried Fruits.—The trade will be much relieved next month when the new goods come on the market. Old stock has not been moving satisfactorily and prices on raisins and currants particularly have not been very firm. New prices will be in advance of these, as the demand is brisk already, and the stock is good. Prunes are scarce. By next week the local market will be bare and the trade will be compelled to wait for new crop goods. Present prune prices are stiff, and the new stuff will be firm, owing to the limited crop. Apricots are strong.

ONE of the most successful retailers of late years says: "When a firm advertises in trade papers it is getting into good company. BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, August 18, 1910.

A drop of ten cents was made in sugar last week, the quotation being $5.80. No particular cause is given for this, but it is a significant fact that it followed a reduction in the east.

Eastern eggs range from 25c to 30c according to quality, with locals in strong demand. In fact, good boiling eggs generally sell at a premium and those who distribute their own eggs, that is men who have small ranches close to the city, always charge five cents a dozen more than the ordinary retail price, and get it without question.

Potatoes are $28 a ton, the supply at this season being all local.

Preserving peaches are being quoted at 90 cents, though the supply is not yet to hand. They generally come from Washington State.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, N.S., Aug. 18, 1910.

The chief feature of the grocery markets this week is an advance of ten cents per cwt. in the price of sugar. The advance has been on all grades. Extra standard granulated is now quoted $5.40, the highest price that sugar has been in these parts for some years.

Beef and pork are a little easier. American pork has dropped two dollars per barrel, clear backs being quoted now at $29. Beef is fifty cents lower.

Wholesalers have been notified by the canners of corn that deliveries to the trade will not be much more than half of the amount required to fill the orders already in. The new stock which will soon be on the market, is quoted to the trade at $1.00 to $1.10 per dozen.

Butter continues in good supply with a fair demand. Dealers have fairly large stocks on hand at present. Eggs are in light demand, and the receipts are falling off. There has been no change in the price however.

The fruit business is brisk and will continue so from now on. Some early varieties of Nova Scotia apples are now coming on the market, but they are of poor quality.

Weather conditions have been favorable along the coast for our fishermen during the past fortnight. Cod are fairly plentiful but a scarcity of bait, somewhat unusual at this time of year has been quite a drawback. The mackerel catch has been the smallest for several seasons but with fine weather in September and October a more encouraging return for this important branch of our fisheries may even matters up. During the next month or six weeks herring are generally taken in large quantities, although there have been no good hauls reported yet.

Quotations for dry cod and scale continue to rule at an unexpectedly high level in the face of conflicting advices of large holdings and slack consumption, and the demand in several leading foreign markets.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Aug. 18, 1910.

With the exception of some slight reductions in the prices of vegetables in the country market, there was but little change noticable in the condition of the markets this week. There seems to be an abundance of vegetables and dairy products on hand, the former, especially being of a fine quality and selling at reasonable prices. New peas are about the only commodities in the vegetable kingdom which are said to be scarce.

Local wholesalers are experiencing difficulty in securing full orders in canned peas, owing to a scarcity prevailing in Upper Canada. Some of them will receive only about 35 per cent. of their order. Flour and sugar remain firm, and there is not expected to be any change in the near future in these articles.

Blueberries and raspberries are not overly plentiful, and consequently are selling at fairly high prices. The season for raspberries is about over. In regard to other fruits, the expectation is that the apple crop will not be large in this province.

It is doubtful if a better season for salmon along the Tobique was ever experienced than this year has been. They are reported to be plentiful along that stream and its branches.

A Circular Letter which Brought Good Business

General Merchant Sent it Out to Introduce His Bills Referring to Summer Sales—A Successful Sale, he Says, the Result—Has One Price to all.

A merchant often sits down to write a circular letter and finds that he cannot just at the time collect his thoughts. This variety of advertising is quite frequent in places where there is no newspaper through which the consuming public can be acquainted with prices, sales' methods, etc. The following is a letter sent out by A. B. Carscallen & Co., Tamworth, and to the merchant who cannot just hit the mark may be of some value. That it proved beneficial is evident from Mr. Carscallen's statement. He says: "I enclose you a circular letter which we sent out about a week before our annual summer sale. This prepared our customers for the bills which we sent them the day before the sale quoting regular and sale prices. We had a very successful sale. We are now practically sold out of summer goods. Our customers are pleased with the bargains they received and have again had it impressed on their minds that there is no use of sending away for their goods."

Have Saved Money Before.

Here is the letter:

The time is drawing near for our annual sale. You have attended our sales in former years and have saved money by so doing. Perhaps you were a little late in coming and missed some of the best bargains; that was your loss, and yet no fault of ours. Remember, we cannot replace sold out goods at sale prices.

The object of this sale is to reduce our summer stock, which is well assorted and rather large for this season of the year. The object of this letter is to give you time to prepare for our which will commence July 21st and end July 30th. We will not attempt to quote prices in this letter.

On July the 19th or 20th we will send you a bill attached to your milk can, if you have one, if not, some other way, quoting prices and describing our stock. When you secure the bill read it carefully, it will be interesting; money saved in money made. You know that we have always given genuine bargains at these sales. The only disappointed patrons that have attended these sales were those that came too late; do not be in this class this year, as we intend making this the event in the history of our business career.

We cannot run a fake sale, our goods are all marked in plain figures, we have no favorites, and we use every person alike, give 16 ozs. to the lb. and 36 in. to the yd., and stand behind any goods we recommend. Our whole ain in business is to deal square. If you feel that you have been unjustly dealt with in any way, we assure you that it is a misunderstanding and not intentional on our part. Should you feel at any time that you have a grievance, we would ask you as a favor to be fair; do not get ruffled until you have given us a chance to justify our actions, or if wrong to make them right.

I, as manager of this business, have no time to stand on the corner and invite you in, neither am I always at liberty to wait on you when you come in, but I personally mark all the goods and we have honest, competent clerks who will sell you the goods at just what they are marked. Were I to wait on you personally I could not do any better. I am sometimes criticized and even called stingy by good, well-meaning customers because I will not fall 5 or 10 cts. on some article. I admit it does look small from a monetary standpoint, but what about the principle? How could I call our store

THE ONE PRICE STORE!

And when you consider that our regular price is as low and in many instances lower than the cut prices of our competitors in surrounding towns, you will agree with me that the money involved is only a secondary consideration.

I appreciate and thank you for your patronage in the past. If I have not told you so it is because I, like yourself, have always had to hustle for a living and have not had much time to cultivate the art of talking. If there is any reason why you cannot keep on dealing with us, let me know, and if I cannot satisfy you the fault will be mine.

Yours respectfully,
A. B. CARSCALLEN & CO.,
Tamworth.
A. B. Carscallen, Manager.

P.S.—Don't forget the Wednesday halfholiday during July and August.

RETAILERS NOT SATISFIED.

Toronto Grocers Have Complaints Against Canned Goods Manufacturers and Jobbers Methods.

Toronto, Aug. 18.—Canned goods manufacturers and wholesalers came in for a good deal of criticism on Monday night at the regular meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association.

The trouble is due to what the grocers claim to be a "hold-up" on the part of the manufacturer and jobber. Now is the time when they usually contract for their canned goods for fall delivery. In the case of peas, however, they are not going to be able to secure their entire orders. Some talked of only being able to get 25 per cent., or whatever the wholesaler cared to give them. But when it comes to corn and tomatoes, on which there is likely to be a good pack they will be given the entire amount that their contracts call for.

What the retailers actually claim is that the other parties to the transaction are holding back peas in anticipation of higher prices later on. Retailers, too, say they cannot contract for peas without contracting for equal quantities of corn and tomatoes, but they can order corn or tomatoes separately.

There is still another grievance. When an order is given for fall delivery, the entire order arrives, and the retailer has to pay for the whole amount. He thus ties up a considerable sum of money in canned goods, which he has to stock about his premises, and take all risks. "What is the wholesaler for?" asked one of the grocers, when this point was raised. Canned goods are often delivered straight from the car.

The association will wait until prices on corn and tomatoes are out and if they deem it advisable, then they will call a mass meeting of Toronto retailers to go into the entire question.

It was also decided to drop negotiations with the Grocers' Section of the Toronto branch of the R.M.A., as the members claimed the other party had made no move towards amalgamation considerations while they had appointed a committee and were all prepared long ago.

Retailers Suggest that Soap Concerns Advance the Prices

By Errett & Co., Englehart.

We pay $3.85 for 100 bars of soap and sell the same for 6 bars for 25 cents as practically all grocers throughout Ontario do. We thus make a profit of about 10½ per cent. not figuring in the cost of doing business which we contend averages 11 per cent. This means practically a loss of ½ per cent.

Soap companies have made no money for the past 2 years and neither has the retailer for a great deal longer period.

To eliminate the 6 for a quarter deals—which were undoubtedly begun either by cutting prices by some incompetent grocer—we would suggest that the companies charge the retailers $4.20 per 100 bars regardless of the quantity bought by any one dealer, thus forcing all to sell at 5c per bar. This would give a profit of 16 per cent. or a clear profit of 5 per cent.

This would also give the soap companies a good margin on their goods ensuring them against failure which has always a bad effect on trade, and gives the retailer a profit whether he is an experienced grocer or not. Such a change would save the experienced grocer from the low prices often set by incompetent men through ignorance.

TO CLEAN A SHOW CASE.

"The best way to clean a show case," says one merchant, "is with a damp cloth, soft paper and elbow energy. The cloth must be just wet enough to loosen the dirt and the paper to remove and give the glass a polished and finished appearance.

"The rag ought not to be too wet or the paper will not dry the glass. If the case is particularly dirty a little liquid ammonia applied to the rag will help. Use the paper wrappings from oranges or lemons. It is soft and will not scratch the glass and leaves no lint. The method is easy, is not sloppy and can be done quickly."

Remedy Suggested for Bettering Egg Quality

Troubles Due to Ignorance on Part of Producer and to the Fact That Buyers do Not Discriminate—Education and Legislation Suggested to Prevent This—Explanation of the Co-operative Egg Circles.

By Prof. F. C. Elford.

A system that is responsible for such a loss should not be tolerated. The producer and the consumer should come closer together. There is no reason why eggs should be several weeks on the way or why bad eggs should be sold by the farmer for the same price as good eggs. Every link in the chain is to blame, right from the producer to the consumer. Why can't the producer market nothing but a new laid egg, why can't the consumer be willing to pay a little better price for a superior quality. There should be co-operative effort to get the egg on the market while new laid, and to get it there with as little expense as possible. More persons each year are shipping direct to the wholesaler, retailer and consumer, still the bulk of the stuff comes by way of the "system." Most of those interested see the necessity of a change; honest producers feel the unfairness of being paid the same price for all eggs; dealers and consumers are more willing than ever to discriminate in prices, and the time seems ripe for something better.

Pays to Discriminate.

Whatever form this "something" will take, it will have in it an element of co-operation. Co-operation among the producers, co-operation among the consumers, and co-operation between the two ends. There will be the absence of jealousy between those producing the same stuff for the same market, farmers will realize that the higher the general average and the more uniform their produce the better it will be for each one. Buyers will find that it pays to discriminate in prices, both will know it does not pay even from a business standpoint to misrepresent, and gradually that feeling of suspicion will vanish.

The producer will find that the buyer is his best friend—the other partner in the co-operation—and the buyer will appreciate the advantage of handling produce upon which he can absolutely rely. This will mean that more of the selling price will find its way to the producer who sells good produce and that the buyer will get the quality for which he is willing to pay.

Much Due to Ignorance.

In order to bring this about something has first to be done. Education and organization will be necessary. Much of the present condition is due to ignorance rather than dishonesty on the part of the producer. Though there are not a few deliberate rogues selling eggs there are many honest people selling bad eggs because they do not know it. They have never learned the difference between a strictly new laid egg and a stale egg. They don't realize that an egg is never as good again as it is the first day it is laid, and that every day it is kept, even in the best of conditions, it loses in value. They are not aware that a fertile egg in a nest one day in July is probably not fit for food.

It never dawns upon them that as soon as the breeding season is over, all male birds should be killed or removed from the flocks. They can't understand why an egg with a good strong shell cannot keep the contents pure in almost any condition. When they are told that they should not keep the eggs in an open basket by the kitchen stove or in the pantry with cooked vegetables, they wonder.

Intervention by Law.

Such persons should be shown what is required in a strictly new laid egg. For those who wilfully market bad eggs there should be legislation. A law that says that you must not sell as fresh an egg that is not. This law must also say the same to the dealer. It will not allow him to send as a new laid egg an egg that has been in cold storage, nor will it permit him to refill branded boxes with eggs from another source. There are those who require only education. They should have it. For those who must have something more to make them honest let them have it also.

The System in Denmark.

This will require organized effort all along the line and especially on the part of the producer. Co-operation somewhat similar to that adopted in Denmark, could be worked to advantage. Several co-operative circles embracing some of the Denmark features have been tried with such success in Canada, that others are encouraged to follow. A circle may cover in extent any territory convenient to a shipping point. The more shipping members it includes the better. The management of a circle is in the hands of the members and may be managed much as a creamery or cheese factory. In some cases these agencies are used as a starting point. The wagon that gathers the milk or cream makes provision for lifting the eggs as well.

The aim is to get the eggs gathered from the farms at least once a week in the winter months, and twice a week throughout the summer. These eggs are taken to the cheese factory or central depot as the case may be, from where they are shipped. Each contributor is given a stamp which he puts upon his eggs. This stamp includes two marks or figures, one indicating the number of the circle the other the number of the contributor. At the central station where the eggs are received, they are candled and any not qualified as new laid are noted and the mark on the eggs indicates the farm from which it comes. It is therefore impossible for any member to market eggs that are not up to the mark and each member is responsible for his own. The output of a circle is sold through the secretary or manager, who may be the man who does the candling and grading or not. It will probably be better if he is, as he can keep in closer touch with the members of the circle. Each member must subscribe to certain rules. These rules will cover such questions as cleanliness, frequent gathering of eggs from nest and the keeping of them, marketing none but those laid by the member's own hens, etc.

Should be a Standard Egg.

The grading of eggs means that there will be a recognized standard of quality and this will lead to the standardization of the product. Other commodities have their produce standardized, why should not eggs? There is no national understanding as to what a No. 1 quality of egg means. The absence of this handicaps the trade and leaves loopholes through which dishonest dealers may escape. If there is a general classification and grading adopted the managers of the circles will be expected to make themselves acquainted with them and as a result the output will become uniform. Dealers know how this will benefit the trade. It will raise the standard of quality and put the industry upon a much more satisfactory basis.

Will See that No Short Weights or Measures are Given

New York, Aug. 18.—Trade customs, which allow buyer and seller to take liberties in actual weights and measures, received another setback recently when Commissioner of Weights and Measures told the delegates to the convention of New York state retail grocers that he intended to keep up his fight for net weights to a finish, and that he would go after the jobbers and manufacturers just as vigorously as those who deal with the consumer. The convention practically put itself on record as willing to back him in his efforts to enforce the law.

"Just because some dealers find that they have been able to shave off a penny in this trade and another in that, they think that it does not amount to much to the individual, but when it is considered that maybe 15 dealers in a like number of trades are taking this penny tribute each, it is easily seen that the total is much more than the average purchaser can stand," said Commissioner Driscoll.

"Giving short weights and measures because of these trade customs is only hiding petty pilfering behind a mask, and I propose to tear off the mask wherever I find it."

Compton & Montgomery, of Wetaskiwin, Alta., dissolved partnership some time ago. C. E. Compton has opened a new grocery store, and Mr. Montgomery is joined by Mr. West as Montgomery & West. They have a general store. Both places are new brick quildings and fitted up in the most modern way.

Another Decline of Half Cent in Pure Lard

Live Hogs are Down to $8.25, and an Easier Tone Prevails in Pork Product Market—Choice Eggs Show a Slight Increase in Price—Butter and Cheese Production Still Keep up—Honey Prices in Ontario Will go up if Beekeepers Maintain the Quotations They Have Mentioned—Poultry is Being Received More Plentifully.

The past week has witnessed a slightly easier market in some lines of provisions, live hogs and lard. In some quarters there have been lower prices in sympathy with the general feeling. The hog supply is general as far as quantity is concerned and as long as present conditions prevail the market will hardly be expected to soar.

The production of butter, eggs and cheese continues steady and so far there has been no falling off. Prices are about stationary, although for select eggs a slightly higher price is offered. A report from Montreal states that choice goods are comparatively scarce. Grocers are beginning to lay in stocks at present prices and it would appear that the trade is not expecting lower prices.

The production of cheese is quite satisfactory and the August make should reach a good figure. The pastures are in good condition and the supply of milk is well up to the average for this season. The August cheese is considered about the best. Old cheese is practically off the market, although there are a few houses with some holdings.

Poultry is coming in more freely now, and the trade is looking forward to liberal receipts from the country.

Honey is also beginning to show itself and although it was reported that stocks would be light the feeling among the trade is that the supply will be about the average on account of extra lines. In the Toronto district it is stated that if the bee keepers hold out for the prices they have named the price to the retailers will have to be increased, as the quotations to the wholesale trade are practically the same as the latter extend to the retailers. The honey situation is interesting just now in view of the facts mentioned.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—Receipts of hogs seem to be better lately, and there are rumors of weaker prices in the near future. So far, however, no changes have taken place. Sales are better than they have been for some weeks past, and supplies are coming in freely.

A touch of cool weather now would give a decided impetus to all branches of the provision trade.

Butter.—Prices of butter in the country are firmer, and should be higher here, say the local produce men. As yet no change has taken place, but it would be no surprise if an advance were to take place shortly.

Receipts for the week show a slight increase on last year's figures, 14,436 packages as against 13,631 same week last year. For the season they are 249,878 packages as against 225,282 same season last year.

Receipts are keeping up remarkably, being 94,354 boxes for the week as against 88,786 boxes same week last year. For the season they show a decrease still, though it is a slight one, 1,024,021 boxes as against 1,047,471 same season last year.

Receipts for the week are 5,010 cases as against 4,482 cases same week last year. For the season they are 127,661 cases as against 130,218 cases same season last year.

Provisions.—In this market there has been another decline in some of the prices. Live hogs are down to $8.25 at country points and for local delivery bring $8.60. There is a fairly good supply of hogs throughout the country and recent deliveries have been large. There has been a slight reduction in backs, long clear bacon and medium hams. Pure lard has dropped another half cent. Those in the business, however, express the opinion that it will not be long until lard reaches a better basis. Trade on the whole is reported good. Compound lard is stronger.

It is expected that it will not be long until higher prices are asked by the farmers. Honey—The new stocks of honey are now finding their way to the market in fairly large consignments. The question of prices is occupying the attention of the trade. The beekeepers have placed their new quotations at practically the same figures as those which the wholesalers are receiving and the latter will be forced to move the prices up if the keepers hold out for the prices they have named. One local house has just received a large supply of new stocks and the prices it is quoting for honey in the comb are as follows: No. 1, per doz., $2.50; No. 2, $2.25, and No. 3, $2. The stock that they are selling in glasses ranges from $1 to $1.50 and $1.80 per dozen. It is good-looking honey and is but the first shipment. Butter—The butter market is firm this week, because supplies have dropped off considerably. The jobbing price for creamery is 25c; No. 1 dairy being 22c. The limited supply is only temporary, as the pastures are improving.

Eggs—Eggs are jobbing at 21c just now, while the old stuff is being cleared out. A higher price on fresh-laid is soon to be quoted.

Cheese—The Manitoba cheese is having a good sale, but the quality is not so good as the Ontario product. The distribution throughout the west is heavy just now, and shipments from the east are heavy. Ontario cheese is 13½c; Manitoba jobs at 12c.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

Although for many years E. W. Gillett Co. have had a resident representative in Winnipeg, and carried a large stock of goods in that city, it was not until quite recently that they decided to adopt a different plan in doing business, and have made a long term lease of the fine premises No. 173 McDermott Ave. East. This warehouse, which was formerly used by a concern in the wholesale drug business, is now in the hands of workmen who are making extensive repairs and alterations in order to make it suitable for the Gillett Company's business. Everything these days points to the fact that the larger concerns realize the importance of the vast business which is possible to secure in the west.

The Household Convenience Co., Ltd., Toronto, have introduced a "Selling Plan," which if adopted by the retail grocers generally, will certainly mean a big jump in their daily sales. The plan is not exactly a new one, but they have worked in three or four scientific points which puts it on an entirely new basis, and if given a fair trial, the clerks will unconsciously develop into real salesmen. In fact, for transient trade, their plan will make many new customers, by gaining their confidence, as the specialty this company is putting on the market, namely, "Wondershine," which cleans silver and gold, without rubbing, is a real honest labor-saving device. And, this new "Selling Plan" will take well with all the regular customers, and show that their interests are being well looked after. The fact that "Wondershine" is being well advertised, along the right line, and is sold on "the-money-back-if-not-satisfied" idea, should cause every up-to-date grocer to get in touch with this company. Of course grocers as a general rule do not handle silver polishes, but there has never been anything placed on the market like "Wondershine," and it will sell well through the grocery store. As stated in their advertisement, dealers will be sent the "Selling Plan" free by the company with all other information upon receipt of name and address.

A few years ago it would have seemed like presumption for any Canadian manufacturer to go into the English market to endeavor to sell his wares, but at the present time it is no uncommon event for the Atlantic steamers to carry large freights of Canadian manufactured goods to sell in the British market. But for any manufacturer to endeavor to do business with England, in the first place his goods must be of exceptional quality and the reputation of the firm must be first-class, the English merchant being particularly conservative in dealing only with responsible houses. Business done in England, however, is generally the result of a more or less vigorous campaign in that market: An exception to this rule is the phenomenal success the "Banner" Cold Blast Lantern has made wherever shown in England. A British merchant accidently came across a sample of the "Banner" Cold Blast Lantern, and so impressed was he by the superior workmanship and the many ingenious devices for facilitating the operation of same, that he sent forward an order. Since introducing this style of lantern to his customers, it has met with immense success, and the Allan liner "Virginian" included in its manifest a greatly increased order for these celebrated "Banner" Cold Blast Lantern."

Will Present Conditions Drop Price of Flour?

Conditions are Not as Depressing as They Were Reported to be—Total World's Yield Will Make up Any Decrease Experienced in Canada and the United States—If Deliveries Continue as at Present Large Dealer Expects to See a Much Weaker Market—Prices Unchanged.

Those who closely follow the wheat market from week to week are gradually losing that pessimistic feeling and are entertaining more hopeful opinions regarding the world's supply. Canada's estimated yield is gradually coming back to its first strength and there are those who place it at from ninety to one hundred million bushels.

A deficiency is looked for in the United States and Canada, but it is practically certain that it will be entirely made up by increased yields in other countries. Roumania, Italy, Hungary, Russia and other grain growing countries should make up the decrease which is likely to be felt in the northern part of this continent. Export demand has been increasing of late, although it is not by any means equal to the export trade that was transacted at this time last year.

A prominent flour dealer stated that in the natural course of events lower prices should be quoted for flour if the deliveries of wheat continued as at present. Chicago and Winnipeg grain markets recently lost ground, influenced by lower prices from European markets. In regard to the world's visible supplies of wheat, figures quoted this week show for the week a visible supply of eighteen million bushels as compared with eight million during the same week last year. There is a similar showing in regard to oats. There seems to be considerable grounds for believing that present prices of flour will not hold.

The market seems to be rather firm at present, but it is a question whether it will continue to hold its present condition. It is reported from Brandon that the grain men expect a drop in price, which will make the opening about one dollar a bushel at Fort William, or ninety cents at Brandon.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—Foreign demand has been steady during the past few days, and seems to be steadily on the increase. Most of it has been for low grades of spring wheat. Although prices are unchanged, there is a firmer feeling prevailing, and the volume of business is considered satisfactory. Storage stocks show a slight decrease over this time last year.

Crops in Eastern Canada Showing a Very Fair Average

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—The Census Bulletin shows that the conditions of field crops in Canada this year have been greatly modified by temperature and rainfall, and that between the east and the west it is hardly possible to make a statement of averages that will not be misleading. In the eastern provinces growth has been uniformly good throughout July, and the percentages of condition have been high for every crop; but in extensive tracts of the northwest provinces drouth has prevailed and crops are reported in every stage of condition. The northerly parts of these provinces have been largely exempt from the drouth, and there the per cent. conditions are high. It is difficult to indicate fairly an average of conditions for the East and West which does not take account of the areas sown, and these have been considerably reduced since the June report. The August report will give revised figures from which yields may be estimated.

In comparing the per cent. condition of crops for 1909 and 1910 it should be remembered that fall wheat, rye, peas, buckwheat, mixed grains, beans, potatoes, hay and clover and corn are principally produced in the eastern provinces; and spring wheat and flax mostly in the northwestern provinces; with oats and barley in nearly equal proportions in the two regions.

A Good Average Shown.

Fall wheat is grown chiefly in Ontario, and its condition for all Canada has been reduced by a relatively poor crop in Alberta. Compared with the condition at the same time last year, it is 84.63 to 76.53. Rye is 85.20 in 1910, to 81.84 in 1909; peas is 81.70 to 87; buckwheat, 87.64 to 86.15; mixed grains 99.91 to 87.23; beans, 84.43 to 84.33; potatoes, 81 to 92; hay and clover 90.87 to 73.79; corn for husking, 84.30 to 82.86 and corn for fodder 89.76 to 83. These crops, which are mainly grown in the east, show a high average of condition, affected only in a slight degree by reports for the west.

The average condition of spring wheat is 77 for 1910 to 84.57 for 1909, and of oats 79.57 to 87.78 for all Canada, which is substantially lower than the averages for the east. In the three Northwest provinces the condition of spring wheat is 62, of oats 58.62 and of barley 63.60.

The estimated yield of fall wheat in the country is 18,724,000 bushels, being 26.47 bushels per acre. The hay and clover crop is estimated at 15,190,000 tons, or 1.80 tons per acre, and of alfalfa 1.92 tons per acre.

It Must Be Regular

THE very best flour in this little world of ours, Brother Grocer, will surely lose you trade some fatal day—if it lack UNIFORMITY.

For Mrs. Better Half gets used to a flour as she does to other things, handles it in a peculiar way suited to its individuality. She becomes successful with it, you see.

But on a fateful day IRREGULARITY creeps insidiously in—failure follows—she changes from a flour which has changed her results, lowered her breadmaker's pride of product, which no cook forgives.

And you are left with a stock on hand, a lingering sale, and in each sack the certain germ of disappointment.

We would never ask YOU to sell FIVE ROSES, Brother Grocer, unless we made absolutely sure of this coveted UNIFORMITY in quality, regularity, dependability.

We employ at Keewatin no Jack-of-all-Trades. Every man must "stick to his last." The rollerman watches the rolls, the silkman his silks, and the packer ditto—each specializes, considers his work the most important part of it all.

Only a big mill, you see, can guarantee unvarying steadiness, only a big mill like the FIVE ROSES plant with its 10,500-barrel capacity.

That FIVE ROSES flour dominates all others in this most important selling feature, is our pride, our boast, our greatest asset.

Let it be YOURS, Brother Grocer.

Get a firmer grasp on your profits

Are you making money on your oil? Probably far less than you think. If you could ascertain exactly how little, you would be astonished. Remember that EVAPORATION alone may reduce gasoline and kerosene from 5 to 25 per cent. per month. Then reckon overflow, drip, spilling and overmeasure on every quart you sell, and even an occasional leak. These little losses combined easily wipe out your few cents of profit. You cannot raise the price to your customers and you cannot reduce the price you are paying for the oil, so the only way left is to reduce the waste and the cost of handling it; it can be done with a

Bowser Self-Measuring Oil Tank

With a stroke of the pump-handle you can discharge with absolute accuracy one gallon or any fraction thereof, directly into your customer's can, doing away with sloppy funnels and measures. The tank is absolutely leak and evaporation-proof. Your increased profits will pay for our best outfit in a year.

Wouldn't you like to sell every gallon of oil with as little tr uble, as clean hands and as sure profit as when you hand out a package of tea? The "Bowser" will do it. Let us tell you more about it.
